Offer of France to Mediate in Manchuria is Refused by Soviet Consuls Are Refused Passports

MOSCOW, July 23.—France's offer to mediate in the Manchurian crisis has been declined by the Soviet Government, which assigned China's refusal to re-establish the status quo in Manchuria as the reason.

The Soviet ultimatum of July 13 demanded that China, preceding any conference to negotiate their differences, should release Russians imprisoned in Manchuria and cancel "illegal orders found issued in that province, particularly the seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway."

TIENTSIN, July 23.—The Soviet consuls at Tientsin and Peiping were forced this morning to cancel their departure for Moscow with their staffs when they were refused visas for their passports by the commission for foreign affairs. It is understood the refusals were prompted by orders from Nanking on the ground that war had not been declared.

Preston. They are Carman A. Code of Perth, Dr. Wm. E. Murphy of Smith Falls, and Thomas A. Thompson of Ramsay Township. Dr. Murphy was the convention choice but this proved unsatisfactory and a number of his supporters walked out of the meeting.

Gustave Evanturel, Independent Liberal and E. C. Bertrand, both of L'Orignal, were nominated for Prescott county by-election. In Vaudreuil-Coulanges, Lawrence Wilson, Liberal, Gilles Mousseau and Emil Gagne, both Independent Liberals were nominated; Wilson was the former member but resigned recently and on the request of friends decided to again contest the seat.

BAD WEATHER FOR FISHING

Averages on the Skeena River Yesterday and Sunday Were About 45 to 50

Owing probably to the bad weather conditions, the fishing in the Skeena River has not so far improved since last week. It was expected that this might be the big week of the season, but so far the big run has not yet shown up. Average catches to the boat Sunday night and yesterday were 45, about the same as the previous Friday. This is pretty good fishing and neither cannerymen nor fishermen are complaining, but it was thought it might be better. Boats are still fishing off the mouth of the river as well as up the stream.

Tragedy Follows Wake of Bank Robbery when Man Killed by Shot

William Robertson Guarding Bridge at Telkwa When Rifle Swung Around by Boy Went Off by Accident and Killed Him

SMITHERS, July 23.—Tragedy has followed in the wake of the recent bank robbery here. At 6 a.m. today William Robertson was accidentally shot and killed by his son, Frank, aged 17, while they were guarding the bridge over the Telkwa River at Telkwa in connection with a bank bandit hunt.

Robertson was an old soldier and apparently was showing his son how he used to drill in the army. The boy swung the rifle around and accidentally discharged, the bullet glancing off Robertson's arm and entering the stomach just below the heart.

The father told the boy to get a doctor. When the doctor and son arrived the man was dead.

COST OF OPERATING CAR

Nearly everyone who is not driving a car expects to do so some day. That is why they are interested in the cost of operation.

The "life" of the average automobile is six years and nine months, while the average cost of operation, for a four-cylinder passenger car, is 6.43 cents per mile and for a six-cylinder machine is 8.40 cents per mile, based upon an average mileage of 11,000 miles per year, according to the American Motorists Association.

The "mortality" figure is based upon replacement data furnished by automobile manufacturers. The cost per mile is computed from detailed cost accounting records covering 800 typical automobiles, operated in various parts of the United States.

The largest single item in the composite "average" automobile, for both the four and six-cylinder machines, was maintenance, followed in both types by depreciation and gasoline consumption. Following is detail of the operation costs of the "average" medium four-cylinder type: Maintenance, 1.72 cents; depreciation, 1.39 cents; gasoline, 1.31 cents; tires, .64 cents; garage, .44 cents; interest, .36 cents; oil, .22 cents; insurance, .21 cents; licence, .14 cents.

The above figures are computed on a mileage of 11,000 miles per year, getting an average of 17.53 miles per gallon.

All people are good; most people are bad. Many weeds are really beautiful flowers.

THE WILD PIGEON

There are plenty of wild pigeons in British Columbia. Pigeon shooting is a sport enjoyed in different sections of the country. The birds migrate and do not always return to the same haunts.

