DUTCH HARBOR, Dec. 14.—Reports say that seven volcanos on the eastern Aleutian Islands and southern coast of the Alaska Peninsula are again spouting flames and spreading dense sulphur smoke in the first general outbreak in that region since 1927.

It is believed by marine men to indicate that the island and coast contours are again being altered.

Woman Doctor Cheered in Court

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The bravery of a woman doctor was acknowledged with a burst of cheering from the crowded court at the enquiry into an explosion at Cadzow Colliery, Hamilton, when three men lost their lives. Doctor Nora Steele, who practices in the vicinity of the colliery, was summoned as soon as the explosion had occurred. She at once descended the mine and worked her hardest in the dangerous surroundings to restore life to the three men. At the enquiry the agent for the relatives asked permission publicly to thank Dr. Steele for her brave attempt. There followed a hearty burst of applause from the court. Dr. Steele, who had just finished her evidence, was obviously embarrassed, and stepped down hastily from the witness stand.

Wins Lightweight Title Last Night by Beating Al Foreman of Montreal

VANCOUVER, Dec. 14.—Billy Townsend won the Canadian lightweight boxing championship here last night when he defeated Al Foreman of Montreal in twelve rounds. Townsend had the edge in seven rounds, Foreman two and three were even. The local boy was the aggressor throughout, using a darting left to the face and right to head and body. There were no knockdowns. Townsend fought the best fight he ever had shown in his home town and he got a fine reception from the four thousand fans present. Foreman proved to be a clever boxer and ring general but Townsend was on top of him almost throughout and Foreman found it hard to penetrate Townsend's defence.

Park Your Auto In the Kitchen

An automobile that can be taken apart and parked in the kitchen has been invented by Engelbert Zackha of Berlin. Although slightly under regulation size, the car can carry two passengers. The body is constructed of canvas. The garaging process of this little machine resembles the parts of a jig-saw puzzle. First, the body is detached and folded into a neat bundle; then the chassis is dismounted. Each piece that makes up the frame is numbered and fitted. Steering wheel and post, wheels, motor and body rods each are separate units. The affair has three wheels and can be assembled in a few minutes.

Thrilling Story of How Halibut Schooner Wrecked off Alaska

KETCHIKAN, Dec. 14.—The story of how the captain and crew of the wrecked halibut boat Seabird fought for their lives against tremendous seas in their crippled craft, how two of their number were lost, and how they finally reached shore and safety at a fox ranch on the shores of western Alaska, is told by Captain Reitan of that vessel, who with Alfred Dyb, Ivan Hon, Martin Carlson and Olaf Evanson, reached here recently. Alfred Dyb was badly injured in the back.

About 10 o'clock on the night of November 11, while the Sea Bird was bucking a strong easterly gale off Cape St. Elias, a heavy sea carried away the mast and pilot house. Captain Reitan who was in his room aft of the wheelhouse and two men on watch, Louis and Elias Dyb, went overboard. Reitan grabbed something and managed to stay afloat until he was rescued by the engineer who had been driven from the engine room by the deluge of water.

The Dyb boys were seen no more and it is believed they were killed instantly by the impact of the forward part of the wheel house crushing them up against the partition of the stateroom. As the engines and pumps were out of commission all hands turned to with buckets and began to bail. It was while bailing that Alfred Dyb, the engineer, was knocked unconscious by a mast or boom which was thrashing around on deck and suffered a broken back. He is now at the St. Ann's Hospital at Juneau, where he was rushed when the Unalga arrived there.

During the night the wind shifted and set the Sea Bird close to Cape Suckling. The tide changed as the Sea Bird was about to be dashed against the rocks and the ebb set them out against Cape St. Elias. Meantime the Sea Bird's crew had succeeded in bailing her dry and started the engine. They made their way through the narrow channel between Wingham and Kayak Islands, and anchored in a cove on November 14, from which place they were taken ashore by a fox farmer.

United States Apologizes For Firing At Canadian Liquor Boat Shawnee Fifteen Miles Off Shore

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The United States Government in a note to Canada has expressed its "regrets" for the firing by a coastguard patrol boat on the Canadian vessel Shawnee on September 11 off New York Harbor.

The communication was handed to Canadian Minister Massey in reply to a request by Canada for information concerning the incident. The apology of the United States contained the admission that the firing upon the Canadian vessel had been "without legal authority."

