Premier Mackenzie King Issues Quiet Warning to United States That Canada will Protect Herself

Delivers First of Series of Addresses in West, Commencing at Winnipeg Last Night; Defends Dignified Policy of Government

WINNIPEG, Nov. 2.—The nation's problems cannot be solved by the roar of rhetoric, Premier Mackenzie King declared here last night in the opening speech of his western tour. He was dealing with the tariff bill now before the United States congress and the proposal made last spring to keep Canada's parliament in session that it might be in a position to hit back immediately if the United States tariff should seriously injure Canada. Such a procedure would have been regarded as one of bluster and bluff, he said, and would have been provocative and not in the interests of international relations between the two neighboring countries, in view of the fact that no bill had yet been decided upon. It would have made Canada look ridiculous, he said.

ASK THAT WORK DONE AT RUPERT

Facilities at Drydock Much Better Than Those of Canadian National at Vancouver

At the meeting of the Board of Trade last evening, President Gonzales in the chair, it was decided to ask the Canadian National Steamships management to have the coast steamers repaired at Prince Rupert this year instead of being sent to Vancouver. The action followed the reading of a letter from the secretary of the Trades and Labor Council pointing out that as the dock at Vancouver was under repair, it would be impossible for the boats to be repaired there as was the custom.

Some discussion followed in which it was pointed out that the Prince Rupert yard had much better facilities than the company had at Vancouver and that down there much of the work had to be sent out to be done at private yards. The resolution was moved by George Nickerson and seconded by George Bushby.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 2.—Home Oil Company shareholders receive an additional 20% dividend payable November 30, President Hon. W. C. Shelly announced today. It was further announced by Shelly that, in view of the increasing revenue, it was hoped the company would go on a 25% dividend basis every two months in 1930, but final action had not yet been taken.

The city council last night accepted a recommendation from the finance committee that a sum of $200, provided for in the year's estimates, be paid over to the Boys' Band.

VICTORIA, Nov. 2.—Three new radio beacon aids to navigation are expected to be placed in commission before the close of the current year at Green Island, Langara Island and Entrance Island, according to E. J. Haughton, superintendent of radio telegraphs.

TEN ROUNDS TO A DRAW

Fans Think Townsend Should Have Been Given Decision Over Morgan

VANCOUVER, Nov. 2.—Billy Townsend, Vancouver lightweight, and Tod Morgan, Seattle junior lightweight champion of the world, fought ten savage rounds here last night to a draw before 4,000 fans. The decision was booted by the fans, the general opinion being that Townsend won by a clear margin. With the exception of two rounds, the third and seventh, when Morgan tore in and forced the fighting, the Vancouver boy set the pace.

Townsend fought a heady fight using a stiff left jab with telling effect and repeatedly landed solid rights to the head and jaw. In the sixth round, which Townsend won by a large margin, the champion reeled to his corner very much the worse for wear after weathering a terrific battering as he hung on the ropes on the verge of a collapse.

School Signs to Be Installed On Several Streets

As an outcome of the recent agitation for a sidewalk on Sixth Avenue from McBride Street to Hays Cove Circle for protection of pupils of Booth Memorial School from automobile traffic, the city council last night adopted a report from the Board of Works recommending the installation of "school zone" signs in the vicinity of various city schools.

The signs will be placed on Borden Street 150 feet east and west of Borden Street School, on Seventh and Eighth Avenues 150 east and west of King Edward High School, and on Hays Cove Circle at the corners of Fifth and Seventh Avenues, as well as on Sixth Avenue at Eberts Street. The cost of putting in the signs is estimated by the city engineer at $60.

Harry Dillon Got Decision in Ten Rounds

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 2.—Harry Dillon of Winnipeg, heavyweight, defeated George Cook, veteran Australian fighter, in a gory ten-round bout here last night.

The fire department had a call at 11 o'clock this morning to an old warehouse on First Avenue which is now occupied by Chipman H. Wells, boat builder. It was but a smoke scare and there was no damage.

Officials in Charge of Malkin Co. Ltd.

NEW MALKIN MANAGER

H. E. DeWolfe, who this week took over the management of the recently purchased wholesale plant for W. H. Malkin Co. Ltd., started as a junior in the sales department in 1911 and worked himself to the position of sales manager at Vancouver. He attained his present position through sheer ability. He has always been interested in community life in Vancouver and will doubtless become a valuable citizen of Prince Rupert.

SALES MANAGER

G. Laidler, accountant and credit manager here, began his business career with the Malkin firm at Vancouver as office boy in 1916. He has always taken an active interest in welfare work in Vancouver. He is a past president of Malkins Old Guard Association. Is fond of sports and is past secretary of the Lower Mainland Football Association and is said to have a wicked foot in a soccer game.

It will include a line from Hythe to Rolla, 50 miles, and from Fairview westerly 15 miles.

In addition, the Northern Alberta Railways will during the coming spring investigate traffic possibilities of extension west from Spirit River and from a point at or near Grimshaw to serve Battle River district. This will for the first time connect the Peace River block with the outside world by railway.