The pigeons which are found in Canada today are not the passenger pigeons, flocks of which once darkened the skies, but which now are not even a memory. So far as known, there are no passenger pigeons left. All have disappeared. The one seen here is the band-tailed pigeon and not the passenger pigeon.

It seems curious that the birds could have been entirely swept out of existence when at one time there were millions of them in the country. It would seem as if there must have been some other agency beside the hand of man contributing to their destruction.

It is said that even those in captivity are no longer the pure strain and even stuffed specimens are rare and valuable. Pretty soon not a trace of the bird will be left.

The soul is immortal but there must be a soul and it must express something or how can it live?

UNEMPLOYMENT INVESTIGATION

Alberta Government After Conference With Hon. Robert Forke Will Take Action

EDMONTON, July 23.—A survey of the unemployment situation throughout Alberta is to be made as a result of the conference between the provincial government and Hon. Robert Forke, on behalf of the Dominion government.

The work will be done under the direction of a committee of three, composed of one representative each of the Dominion and provincial governments and the municipalities. It will begin as soon as arrangements can be effected and will continue probably over the next two months.

The situation, present and prospective, was considered at length in the conference with Mr. Forke, which continued Thursday morning and at which an agreement was reached as to the necessity of a complete survey of the province and the general plan for conducting it.

Fear Serious Conditions
That serious conditions will likely obtain next winter was fully recognized and in order to meet them it was felt desirable to find out as accurately as possible how many unemployed men there are. Information will also be taken as to where these men have come from, how long they have been in Canada, how or by whom they were brought out, what are their occupations and other personal records. It is intended to make the survey as thorough as possible, covering not only the cities and towns but the agricultural communities.

Reports submitted by Hon. George Hoadley and other provincial ministers went to show that there are enough available harvesters now in the province, outside of the men who will be brought in from elsewhere on the direct request of farmers, to take care of the crop, and while the government will acquiesce in the recruiting of harvest help of the latter type, representing in most cases, the employment of men who have worked with individual farmers in previous years, it will not take any hand in bringing in other harvesters as a government activity.

MARGALICE WILL SOON BE READY FOR FISHING

Opened Below Water Line on Port Side When She Struck in Kaisun Harbor

When the Margalice hit the logs in Kaisun Harbor on the west coast of Moresby Island she opened below the water line on the port side and that caused her to sink. Just now she is in drydock being repaired and it is expected that before the end of the week she will be again ready to go to the banks for another haul of halibut.

LAZY ZEPHYRS NOT REAL WIND

Regina Objects to Implication That Eighty Miles an Hour Reached

(Edmonton Bulletin)

The Regina Leader rises to remark that if the Bulletin meant to suggest, or to imply, or to infer, or to hint, that the wind ever blows "80 miles an hour" in that city, this paper is guilty of a terminological inexactitude. And further explains: "Down here at Regina if we get a zephyr trailing its lazy way across the land at 20 miles an hour we are surprised. If it gets up to 30 miles an hour it becomes a subject of general conversation, and if by any chance it increases to 35 miles an hour the clothes are taken in off the line, the barn doors are locked, and the folks retire to the house and call off all labor for the day."

Disclaimer accepted, of course, face value, and in accord with the best constitutional procedure. Merely observing in passing, however, that Shakespeare somewhere alludes to a lady "who doth protest too much," and seems to have thought there was a reason for her getting the wind up so readily. Why should the Leader ever have suspected that a general allusion of the kind might by any stretch of imagination be supposed to refer to Pile o' Bones Creek? And, by the way, that playful breeze which a few years ago wrecked a Regina church, blew a hotel to smithereens, and scattered parts of the business and residential landscape all over the landscape, must have had quite a punch for a 30 or 35-mile zephyr.