Reviewing the incident, the communication charged that the Shawnee was a vessel engaged in the smuggling of liquor and was built especially to violate American laws. The coastguard came upon the Shawnee some fifteen miles off the nearest land, and after the vessel had ignored signals, the patrol boat fired five shells into her. The Shawnee escaped.

M'LARNIN KNOCKS OUT GOLDSTEIN

Jew Went Down In Second Round And Was Counted Out at Madison Square Gardens

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Jimmy McLarnin, the Vancouver Irishman, knocked out Goldstein at Madison Square Gardens last night in the second round. The young Jew fell flat on his back and failed to rise at the count of ten. McLarnin was knocked down in the first round and it looked for a short time as if the Vancouver boy was out, but he came back apparently unhurt. In the second round the war was started by Goldstein, who made a rush at McLarnin the moment the bell sounded. The effort was ineffective and fifty-one seconds after the round commenced McLarnin knocked his opponent down with a blow to the chin. At the count of nine Rubie rose but went down again immediately before the Irishman's attack and was counted out. The Garden was packed with the expectation that Ruby, the hero of New York's Ghetto, would win. The Jew was knocked down twice before the final count.

SEVEN YEARS OF FASCISM

The celebration of the seventh anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome took place on Saturday, says the London Times. The work accomplished by Signor Mussolini during the past seven years has compelled the reluctant admiration even of those who have displayed the greatest antipathy towards his methods. The whole face of Italy has been transformed under the influence of Fascist enterprise. New roads, new railways, new public buildings, new streets and suburbs forming whole townships, meet the eye of the traveller on every side. Nor are these signs of material achievement confined merely to the great industrial centres of the North and to Rome itself, the Eternal City, which has been changing almost beyond recognition during the past few years. The new process of reconstruction is everywhere in evidence, not only in the country districts and Tuscany and the Romagna, but also in the hitherto backward regions of Sicily and the Mezzogiorno, where the most striking advances are being made in sanitation, irrigation, and agricultural methods.

CAME TO RESCUE

The transformations effected in the political and moral spheres have been no less striking, though their real significance is far more difficult to estimate. Fascism arose as a counter-revolutionary movement opposed to the Communist anarchy which, after the conclusion of the war, was threatening to overwhelm the social and economic life of Italy. It was successful because it represented a really vital national need which was urgently felt by the vast majority of Italian citizens. Signor Mussolini saw clearly that order and discipline were the two things which above all others were necessary to the Italian people; and with indomitable energy he set out to establish them under the aegis of his own absolute domination. Having made himself complete master of the machinery of government, he deliberately destroyed all those organs by which non-Fascist opinion can become articulate. But it is clear that in doing so he has not contented himself with the role of a destroyer. During the past few years his internal policy, however difficult it may be to interpret its exact significance, has clearly been directed towards a single aim—the construction of a political machine which not only will outlive its author but will also secure the permanent domination of the Fascist Party and its ideals.

FLIES IN OINTMENT

The Duce has certainly succeeded in awakening in the minds of the Italian people a new national consciousness. But this success has only been possible because for the moment the ideals of the Fascist Party have been a genuine expression of the popular will. In the long run Fascism can only survive if it continues to satisfy the political and social needs of the strongest section of public opinion. As soon as it fails to do this it must either perish through internal disruption or be destroyed by some form of violent revolution. By suppressing all criticism and permanently depriving the Opposition of all legitimate methods of expressing minority opinion the Duce appears to have deprived his own party of the only means of judging its own conformity with the popular will and measuring the forces which it is attempting to control. Not content with sitting on the safety valve, he has removed the pressure gauges as well. There lies the danger. Apart from the shadow of popular election in the constitution of the new Chamber, which only deliberates but does not legislate, the whole of his internal policy seems based upon the complete suppression of any articulate expression of any form of public opinion—other than that of the Fascist Party. Such a Constitution may work well for a while, so long as the government clique is sufficiently intelligent to rule, like the Platonic guardians, in the interests of the whole. But modern history has yet to show the oligarchy which has succeeded for any length of time in living up to that example. Meanwhile the world will watch with interest the gigantic and original political experiment to which Fascist Italy is committed.

Don't Trifle with Bronchitis

There are few "colds in the head" that do not extend into the bronchial tubes and they often develop into bronchial congestion or bronchitis. Many cases become serious and last for weeks and there is always a tendency for bronchitis to become chronic and return again and again. For this reason you cannot afford to neglect any cold and should take quick action at the first indication that the cold is entering the bronchial tubes. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is at once the most prompt and most effective treatment you can secure. Dr. Chase's Syrup has long since proven its exceptional medicinal value and should not be confused with ordinary cough mixtures.

