Newspaper and Business

THROUGH its news columns and through its advertising space, a newspaper exerts a tremendous influence on the community. Good relations with the local newspaper can be a long step towards good relations with the community-at-large.

Most businessmen everywhere recognize the important place the local newspaper occupies in any community. Most of them have friendly relations with the paper which serves their customers and prospective customers. Some wind up with bad press relations simply because they try too hard in the wrong direction.

Yet there is no magic nor wizardry needed in establishing friendly relations with your local paper. It isn't an expensive proposition either. In fact, it represents probably the cheapest way of all of establishing a firm foundation for good customer relations. As in most cases of this kind, there are a few things that should or could be done and a few things that shouldn't be done.

Here are a number of ways in which you can derive the greatest benefit from your community newspaper:

Use its advertising space. There is no reason for suggesting this, other than the fact that it is good business. Your newspaper's advertising columns represent a tested method of reaching regularly all your customers and prospective customers with your sales message, presented how you want it and when you want it. The drug store, the bank, their neighborhood shoemaker and Canada's largest manufacturing organizations all advertise, for no other reason than it pays off.

Get to know the key men on the paper. And once you have met them, keep up your contacts with them. You probably will see them regularly at community affairs, meetings, service clubs—the very places you would want to be yourself as a community leader.

When you are asked questions by your newspaper, answer them to the best of your ability—and answer them fast. Don't hedge, and don't give half-answers. Above all, don't ever give answers which you know are incorrect. If you can't answer a question, say so frankly and say why you can't. If something confidential is involved, the paper will respect its private nature.

If you have something which you think might make news, tell the paper about it. See if they consider it worth a story. If they do want to run a story about it, help them to obtain the material they want. If they don't consider your idea worth writing about, accept their decision without argument or bluster. Newspaper people know their business as well as you know yours, and if they decide that a story hasn't sufficient interest to their readers it can mean only one thing—the story hasn't sufficient interest in the light of whatever time and space problems are facing the newspaper at the time.

Now a bit about the pitfalls—the basically silly things that people sometimes do which are bound to lose them newspaper respect. Some of these are bound up in basic principles. Others are just petty annoyances to a newspaperman.

Don't try to force a publicity story on a paper simply because you are an advertiser. That's the same as selling a man a car and then having him come back and ask for a refrigerator free. Your advertising space is something you bought because it was useful to you. A story in the news columns must ride on its own merits.

Never suggest that a paper use a story as a favor to you, simply because you are friendly with its personnel. As a dealer, you can't go around giving away your merchandise to your friends. Don't ask your newspaper to do it either. If you have a good story, the paper will want it because it is good. If it isn't good, the fact that the paper likes you won't make it want the story any more.

Don't be surprised—and certainly don't complain—if the paper handles a story somewhat differently than you would have written it yourself. The newspaper doesn't try to tell you how to sell your products. Don't get the idea that you can give the paper any pointers on how to sell its product, which is news.

Those are the highlights of a good approach to sound relations with your community newspaper. They all boil down to good common-sense practices, plus the realization that a newspaperman is just another businessman doing his own particular job in the manner which experience has taught him is best.—Merit News.

VICTORIA REPORT

... by J. K. Nesbitt

Mental Hospital Object of Pride—William Head Closes

VICTORIA.—British Columbians may well be proud of the Crease Clinic of Psychological Medicine at Provincial Mental Hospital at Essondale.

In a few years it has progressed so far and so well that the American Psychiatric Association has declared it one of the six finest of its kind in North America. That is no mean honor. Indeed, it makes the British Columbia clinic the envy of many in Canada and the United States.

The Crease Clinic received an association citation because it has "developed outstanding techniques and methods which have resulted in improved care and treatment of patients."

Two men in our Legislature were largely responsible for establishing the Crease Clinic—E. E. Winch of Burnaby, who hammered away for it year in and year out, and George Pearson of Nanaimo, who brought it into being when he was provincial secretary and minister of health and welfare.

Great credit, too, must go to Dr. A. L. Crease, retired director of provincial mental health services, for the hard work he did in getting the new clinic going. British Columbians, too, should be grateful to all the men and women who work there. They could earn much more in private practice but what they are doing is more important to them than money.

Every dollar of the taxpayers' money spent at the Crease Clinic is well worth while. Last session the Legislature upped the expenditures from $458,660 a year to $747,867 in the current fiscal year.

This is to the good. With the extra money, the Crease Clinic will be able to press forward, to prevent mental illness, which is so much cheaper in the long run than trying to cure it.

QUARANTINE STATION CLOSES.—Speaking of progress in medicine—physical as well as mental—the closing of the Ot-tawa government's quarantine station at William Head is a great tribute to the progress medical science has made in recent years.

Because communicable diseases are now brought under control before an epidemic starts, the quarantine station is no longer necessary.

The Department of National Defence has taken over the property, about 10 miles from Victoria, and it will be used in Canada's expanding defence program.

The William Head station was built in the mid-'90s when ships were arriving every few days from the Orient with thousands of Chinese. Smallpox and cholera were common. Often hundreds of people were held in quarantine for 10 days. There were many deaths. Great vats were filled with disinfectants and into them suspects were dipped, clothes and all. Often for days, a ship with the dreaded yellow flag flying, anchored off the station.