MEN'S MODE OF DRESS MAY BE CHANGED YET

Reform Party May Soon Be Organized for More Hygienic Attire

LONDON, July 23.—In connection with the movement for reform in men's dress, which is sponsored by Dean Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral; Dr. C. W. Saleeby, president of the Sunlight League; Guy Kendall, head master of University of College School, London; Dr. Alfred C. Jordan, Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and London Medical Society, and a number of other prominent people of London, a recent discussion was held in which the following points were made clear:

There was no desire to confine reform to any particular fashion, but to eliminate the unhygienic features of existing clothes. On the medical side the question resolved itself into finding something less heavy and restricted than the present dress. The first necessity was the removal of the collar stud, which prevented ventilation. If a man felt the heat to be uncomfortable he could not take off his coat in the street or in a drawing room because the waistcoat was not a beautiful object to look at. Nor could he remove his waistcoat, because his braces were by no means aesthetic. Could anything be imagined more ugly than a pair of trousers? Tennis trousers were absolutely indefensible. Women's tennis attire was much more hygienic than that of men, for whom shorts might easily be adopted.

Dr. Jordan said that his own preference for ordinary outdoor wear was shorts, with a soft collar and open neck. He thought the "hotted shirt" for evening wear would have to go eventually. It was difficult for a male dancer to keep cool in evening dress. An alternative might be knee breeches and buckled shoes, with silk stockings, and a short-sleeved or a sleeveless jacket, with an artificial silk shirt and loose open neck or a loose tie under a soft collar. Such fashions had been tried in London, but they had to be introduced as fancy dress. It would be essential to make the evening suits which he suggested in good material or the effect would be unacceptable. There need be no difficulty about the braces, for the waist line of the breeches could be made to fit the figure so perfectly that braces would be unnecessary.

WOOD FOR RAYON INDUSTRY

Canada supplies over 50 per cent of the cellulose required throughout the world for the manufacture of rayon by the viscose process. The viscose process, in turn is responsible for 80 per cent of the world's production of artificial silk.

FASHION FANCIES

Three charming frock suitable for afternoons. See how the new Bertha collar balances the fullness of the skirt, in Number one and the effective broad trimming on Number three. The dark deep edging contrasts most pleasingly with the light printed material of the dress itself.

Demonstrated here is Dame Fashion's latest in styles for ladies coats as now being shown by the exclusive modistes. The five styles shown here are all different, yet all are the newest. The Bertha collar is effective in coats as well.

Here are illustrated the very latest in afternoon dresses, or for that matter suitable for every occasion. The circular flounce edged with contrasting material and the low waist sash makes a charming pattern. This model sets off the straight lines of the others.

CHEMISTRY IN CONNECTION WITH BIOLOGY

Scottish Savant Reads Paper at Meeting of British Association at Capetown

CAPETOWN, South Africa, July 23.—At the meeting today of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Professor George Barger, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S., of Edinburgh, Scotland, president of the department of chemistry, delivered an address on the subject "The Relation of Organic Chemistry to Biology."

Professor Barger opened his address by dealing at length with the early difficulties of the chemical investigation of organic matter. Acids, he intimated, were available only in comparatively recent times. Thus in 1770 only four acids were known in pure form and the number increased slowly. Among the names most worthy of remark in this regard were those of Lavoisier Scheele, Black, Berzelius and Gay-Lussac. The Professor went on to explain the gradual increase in the connection between chemistry and biology having origin in the fact that most physicians had a knowledge of the principle of chemistry and that many of the early investigators in biological chemistry were medical men.

Continuing he said, "The relations between microbiology and organic chemistry is beneficial to both. The list of organic substances which can be produced by micro-organisms on an industrial scale, mostly from carbohydrates, is a growing one. During the World War the water power of Switzerland could temporarily compete with the fermentation industry in producing alcohol but later the potato reasserted its authority. The same war period saw the industrial production of glycerol by yeast, and the production of acetone and butyl alcohol by bacteria, both from carbohydrates."

ARE BEATING TOM TOMS FOR GERMAN MAX

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 22.—The toms toms which have been beating for Der Maxie Schmeling, Germany's sensational young entry in the heavyweight lists, now have the ring of authenticity. They must have an ominous sound to the ears of Jack Sharkey, the Boston bomber.

The lithe and limber Teuton rocketed up from nowhere to smash Johnny Risko, the Cleveland shock absorber, and step out overnight as the reigning sensation of the heavyweights. Still there were critics who had to be convinced that Schmeling, admittedly a clever, cagy, stunning puncher, also possessed staying qualities.