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

ITALY HAS A NEW ERA

Entry of Fascism Put New Life Into People and Brought Prosperity

ROME, Dec. 14.—That Italy during the last seven years has made enormous strides in her material development must be obvious to the most superficial observer. By sea and by land, in the mountains or upon the rivers, in the cities and in the fields, great enterprises have been resolutely undertaken. The mercantile marine has been encouraged, with a result to which the shipping statistics bear ample witness; and a passion for the sea, that "source of health and of life," has been deliberately encouraged in the people. Imposing monuments and town-planning schemes have embellished Italian cities. Afforestation is covering with trees the bare mountain-sides. The lamentable state of many of the roads is slowly being improved, and special roads reserved for motor-cars have been constructed. The railways, once a byword for dirt and unpunctuality, are run with efficiency. A network of air lines covers an Italy where, only a few years ago, civil aviation was at a low ebb.

The most far-reaching undertaking is the great scheme of land reclamation. Launched last year, it followed upon the "battle of the grain," the "battle of the rice" and other engagements, and, in the opinion of the war correspondents, is certain to prove an Austerlitz. Nearly 4,000,000 acres will, it is calculated, be reclaimed, and another 1,000,000 acres will be rendered capable of intensive cultivation. Nor is land reclamation alone involved. Provision has been made for works of irrigation, for the construction of rural boroughs, for the building of aqueducts of drinking water, for the construction of roads between farm and farm, and for the laying of electric lines. All these undertakings are giving daily work to tens of thousands of laborers, and will eventually provide a livelihood for hundreds of thousands of peasants.

Property In Trust

It has been reckoned that, when this new scheme is completed, there will be an annual increase of 20,000,000 quintals in the national production of cereals, as well as a large increase in every sort of agricultural product. Such an increase, if realized, should relieve the Italian budget of the heavy burden imposed upon it each year by the import of foreign foodstuffs. Hitherto a weakness of the Italian industrial system has been the small demand for manufacturers in the populous but poor districts. If the prosperity of these masses could be assured by scientifically controlled internal migration and by the development of agriculture in all its branches, the home market would be much increased in value and the economic gain to the country as a whole would be correspondingly great. The whole scheme is an excellent illustration of Fascist theory and practice. For the Duce has been made to understand that they hold their property in trust for the general welfare of the nation.

This reawakened patriotism, as might have been expected, has been accompanied by some exaggerated manifestations. Signor Mussolini himself has given offence more than once by the blustering tone of his utterances. Unfortunately, it has only too often been the more histrionic and sensational passages of his speeches which have been telegraphed abroad or have been re-echoed in yet more perfervid terms by his extremist partisans at home. One should not take too tragically Signor Marinetti's futuristic statement that every Italian is worth any 10 foreigners whatever. The exact sciences are not an indispensable qualification for membership of the Italian Academy. When one recollects that for many years the Italians had been suffering badly from an "inferiority complex" and that Italy's claims to be treated as a Great Power had been admitted in some quarters with a condescension more galling perhaps than a downright refusal would have been; when, moreover, due allowance is made for the Southern temperament and for the Italian love of adjectives in the superlative, it becomes a questionable whether Signor Mussolini has been so desperate a swashbuckler as he is often thought to be.

Italy needed to be pulled together with a strong hand. Neither Bolshevik propaganda nor "dolce far niente" could be combated by academic discourse of sweet reasonableness. But this tub-thumping is not the only manifestation of the revived Italian sense of nationality and glory. The best and more thoughtful Fascists have been insistent in preaching and practising the old heroic virtues of discipline, duty, and sacrifice, and in so far as they have succeeded they have created a more virile and better ordered Italy.