Hiam Arrives In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Nov. 2.—Recognition that the interests of British Columbia and the Canadian National Railway are identical and optimistic confidence of Sir Henry Thornton in the future of the Pacific coast are the chief factors which led to the appointment of Colonel T. A. Hiam to the position of assistant to the president, with headquarters in Vancouver. This explanation was given by Colonel Hiam, following his arrival today.

MACDONALD HOME

Prince Rupert-Peace River Outlet Movement to Be Started At Public Dinner on Wednesday Evening Next

At the Board of Trade meeting last night Alderman Collart reported for the joint committee of the city council and Board of Trade that arrangements had been made for a dinner Wednesday evening at 6:30 at the Commodore Cafe for the purpose of launching the Prince Rupert-Peace River Outlet Association which is being formed for the purpose of forwarding the interests of this port. He stated that the dinner was open to everyone who was interested in the project and he hoped all members of the Board of Trade would attend. It was hoped to make this an important event, as the Peace River outlet meant more to Prince Rupert than anything else of which he knew.

H. F. Pullen urged the importance of starting this movement well and said the dinner was set for 6:30, so that it would take the place of the regular dinner at home, and it was planned to close at 8 o'clock so that those attending could, if they wished, meet other engagements. It was expected to start promptly at 6:30.

On motion the name of J. H. Pillsbury was added to the Peace River committee, it being pointed out that Mr. Pillsbury had taken the lead in this matter for a long time prior to the meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Alderman Dawson Seat Vacant Till January Election

At Least Five New Aldermen to Be Elected at Next Regular Civic Poll

The regular fortnightly meeting of the city council, postponed from Monday evening out of respect to the memory of the late Ald. F. G. Dawson, was held last night. There was not much business before the board and the session lasted little more than twenty minutes.

The late Mr. Dawson's seat on the council will remain vacant until the annual election in January when at least five aldermanic seats will have to be filled, the deceased having been elected last January for a two year term. In view of rumors that one of the three remaining aldermen who were elected this year—Ald. Brown, Ald. Macdonald and Ald. Orme—may enter the mayoralty arena, it is possible that there may be even more than the five vacancies.

Federal Government to Build Section Through National Park

GOLDEN, Nov. 2.—The last link in the trans-Canada highway between Golden and Revelstoke is to be completed, Hon. J. H. King announced at a public gathering here. Negotiations long under way have been brought to a successful close.

J. A. Buckham, M.L.A., the chairman, read telegrams from Hon. Charles Stewart and J. M. Wardle, chief engineer of the National Parks, to the effect that the federal government would build to Canoe River and also from Revelstoke east to Canoe River. The stretch from Golden already has been undertaken by the provincial government but it was contended that the federal government should build the part within the National Park.

TRAFFIC CHANGES

Two Amendments to Street Bylaw Put Through at Last Night's Council Meeting

Two amendments to the street traffic bylaw were introduced and passed at last night's meeting of the city council and will come up again two weeks hence for final consideration and adoption. First of the amendments provides that it shall be the duty of the city engineer to place stop signs at the intersection of Third Avenue and Fourth and Fulton Streets and also at the intersection of Third Avenue and Sixth Street and that it shall be unlawful for persons in charge of motor vehicles to enter into Third Avenue at either of these intersections without first coming to a dead stop, thus giving through traffic on Third Avenue in either direction the right of way. The other amendment reduces the distance from street intersections at which cars may park from twenty-five to fifteen feet and allows cars to park right up to lane intersections.

CANNOT FORGET ROAD

Prince Rupert's road must not be forgotten. It is noticed that the road to Alaska is not forgotten, for it is being forwarded by American interests who wish it built.

We would not have it thought that we are opposed to the Alaska highway. It is, as we have before intimated, just a matter of precedence. The Skeena River highway is dangling along, while vigorous measures are being adopted to force the other to the front.

FERGUSON'S VICTORY

It would seem as if Premier Ferguson must have been giving the people of Ontario a pretty good administration, or they would not have supported him so strongly at the election this week.

These huge majorities are usually a source of weakness to a party and are apt to result in a swing in the opposite direction. A government with such a support is apt to become careless or autocratic and the result is disastrous.

REFUSES TO ALLOW LOGS EXPORTED

Hon. F. P. Burden Hints at Possible Pulp and Paper Industry Near Rupert

PILLSBURY DELEGATE

Matter to Be Followed Up by Committee With View to Securing Consideration

At the meeting of the Board of Trade last night, a letter refusing to allow the export of logs from this part of the province was read from Hon. F. P. Burden in reply to a resolution of the board.

J. H. Pillsbury suggested that Mr. Burden had not met the argument of the board and urged that the matter be followed up. He was appointed a delegate to wait on the minister at Victoria next week on the occasion of a business visit he is making to the south.

Mr. Burden's letter follows: "Your letter of the 29th ultimo, containing the resolution regarding the export of logs from your district, passed at a special meeting of your Board of Trade, held on August 27th, is received.