Now he has proven that. No more could be asked of any 23-year-old heavyweight than that he tear into small pieces that burly iron man from the Pyrenees of Spain—Paulino Uzcudun.

Only one obstacle bars the path of the "schlinging" Teuton. The definite barrier is Jack Sharkey, who will attempt to block the Schmeling road to the heights in the Yankee Stadium in September.

On the records of the past year or so, it seems as though Schmeling has just what it takes to wipe Sharkey from the ranks of contenders. The Boston tar seems never to have regained his best fighting form since the night Dempsey blasted him from the road to another shot at the erudite Tunney. Sharkey has been an in-and-outer. His last effort, a close decision victory over Young Stribling in Miami Beach, Fla., was a decidedly "out" effort.

The young German, riding the crest of rising might, will be the favorite of most of the critics to lay his dazzling right hand sharply and frequently on the chin of the Boston battler, enough times, in fact, to remove Sharkey from the picture in abrupt order.

TENNIS CLUB PLANNING FOR NEW COURTS

Miss Palmer Chosen Secretary in Place of Eddie Smith and Two Names Added to Executive

At a meeting of the Prince Rupert Tennis Club last night, Carl Brand presiding, the resignation of Eddie Smith as secretary was accepted and Miss Margaret Palmer was appointed secretary in his place. Also the executive was strengthened by the addition of Messrs. Currie and P. Black.

It was proposed that a series of dances be held during the fall to augment the funds with the view to replacement of the present old wooden courts with cement courts. These will cost between $3000 and $4000. As the old courts are about done for action, must be taken soon.

ONLY ONE GAME IN BIG LEAGUE

Pittsburgh Smothered Brooklyn Thirteen Runs to Three and Kept Lead

NEW YORK, July 23:—There was only one game played in the major leagues yesterday and in it, Pittsburgh protected a scanty lead in the National League pennant race by smothering the Brooklyn Robins with a batting onslaught. The only other carded major game, Cleveland vs. Philadelphia at Philadelphia was postponed because of rain. The only score was:

Brooklyn 3, Pittsburgh 13.

GOOD WORK DONE ON THE BASEBALL GROUND

The condition of the Gyro baseball park on the corner of Sixth Avenue and McBride Street is the subject of much favorable comment. The place is now in good shape for the games with a proper backstop and the whole presents a finished appearance that is a credit to the club.

One Inch to Spare
When two runners are only one inch apart, it seems doubtful if it should not have been declared a tie. Percy Williams beat the Negro sprinter from Michigan University by one inch. It seems as if Eddie were hardly to blame for disputing the decision. Much as we all admire Williams and like to see him win, the margin is scarcely enough and might well be under dispute.

Model Yacht Racing
It is understood there is a movement afoot to form a model yacht racing association which will have charge of such races as that put on Saturday off the Drydock. If this is done it will probably be arranged that yachts will be built of similar size so that the race will prove more interesting than the opening one. It was a worthy effort but there is room for improvement.

SPEED RECORD MAY BE BROKEN

Death of Ray Keech Gives Setback to U.S. Ambitions But Others May Try

DAYTONA BEACH, July 23:—The recent death of Ray Keech at the Altoona track may eliminate America's hope of regaining the world's straightaway speed record at the annual international speed classic here next winter.

Speed followers here see Keech's death as fulfillment of a prediction made by Sir Henry Segrave of England that the present world record of 231 miles an hour which he set on the ocean speedway here last spring "probably will stand for at least two years."

At the time of his death Keech was the only American driver who had publicly announced the intention of coming here next winter for an attempt to bring the high speed racing laurels back to the United States. He had planned to build a machine capable of developing 250 miles an hour.

With Segrave's announcement that he definitely has retired from the automobile racing game there has been considerable speculation at this scene of super-speed triumphs as to just who will supply the next threat against the world's record.

Reports have been received that several Americans and a few foreign drivers are planning to build high speed cars but so far no announcement has been made concerning definite title contenders.

One of the outstanding figures in high speed circles and one who may take another shot at the title is Capt. Malcolm Campbell of England, who set the former record of 206.95 miles an hour here February 19, 1928. Since he failed to shatter Segrave's record after several attempts in South Africa last spring, however, he has made no statement regarding his plans.