Rights of Man

While Fascism has been busy creating an Italy new from the material and moral standpoints, it has itself undergone, and is still undergoing, profound developments. It is unnecessary to recapitulate all the measures whereby the Fascist State has been built up and safeguarded. Its construction has involved the aboli-

News of the Mines AROUND PRINCE RUPERT

Woodbine Work to Continue All Winter; Mandy Enthusiastic Over Taku River

A second ore shipment consisting of twenty tons has just been made by the Blackhill Mining Co. at Stewart to the smelter at Selby, California. The grade of this ore is said to have run well over $100 to the ton. Accompanying the Blackhill shipment was six tons from the Melvin property which adjoins the Prosperity group on the north fork or Marmot River. The Melvin, it will be remembered, caused considerable excitement during the past summer with its extremely high-grade ore and the present shipment is said to have a high native silver content. Development continues to proceed satisfactorily at the Blackhill. Winter camp buildings have been completed and provide adequate accommodation for the crew. Tunnel work has proceeded to such an extent that it has now become necessary to install track and an ore dump car from the face to the dump. Pack horses taking supplies into the property are loaded with ore on the return trip out to Stewart.

There was a temporary interruption in ore shipping from the Premier mine last week when there was a break in the loading machinery at the dock. Repairs, however, were speedily made and the shipping facilities are now functioning normally again.

Development plans for the Woodbine property during the present winter include extensive diamond drilling with a view to determining as far as possible the extent and values of the various ore bodies located during earlier periods of development along the main level, according to a statement made recently by Hugh B. McGuire, who has long been associated in the control of the property. Mr. McGuire recently took over personal direction of affairs and declares that every effort will be made to determine as fully as possible what may be expected from the various deposits. Not only will they be drilled on a horizontal plane, but efforts will also be made to determine their depth by the same method of exploration. Drilling will be continued until late next spring by which time, it is hoped, to know just what to expect. George D. Leyson, an experienced mining from the Cobalt district of Ontario, has been placed in charge as mine manager and the drilling work is being done by the Jesson company.

Recent discoveries in the Taku River district have been the most important events in the northwestern mineral area of British Columbia in years. Dr. J. T. Mandy, resident mining engineer here, told the recent meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining & Metallurgy in Vancouver. He expressed the view that operators in the Taku area had accomplished remarkable results in a short time against the most adverse conditions. Dr. Mandy said that he attached great importance to the possibility of the mineral belt continuing from Taku River northward to Atlin district. This is ninety mile area, he explained, in which geological conditions are similar to those found in connection with the newly found ore deposits in Taku River.

tion of many of what are regarded in other countries as the most precious and elementary rights of man. Jacks-in-office, as it is confessed, have committed all sorts of outrages and misdemeanors. From the political and constitutional standpoint the most revolutionary measure, perhaps, has been the Law of December 24, 1925, dealing with the special office of the Prime Minister and defining his prerogatives and attributes. While Ministers still remain responsible to the King for their departments, they are equally responsible to the Prime Minister for their policy. The Prime Minister can, with the assent of the Crown, abolish or create new Ministries. He alone determines the policy to be followed by the whole Cabinet, and he alone may discuss with the King questions affecting the general policy of the Cabinet.

How far all this meets with the real approval of the Italian people it would be interesting to know. It is impossible to say what exactly is the strength of Fascism in the country. The membership of the Fascist Party itself is only 1,020,000, and if we add the members of the "fasci femminili" of the university student groups, and of other organizations mentioned in the Duce's speech of September 14 last, we arrive at a total of something under 2,000,000. On the other hand, judging by the results of the national plebiscite held in March, we should conclude that about 90 per cent of the population is in favor of the regime. The statistics in each case are certainly misleading. The most that can be said is that outside the party there are very many Italians who are convinced Fascists, and who would gladly join the party if they could; there are many, again, who, while having no particular affection for the regime, admit the indisputable benefits it has conferred upon the country and consider that, for the present, at any rate, its overthrow would be a national disaster; and, finally, there are many who heartily dislike the regime and all its works, but cannot and dare not express their true sentiments.

INSTALMENT XXXIV.

On the fifth evening after Lady Hannerton's friendly political talk to the soldier's wives, Miss Brown, making her usual pilgrimage to the station, received an unexpected and for the moment terrifying shock. The train had just come to a standstill and she was waiting on the platform by the guard's van, when there issued from a first-class carriage Mr. Serge Malakoff, the great master of music, and Noel Frankland.

will join me, I know. We're getting into our last stride, drawing the threads together, and it is difficult work. We've got the emergency meeting to tackle next week and everything depends upon their decisions. The woman at the sideboard mixed drinks for the two men and brought them over. Malakoff quipped his down greedily. "What will interest Your Ladyship," Malakoff remarked with an acid smile. "Is that we voted you what you asked for last night—5000 pounds. That should enable you to clear things up here properly and have a little in your pocket for Monte Carlo."