"This government believes in the encouragement of manufacture within the province. There is raw material in this province sufficient to support a number of new pulp and paper mills. Among the districts containing large quantities of pulp timber to which we are drawing the attention of prospective purchasers is the area along the north coast centering around your city. In addition to spruce, there are large quantities of hemlock in your district, which, as you know, is a species in great demand by the pulp companies. Cedar is also used to a limited extent and improved methods of manufacture indicate possibilities of increased use in the future. At present the pulp and paper industry is somewhat depressed and companies considering an extension of operations are naturally proceeding cautiously. However, you will agree that we are not justified in shipping our logs out of the province to the benefit of manufacturers in other countries, just because we cannot at present manufacture them ourselves.

"The Forest Act lays down the principle of manufacture within the province, and logging of crown timber for the express purpose of export is not permitted, except in isolated cases where small quantities are involved and special circumstances exist. Only a small proportion of the logs exported from the southern coast come under the export restrictions of the Forest Act and permits to export these logs are only given where it is shown to the satisfaction of the department that the local industries cannot utilize them. In other words, export is restricted to the salvage of those logs already in the water and for which no market exists. Logging operations in your district have, of course, the same privilege in this respect as those in the vicinity of Vancouver.

"For the above stated reasons I am unable to support your resolution favoring unrestricted export of logs.

"Yours very truly,

"F. P. BURDEN."

INSTALMENT SIX

Miss Brown made her way out into a street of gloom with a curious and altogether new pain in her heart. That gleam of unusual sunshine which had greeted her waking moments had long since passed away, threatening clouds were hanging low down and a slight, drizzling rain was falling. It was already so dark that one or two of the electric lamps were lit. After a moment's hesitation, she decided to walk back to her rooms. There was some work to be dealt with. She remembered Dessier's injunction to continue as far as possible her ordinary life until the message came.

Back to Routine

Miss Brown was a conscientious young woman, and, notwithstanding the dislocation of her life by her recent adventure, she remembered after an hour's reflection the fact that she had clients who were expecting her visit, and also that it was her duty to respect the earnest injunction of the man around whom all her sad thoughts were now centered, and carry on as usual. She bandaged her wrist, which was still painful, bathed her eyes, and before half-past 11 she had started off upon her round. She transcribed some letters for a retired manufacturer in Hempstead, received some copy from a young author in the same neighborhood, and in the afternoon spent a couple of hours in a city office. At 1 o'clock she returned to her room, weary with her round of labors, and with a sense of suppressed excitement which still possessed her. She made herself some tea, took off her gown which was a little wet, and made herself comfortable, stretched in an easy chair in front of the small gas fire. She considered the events of the day thoughtfully. She was by no means a nervous person or overimaginative, but she had nevertheless been haunted even during her recent pilgrimages by a feeling that she was never alone, that she was always being followed, always being watched.

On the bus going to Hampstead, a young man had picked up a glove with which she had no concern, tried to press it upon her, and afterward to enter into conversation. She had seen the same young man upon her return journey, but had avoided him by taking a bus for a short distance in another direction. It was quite possible, of course, that his interest in her was simply the interest of the ordinary boulevardier, for Miss Brown, notwithstanding her reserved manner and demure appearance and the fact that she neither invited nor responded to any advances, was still not at all unaccustomed to finding herself an object of some interest to the other sex. The young man, however, had been persistent, and he had been not the only one interested in her movements. In the city, she was conscious of brushing against a girl whom she had seen at least twice before, during the morning, and whose friendly smile was evidently intended to be an invitation to some sort of casual remark. She had allowed neither incident to trouble her. Nothing had interfered with the calm and methodical pursuit of her day's business, although to each of her clients she had hinted that she might be obliged to miss one day at any moment. Now that she was back again in her room alone, she reviewed the events of the day once more. The young man and girl might both have been coincidences, but there remained with her that uneasy sense of following eyes which had never left her throughout the day, which had made her glance uneasily around even when she had fitted her latchkey into the door and impelled her now, even in the seclusion of her room, to twice leave her seat and glance out into the narrow thoroughfare. Suddenly the thought flashed into her mind that the first part of her task was safely accomplished, that the precious book with the accompanying documents was deep in the vaults of the bank where not a living soul could reach it except herself. Espionage for the present, at any rate, was futile. The sense of oppression left her. She poured herself out a second cup of tea and opened the Times. She studied first with a new interest the headlines in the general news column. Then she turned to the leading article which she read word for word with an absorbed interest. It recalled to her mind the dominant note in the press during the critical periods of the war—grave but unflinchingly hopeful, always ready to recognize and emphasize the serious side of a terrible situation, while insisting upon the necessity for almost religious confidence. There was the same note to be traced today in the article which she perused so carefully. The headlines in the general news spoke of attempted strikes in all parts of the Dominion, of fervent propaganda by the men of the advanced section of the Communist world, of interference everywhere with British trade and British enterprise. The leading article, too, made no effort to minimize the perils of the situation. A coal strike was threatened in Great Britain within the next three months—a strike which in time was to spread to the railways, the transport workers, the wharfingers.