Another possible contender is J. M. White of Philadelphia, builder of the 36-cylinder Triplex with which Keech established a record here of 207.55 miles an hour on April 22, 1928. It was the same car in which Lee Bible, a Daytona Beach driver, rode to his death on March 13, 1929, while attempting to shatter Segrave's record.

Herman A. Finche, St. Louis inventor, is understood to be experimenting with a high speed car equipped with a rotary motor. No word has been received here, however that he will enter it in next winter's speed classic. Others reported interested in the construction of record contending machines are Jave Doff, British driver; C. Villiers, English engineer; Harry Hartz, American speedway veteran, and J. L. Sockwell of Miami.

FISH STORY COMES FROM BOSTON CITY

BOSTON, July 23:—It requires no imagination to stretch this story. It is both fishy and rubbery.

The Boston fish trade was confronted with a mystery when a mackerel was brought in at the Fish Pier with a rubber band encircling its body, just below the head.

There were many theories concerning how the band got around the fish. One solution, as reasonable as any other advanced, had it that the band was thrown or dropped overboard from some vessel, floated along on the surface until the mackerel, swimming along, pushed its head through the elastic until it was firmly fastened around the broadest part of the fish.

RACE NOW FOR SPEED RECORD ON ATLANTIC

England, U.S., France and Italy May Scramble For Honors Across Ocean

LONDON, July 23:—London newspapers this morning featured the new Atlantic speed record of the German Atlantic liner Bremen and predict that an international scramble for speed honors will follow almost immediately with Great Britain, United States, France and Italy participating and Germany adding the Europa shortly which should do as well or better than the Bremen.

It is also expected that the Mauretania will attempt to demonstrate that she is capable of better than she has produced yet.

The Station lost their first game in the second half when they went down to the Drydock nine by a six to five count. This was a very tight game despite the rain coming on at the fifth inning, making the ball feel about ten pounds. The game went the full nine innings.

The Station scored three in the first, one in the second, and one in the fourth. The Drydock got four in the fifth and two in the ninth.

THE GREEN SHADOW

Thrilling Mystery Story in 30 chapters
by HERMAN LONDON

Synopsis of Preceding Chapter
Adele Castle is on the way to visit a mysterious Dr. Moffett, accompanied by the equally mysterious Miss Conway, who has told her Virgil Ellsworth Castle, her father, is in serious trouble and that Dr. Moffett can aid him. Adele has called up her friend, Paul Ainsworth, and told him to trail Miss Conway's car. Two items are featured in the newspaper: Mr. Castle was reading before he left for his office; the pursuit by the police of "Mr. Graves," who was associated in a reputedly shady deal which netted $10,000,000 and the latest exploit of the "Pleasure" crook who preys on the rich and then effects the return of his loot if they give one-tenth of its value to charity.

should have known that a taxi can't keep pace with this car."
Adele's heart sank. The magnificent sedan was taking on the ugly aspects of a trap. She drew herself up and tried to look unconcerned. A dash of danger would be rather thrilling. Besides, she might be able to help her father, and to that end she was willing to risk a lot.
"Not afraid?" Miss Conway asked.
"Not in the least."
"You trust me, don't you?" Adele merely smiled wisely.
"Do you know, my dear, I rather like you." The woman regarded her with an amused expression.
"Before I saw you I was prepared to despise you. I would be despising you now if you had walked blindfolded into what might have been a trap."
"Well, isn't it a trap?"
"No, but I'm glad you are nobody's fool. I don't like to blush with shame for my sex. Ever so many pretty girls are imbeciles. You are one of the exceptions, and that's why I like you. Do you like me?"

The blurred figure of a man stopped and dropped into a chair.

either forward or backward without great difficulty.

They made numerous turns, and now and then they seemed to double back on their course. Their progress was moderate, however, and she knew Paul would have no difficulty keeping them in sight. Soon the motion of the car told her they were crossing a bridge.

"Brooklyn," she thought.