"General Maltravers, my lady," she announced. The general, a short, sturdy man with iron gray hair and bronzed complexion, entered with some clanking of spurs. Lady Hannerton gave him her hand, which he raised gallantly to his lips. From the moment of his entrance, however, she guessed his errand. "You haven't come to tell me you can't dine tomorrow night?" she asked anxiously. "Can't say that that was the object of my visit," he admitted, bringing a chair up to the side of her couch. "I'm afraid I shan't be able to manage it, though."

It—I'd leave the neighborhood for a time." She sat up on the couch, and her soft fingers stole invitingly toward his hand. He rose at once to his feet and stood upon the hearth-rug with his back to the fire. "I've told you in what capacity I'm here, Mona," he continued, "and we've got to face this thing out. There's a great deal of uneasiness throughout the camp. They're worrying me at the war office about it. It's gone so far that we practically decided to chuck our winter maneuvers. Some fellow's putting up placards all over the place, appealing to the men to elect their own officers, pool the pay and that sort of tommy rot. The man who's responsible for those posters will be shot on sight when we catch him, but there's no doubt that a lot of harm's been done. This talk of yours to the women may be exactly what you mean it to be—nothing but enlightened politics—but it's tending the same way as this infernal propaganda and it's got to stop from this moment."

"Her Ladyship left word, would you mind having a tray up in your room tonight instead of coming down to dinner, Miss Brown?" she said. "She's got two gentlemen—one her parliamentary agent, I think, and she wants to talk business with them."

Miss Brown was certain then that Providence was taking care of her.

"I should like the tray in my room, Susan," she confided, "but would you in a few minutes tell Her Ladyship that I am very much obliged for her message, and that in any case I was going to ask if I would excuse me this evening. I have a bad headache and I am going to bed."

"That would be all right, Miss, I'm sure," the girl replied. "These gentlemen have been here before and they always stay until the last train."

Miss Brown hurried up to her room, took off some of her clothes and looked in the wardrobe. Firmly established in her character of invalid she drew a breath of relief. Downstairs she could clearly distinguish Frankland's raucous tone, Lady Hannerton's occasional little peal of soft laughter, Malakoff's thin, sneering intervention. Her hands stole out to her notebook, which lay on the table by her side. There was a word or two of Frankland's worth recording.

Lady Hannerton had greeted her visitors with some indications of disappointment.

"But where," she asked, "is Nicholas Bretskoff?"

"The victim of an unfortunate accident, dear lady," he confided. "He will not be able to present himself in public for several days. He sent you his apologies and his profound regrets."

"The one man from whom I have been expecting to get a little fresh inspiration!" Lady Hannerton complained.

"I think that my work is having its effect," she admitted thoughtfully. "At the same time it is dangerous—even more dangerous than it seems. There are one or two of the women who are absolutely devoted to me, and whose husbands are entirely on our side, and I had a word of warning yesterday—one young staff officer has been detailed to go round and make inquiries about exactly what I do say to these women. I shouldn't be surprised if I got an official visit at any moment."

"Then, Thornton doesn't make it more easy," she went on. "The man's a fanatic. Courage is all very well, but he hasn't an ounce of discretion. I get the placards down here for him quite safely. They come in a Times Library box by the 6:30 o'clock train several nights a week. He calls later and collects them. His methods, though are perfectly terrible. He scarcely waits for the lights-out bugle. A few nights ago he pasted over a thousand of the placards all round an encampment where he was continually within fifty yards of the sentries. Even though he's only a reservist I should think he would be liable to be shot on sight if he were caught."

Malakoff rolled a cigarette with long, skinny fingers. His frequent glances toward the sideboard produced at last the desired effect. "Vermouth or sherry?" his hostess inquired.

"Vermouth—mixed, if you have both sorts—with a little lemon," was the prompt reply. Frankland nodded, accepted the drink and a cigarette which she lit for him. He passed his right arm round her waist and even accepted and returned the caress of her lips.

"I'm sorry, of course, Mona," he said. "It's been ripping having you here, but it's brought me right up against the red tape at the War Office. You've been jolly indiscreet without a doubt, and this comes from me as a pal," he went on dropping his voice. "There's a pretty well authenticated rumor that you've got some undesirable friends. Cut loose from the whole thing and get off without a moment's delay. Get over to Monte Carlo or somewhere and forget it all. I'm sorry to have you go, but it's got to be, for both our sakes. I'll get a bit of leave later on, I expect, but believe me, Mona—and now I'm saying more than I should do, there's a treble-headed secret service working now—home office, military and police—and they're no fools. That's enough, isn't it?"

"Yes, that's enough," she sighed. "By the bye," he went on, "who were those two queer-looking chaps I heard give your address to a taxicab man at the station an hour ago—fellow with a pointed black beard—looked like any sort of a scoundrel?"

Lady Hannerton laughed softly. "That was Malakoff, the greatest musician in the world," she confided. "The man with him was his secretary."

"Malakoff—chap whose music all the papers are raving about?" the general mused. "Don't like the look of him but I suppose a chap like that can look as he pleases."

The general glanced out through the rain-streaming window to where his orderly was walking his horse up and down in the dark street.

"This is my last visit, Mona," he said. "Sorry things have got to come to an end like this. I may get up to town on Sunday night for dinner—not at the club, though. We'll try a quiet place."

"Our farewell," she murmured. "I should love it, Henry—but why not at the club?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Frankly, I don't see why not."

"You mean that I am a suspected person?"

"No use beating about the bush. That's exactly what you are. They'll give you a final word of warning. You'll probably be watched from this moment until you leave. I'll send you a line about Sunday."

He kissed her fingers, then her lips and took his leave. She peered through the gloom and watched him pass down the narrow path and mount lightly, notwithstanding his fifty years, to his saddle. Then, with a little shrug of the shoulders, she threw open the folding doors.

"Dinner in a quarter of an hour," she announced to the two men.

Noel Frankland jerked his thumb over his shoulder toward the road. She answered the note of inquiry in his face with a nod. "Fins," she assented. "One of the women must have given me away. I have to be out of the neighborhood by Monday."

UPSETS IN BASKETBALL

Three Two Taxi Beaten By Elks; Navy Lose to Bankers; Maple Leafs Rout Toilers

Upsets in the Senior and Intermediate League encounters featured last evening's basketball games at the Exhibition Hall. Three Two Taxi had a substantial 19 to 6 lead over the Elks at the end of the first half of the Senior match but the Lodge Men came very much to life in the second period and snatched a 33 to 27 victory. During the last five minutes or so, the score was tied. The win of the Elks served to strengthen the hold of the Players' Club on first place in the Senior League.

Naval Reserve threatened to beat the fast moving Bankers in the Intermediate League as they led 13 to 8 at half time. The Financiers, however, struck their stride in the second half and made a lively match of it, finally winning out 18 to 12. The Toilers were routed by the Maple Leafs in the Ladies' League, the score being 29 to 17. May Ness accounted for sixteen of the Leafs' points and took a long lead on the individual scoring sheet for the league. Half time score was 11 to 2 for the Maple Leafs.

Will Mitchell refereed all games. There was hardly a handful of fans present to watch the games owing to the cold evening. Individual scoring was as follows:

Senior: Three Two Taxi—D. Gurvich, 8; E. Ratchford, 12; E. Smith, 3; D. Stalker, 2; S. Gurvich, 3; total 27. Elks—G. Mitchell, 3; M. Budinich, 2; W. Lambie, 12; J. Pierce, 12; R. Nelson, 2; E. Burdette, 2; total 33. Ladies: Toilers—N. Gurvich, 2; C. Irvine, 2; H. Sim, 2; E. Steen, 2; Stone, 2; V. Krievsky, 1. Maple Leafs—M. Ness, 16; S. Boddie, 3; C. McLeod, 8; E. March, 2; J. Walters, 1; L. Lowe, 8; M. Gilchrist, total 29.

Intermediate: Bankers—F. Burdette, F. Smith, H. McDonald, 10; C. Donaldson, 4; J. Scott, 2; J. Underwood, 2; E. Earlow, total 18. Navy—J. Pierce, 6; R. Nelson, 6; E. Smith, 6; D. Stalker, 2; R. Wicks, 2; total 16.

League Standings: The league standings to date are as follows:

Sport Chat

There are many in Stewart who would like to play basketball but difficulty is being encountered in the matter of securing a venue for the playing of games. Last year the Stewart theatre was used but the management of that hall is unwilling to have it used again this year for the hoop game. It has been suggested that the hall at Hyder might be used but the matter of transportation presents a difficulty. The basketball situation brings to the fore the idea of having a community hall of some sort provided at Stewart. It is the only town of any size in the north that does not possess one.