She glanced covertly at Miss Conway. The woman's eyes were half closed and her expression was uncertain in the dim light of the frosted electric bulb overhead.

A low buzzing sound came. Miss Conway leaned forward and brought the speaking tube to her ear. Adele could not make out the words that passed between the chauffeur and her companion, but the latter gave her an enigmatic smile as she dropped the tube.

The car was gaining speed, and Adele knew they were leaving the city behind them. Faster and faster they went. Now and then she caught her breath sharply as they made an abrupt turn. Probably they were on one of the Long Island highways. Now they were racing, with the engine throbbing in ecstasy and the wind whistling gleefully around the sides of the car. Faster—and still faster.

And then, quite suddenly, the car fell into a more sedate rate of speed. Once more the buzzer sounded. Miss Conway picked up the speaking tube and listened. Then she turned to Adele with a faint, mocking suggestion in her light-green eyes.

"We've left him far behind," she announced.

"Who?" Adele asked, startled.

"Our mad pursuer—the young hero you commissioned to follow us." She gave a clear laugh that was approximately 1,000 miles.

The Locked Room
"Oh, yes. Everything I told you was true. I see you don't believe me, but you will. No harm is coming to you. Dr. Moffett will outline a certain proposition. You may accept it or reject it, or you may ask time to think it over. You will be perfectly safe."
Adele studied the face of her companion. She was intrigued, fascinated, a little thrilled, but far from convinced.

They were moving at a very slow pace now. Soon she perceived they were crossing a bridge, so they must be turning back to Manhattan. Apparently they had made a detour of many miles to elude the pursuing Paul.

"If that's true," she said in reply to Miss Conway's last statement, "why are you so anxious that I shan't see where we are going?"
"Can't you guess?"
"I suppose Dr. Moffett doesn't want me to learn his address. But if his motives are as fair and above-board as you say they are, why should he object to that?"
Miss Conway did not reply. Adele's contemplative eyes fixed on the nickel knob on the door. It would be a simple matter to throw the door open at one of the traffic stops and look out. It might be locked, of course. Or Miss Conway might be prepared against just such a move. Anyway, Adele decided to see her adventure through to the end.

The car lapsed into a crawling pace, then stopped. Miss Conway straightened from her reclining position. The chauffeur was holding the door open. Adele stepped out and looked up and down a block of old dwellings, searching in vain for some outstanding mark by which she might later identify the locality. There were still hundreds of such blocks in Manhattan, despite the insolent crowding of the towering apartment buildings.

As if to assist her, the chauffeur took her arm and did not relinquish it until she had ascended half a dozen steps and stood before a door. It opened almost instantly.

Miss Conway gave her a gentle push from behind, and she entered. The hall was dark, and she could not see the person who had opened the door.

"Straight ahead, please," said Miss Conway softly.

Adele conquered a misgiving and moved forward. The darkness and the strangeness of the house was a little disquieting, but she would not turn back now. With a little flutter at the throat she stopped before a door. It opened quietly and mysteriously. Another little push from Miss Conway so slight and gentle that it might have been a gesture of encouragement, urged her forward.

She walked in, advanced a few steps, then stopped. She heard the door close behind her with a click which signified that a bolt had slipped back into its socket. Though she knew it was not yet noon, the room was in total darkness. The windows, if there were any, must be heavily shaded so as not to admit the faintest ray of light. She braced herself against the gloom that pervaded the curious and depressing stillness. She felt quite alone, and she wondered what had become of Miss Conway.

She waited tremulously. The stillness and the darkness grew oppressive. Merely to verify a suspicion, she went back a few steps and tried the doorknob. As she had expected, the door was locked. She shook off the vague dread which the discovery aroused within her. She mustn't be a fool, she told herself. She had walked into this with eyes wide open, and now—

Emerald Light

The thread of her thoughts snapped. A little click had sounded somewhere. The most curious light she had ever seen flooded the room—a green light so soft and rich it made her think of velvet. And not only that, but it was evenly distributed over the room, forming no shadows in the corners.