An Athletic Club has now been organized at Anxox as a subsidiary to the Anxox Community League. The formation within the club of groups for boxing, wrestling, floor work, apparatus drills, etc., will be attempted. Leaders for these activities are now being sought. The new Athletic Club has elected officers as follows: president, William Ring; vice-president, C. Karen; secretary, D. Wilson.

The Anxox Badminton Club held a very successful tournament recently with eighteen couples participating in the competition. The players were divided into two groups, the winners of the first group being Mrs. McRae and T. Cloke while in the second, Mrs. Smith and Mr. Goedbloed were winners. The club now has an enrollment of fifty-two members with the prospect of more joining after Christmas.

New life has been injected into the basketball leagues at Anxox and the prospects are now brightened for activity in the senior, intermediate and ladies' divisions. A readjustment has been made in the executive, R. Deeth remaining as president while John Lazorek has been named vice-president and George Kinglemann, secretary. It is planned to stage fixtures once a week. Hopes of an inter-town contest with Prince Rupert later in the season are being entertained.

Presentation To Cocoa Tree Club Fine Moose Head

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Cocoa Tree Club is the second oldest club in London—it was already flourishing in the days of Queen Anne. On Oct. 23 it was the scene of a pleasant function when in celebration of the presentation of a moose head to the club by the Agent General, both he and W. A. McAdam, the Secretary to the office, were guests at the monthly club dinner. The arrangements for the presentation were made by R. F. Cruise formerly of North Vancouver, and among other British Columbians present were Brig. Gen. R. P. Clark, and General W. Lindsay. Some excitement was caused during the day by the discovery that the moose head, which measured five feet across, was too large to pass through the club's doors, and a large crowd gathered in St. James Street to see the club window taken out and the head hoisted in.

WATERFRONT WHIFFS

Waterfront Business Quiet as Festive Season Approaches; Deer Hunting Concludes Tomorrow; Boatbuilding Activity

With the Christmas and New Year festivities impending, the waterfront and its diversified activities will take it easy from now until 1930 has been successfully ushered in, when work will start in real earnest in preparation for another year's labors. Just now are the dog days and, from this until Yuletide, even the hot stove parliamentarians will have other things and very important ones to attend to as the festive spirit catches their fancy. Therefore there will be little doing and the Whiff Man wonders, as news getting with regard to waterfront affairs becomes the more arduous, if he, too, had not better suspend activities like the rest of folks, particularly since the weather is so cold. But ye editor says that's impossible. News may come and news may go, but the poor newspaperman must, perforce, go on forever, no matter how rough the going may be and how barren the fields of his endeavor.

John Williamson has resigned as accountant for the local branch of the Pacific Salvage Co. William Gilchrist has now taken over his duties.

Capt. Paul Armour, J. H. Pillsbury, Dr. L. W. Kergin, Milton Gonzales, Robert Blance and Capt. J. R. Elfert left yesterday morning for a hunting trip to the north arm of Porcher Island. With such a formidable array of doughty hunts men in pursuit, it may be imagined that the antlered monarchs of that part of the country are going to have a hard week-end of it. The expedition is due back on Monday, the trip being made on the Pacific Salvage Co.'s power vessel Pachena.

If anyone would desire a few pointers about the draining of a gas engine in case of wintry weather, we would cheerfully recommend them to Alex Rix, the oil magnate, confidently hopeful that Alex now knows all about draining engines in view of an experience this week which high proved costly. However, he did not lose Donnie R., although it is questionable how many experiences of that kind she would tolerate. If Alex still thinks that the intake should be opened to provide circulation and prevent the water from freezing, no doubt, he also now realizes that the sea cock should be pulled out to allow a corresponding outlet. It would be about as easy to sink his boat, one way or the other and then he could go down and dive for it next spring. Just think of all the trouble that would be saved this winter.

Prevaricating Yachtmen
Sometimes we wonder whether it is any safer to believe a yachtman than a fisherman, by which we mean anglers. One of our prominent yachting friends returned to port this week several days overdue from a hunting trip to Porcher Island. He chose to explain that he had been weatherbound. Some unkind folk have suggested that it might, instead, have been engine trouble, due, no doubt, to the cold weather. In any case, the party got back O. K. much to the relief of all—even if they did get skunked.

The deer hunting season closes tomorrow after a fall which has been highly successful in this line of pursuit. The deer seemed very plentiful this year and quite a number of boys took the bag limit. Few admitted shooting does, although the hunting of these was allowed for the first time in many years. The season for ducks and geese will not close until next month. So far the birds have not been as plentiful this year as usual.

After a successful season's operations, the Otteson Fishing Co. has closed down operations on its cold storage scow at the drydock. Both halibut and salmon were put up by the concern, whose first season's operation here it was. The plant was that which went adrift and stranded early in the season in Hecate Straits while being towed for the B. C. Packers from Skidegate Inlet to Walker Lake, being purchased and reconitioned by the Otteson people after it had been salvaged.

R. H. Bedford of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station staff will be leaving next week for his home in Edmonton to spend the Christmas and New Year holiday season. L. F. Smith will go to Vancouver for the holidays.

After a three weeks' visit to Ketchikan and Juneau on official duties, Norman Freeman and John Kask of the local staff of the International Fisheries Commission returned to town on Wednesday night, having travelled down from Ketchikan aboard the American halibut schooner Attu.

D. B. Finn, director of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station, leaves tomorrow night for Vancouver, where he will spend Christmas at his home, proceeding from the southern city to Ottawa, where he will attend the annual meeting of the Biological Board of Canada on January 2, 3 and 4. It will be the first Christmas in six that Don has had the opportunity of spending at the family hearthside and the first in five that he has not spent on a train, travelling to the annual meeting of the board, which, in the past, it has been customary to hold two or three days after Christmas. He expects to return here about the middle of January from the East.

John Dybhavn, Pacific coast director of the Biological Board, will be leaving right after Christmas to attend the Ottawa meeting.

After New Boat
Capt. Dolf Prince, well known local halibut boat skipper, who recently sold his boat Scrub to William Miller of Porcher Island, left at the first of this week for a brief trip to Vancouver. It is understood his business is in connection with the securing of another boat to take the place of the Scrub. On selling the Scrub, Captain Prince said it was his intention either to build or purchase a larger boat.

The coast freighter Salvor was in port on Thursday from Vancouver discharging a cargo of coal and building material for Albert & McCaffery. The Salvor is now boasting the modern appliance of wireless equipment.

The Massett Packers fish packer Jedway, Carl, Johnny Martin, made a hunting trip down the coast at the end of last week, having on board Capt. and Mrs. George Fritz and Mr. and Mrs. Olof Hanson. It has not been learned whether or not Olof had the same success in catching the wily game as he is said to be enjoying in the matter of securing the no less wily vote in the federal election hunt.

The installation of a new 29 h.p. Rap (Norwegian) engine in the local halibut boat Nautilus is planned this winter.

The Ward Electric & Marine Supply Co. reports the sale of a 48 h.p. Gardner diesel engine to George Cook for installation in the new fifty-foot halibut boat he is having built at the Suehiro yard in Cow Bay. The frame work now being finished, planking of the new boat is now proceeding. It is scheduled for completion next March.

Untimely Death
Many friends were shocked to learn of the tragic death on Wednesday evening of Egel Hveding, local halibut fisherman, who hired a canoe that afternoon from the Pacific Salvage Co. in which he went across the harbor only to be drowned in the mouth of McNicholl Creek when the craft capsized. Hveding had been fishing out of here for the last two years and was quite well known. He was a brother of Magnus Hveding, who is now having a new halibut boat built at the McLean yard at Seal Cove.

Olof Anderson, whose intention of building was announced last week, has closed a contract with the McLean yard at Seal Cove for the construction of a new halibut boat.

George Frizzell's new power vessel Laura F. II left early Thursday morning, with Bob Frizzell in command, for a hunting trip up the Estall River, a party of friends being on board. The party expects to be away until tomorrow.

When the engine of the Laura F. II was being turned over for the first time last Sunday, a backfire occurred, setting gasoline in the bilge on fire and causing quite a blaze. Fortunately, however, prompt action was taken with fire extinguishers and the flames were soon quelled. The results might easily have been more serious than they happily turned out to be.

The McKinley Capt. Bernard Hanson, was the high boat of the Ketchikan halibut fleet for the 1929 season with shares of $3545.59 for each fisherman on board. The McKinley, during the season, landed a total of 520,000 pounds, making a gross stock of $62,419.40. The Pacific, Capt. Ole Larsen, was the blue ribbon boat of the Seattle halibut fleet, each of the nine fishermen on board receiving $4040, a total of 467,000 pounds being landed. The Sunde was second high boat of the Seattle fleet.