She gazed about her in amazement. The room was furnished in the fashion of a library, with long and well filled bookcases at three walls, a huge rosewood table in the center, easy chairs with leather-covered upholstery, a few rugs of soft Oriental hues, several pictures and pieces of statuary, the whole immersed in a steady flow of emerald light.

What a curious light it was, so smooth and even, so soothing to the eyes! It was soothing to her nerves as well. She thought after she had recovered from her amazement, that the room had a pleasant, friendly, welcoming aspect.

"How do you do, Miss Castle?" She swung round and stared. And then she swung round and stared in the opposite direction.

APPROVED PRAYER BOOK

Archbishop Lang of Canterbury, who approved the findings of the convocations of both the Terbury and York ecclesiastical provinces by sanctioning the revised Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England, rejected on two occasions by Parliament.

Her startled eyes swept the green spaces. She must have been mistaken. She thought some one had spoken, but her overwrought nerves and excited imagination must have deceived her, for there was no one in sight.

"I am Doctor Moffett. I am very pleased to see you."

With a dull quavering cry she stared about her again. The time she knew there had been no mistake.

Out of the soft, green tones that filled the room a voice had spoken. It was a deep, strong, rather pleasant voice, yet it was dimly aware of an unusual quality in it, as if the speaker wished to disguise his manner of speech.

"Won't you be seated?" Mechanically she slipped in the seat beside her. The continued assaults on her nerves were becoming unbearable. But as the figure emerged, it was a shade of the verdant illumination on either side. She could scarcely distinguish the outlines, and her face she could not see at all. It seemed to be screened behind some emerald mist. Yet even in this dim and fragmentary way she steadied her nerves. It was weird by far than to hear voice and be able to see no one.

About half a dozen paces from where she sat the blurred figure stopped and dropped into a chair.

"Mind if I smoke, Miss Castle?"
"Not—not in the least," Adele stammered. It was a little unnecessary to hear herself reply to a question spoken by a man whose face she could not see. She strained her eyes in the direction where he sat. The outlines of the figure were a trifle clearer now, but the face was still shrouded in what looked like a green fog.

USE OF WATER POWER

The steady growth in the use of water power in Canada is shown by the facts that the average annual rate of increase in development since 1925 has been 10.7 per cent and that the development now amounts to $1,000,000,000 of installed turbine horse-power for 1,000 of population.

LONE TENDER FOR SIDEWALKS TO BE RETURNED

Just what to do with one lone tender for the construction of cement sidewalks seemed to puzzle the members of the city council last night. It was proposed that it should be returned unopened, but the name and address of the tenderer was not on the envelope and there was no way of telling who it was.

It seemed to be the opinion that sufficient advertising of the contracts had not been made and also there was a possibility that all the work would not be done this season. In any event, the tenderer can get his tender back if he calls on the city clerk.

COUNCIL TALKS OF SIDEWALKS

Special Meeting to Be Held This Evening to Consider What is to Be Done

TO APPOINT ENGINEER

Some of Cement Walks May Have to Stand Over Until Next Year It is Expected

The big question agitating the city council at its meeting last night was what to do about the proposed new cement sidewalks. While a number of bylaws have been passed providing for construction and there is no doubt of the need of the work, the fact that the bond market just now is not receptive was the chief stumbling block.

Alderman Collart sounded a warning. As chairman of the finance committee, it was his duty to guard the finances of the city. He thought the cost of marketing bonds would be too high just now and it would be wise to wait if possible until next year.

Alderman Brown suggested that as there was only one tender it should be held over for two weeks. Alderman Colart moved that the tender be returned.

Then the whole situation was discussed in a regular melee of talk. Alderman Brown showed how the sidewalks were unsafe at present and should be replaced. Alderman Rudderham did not think it was necessary to hold the work over and in reply to a suggestion that the sidewalks might be closed retored: "You can't close Third Avenue."

After Alderman Dibb, Brown, Collart, Rudderham and Macdonald had expressed themselves, some several times, the mayor suggested that the matter be allowed to lie over and a special meeting be called to consider the matter. This meeting, it was decided, should take place this evening at 7:30 when the mayor and aldermen will view the streets together and afterwards retire and consider what is to be done. At the same meeting they will consider the applications for a city engineer.