William Head looks back on an interesting, exciting history. Residents there recall the autumn of 1923 when the U.S. liner President Jefferson and the Canadian liner Empress of Australia arrived from Japan with refugees from the great Tokyo earthquake. They were housed at William Head for weeks, until strong enough to resume their journeys.

They were romantic days at William Head—days of the arrival of the white Empresses of the Pacific—the Empresses of Canada, Japan, Russia, Asia, China and India. Those days are gone forever—most transpacific travellers now go by plane.

So now Canada's Pacific Coast quarantine station is going a tribute to medical science that can prevent outbreaks of terrifying diseases before they get started.

Report from Parliament

By E. T. APPLEWHITE, M.P.

Quietly, without any fanfare of trumpets, when the House convened at 3 o'clock on Friday, May 4, Prime Minister St. Laurent made one of the most important statements ever made in the history of Canada. He prefaced his remarks with what I would call a masterpiece of understatement when he said he had a short statement to make that he felt confident would be welcomed by every member of the House. He told us that at 11:30 that morning (less than four hours before he spoke) Minister of Justice Stuart Garson had received final agreement by all ten provincial governments as to the terms of the proposed amendment to the British North America Act respecting old age pensions. Mr. St. Laurent immediately then gave notice of motion "That a humble address be presented to His Majesty the King in the following words: To the King's Most Excellent Majesty: Most Gracious Sovereign: We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, humbly approach Your Majesty, praying that you may graciously be pleased to cause a measure to be laid before the parliament of the United Kingdom to be expressed as follows: An Act to Amend the British North America Act, 1867. Whereas the Senate and Commons of Canada in parliament assembled have submitted an address to His Majesty praying that His Majesty may graciously be pleased to cause a measure to be laid before the parliament of the United Kingdom for the enactment of the provisions hereinafter set forth: Be it therefore enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lord's spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows: 1. The British North America Act, 1867, is amended by adding thereto, immediately after section ninety-four thereof, the following heading and section: "Old Age Pensions, 94A. It is hereby declared that the Parliament of Canada may from time to time make laws in relation to old age pensions in Canada, but no law made by the Parliament of Canada in relation to old age pensions shall affect the operation of any law, present or future, of a provincial legislature (Continued on Page 5)

As I See It

by Elmore Philpott

STUDENTS GET DORMS

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA.—We hired a car (supplied by Putnik) and went to see some of the sights.

"What do you want to see?" they asked us at the department of information.

I named a few things that they would be in a better position to show me than would our own Canadian legation people. So off we went across the River Sava to see some of the big construction projects of the new regime. Even before our arrival we saw proof of some of the mistakes—as well as considerable achievements of the New Yugoslavia.

Great concrete skeletons stand where the new Parliament Buildings and the vast International Hotel were to stand under the original Five Year Plan. You get conflicting explanations here as to the reasons. But it is clear that in the first burst of enthusiasm the planners of the new republic "bit off more than they could chew." They started many projects which they have been unable to finish.

But this should not distract from the fact that many great projects HAVE been completed. Some of these we saw for ourselves. Long rows of workers' apartments have been built—far too few for the desperate need here, but still comparatively more than we have built in the same time in our country.

THE MOST SOLID ACHIEVEMENT that we saw in this line was the immense dormitory building, which will eventually house 4500 students of the various university faculties. This project is far from finished, but some of the units are already occupied.

The buildings are of solid concrete—with boys in one and girls in the other and, incidentally, very strict rules of conduct. ("Stern priest—quiet village," the director quoted to us in this regard.)

THE ROOMS ARE BRIGHT, barely but sufficiently furnished. Each has running water. Most now have temporary stoves but eventually there will be one central heating plant for the whole immense layout—which is planned to include all university facilities. We examined some of the rooms and chatted with the students at random, naturally through out interpreter. It was final exam time, so we did not wear out our welcome. But we get the general picture: The student pays 350 dinars a month for the room—and the government makes up the rest of the cost, which totals about 600 per month. Fees cost the student about 1200 dinars per month.

The dormitory is itself like a "republic within a republic." Whatever the students need, they buy right on the spot through their own co-operative. Among other things, they run co-op buses from the dormitory over to the various faculties— which are in Belgrade proper.

THE DIRECTOR OF THIS project is a dark lean man, around 40 years of age, who also teaches history and geography. We spent some time in his room, then went upstairs to that of the Commissar, who is a sort of government supervisor for the whole works.

Contrary to what I expected to find (or I have a strong prejudice even against the very name, Commissar), we all liked this young chap. He is around 30, fair, lean, hard as nails—with one war-injured eye. He produced a bottle of Yugoslavia's national drink—plum brandy. I can't remember the exact name, but it sounded like "blitzo-fitz" to me. The Commissar explained to the ladies that his wife was away having a baby. He also produced some fine needlework which she had done and showed her picture proudly.

The director talked about their dreams for this institution. Even now, he said, the policy of the government is to make sure that no student is excluded from university on grounds of poverty. They planned later to send delegations to America and other parts of the world to see what they could learn to improve their own techniques. They would adopt any good thing—no matter from whence it came.

"If it is good it cannot be bad for Yugoslavia."

THIS COUNTRY IS A POOR country, in the sense that it is undeveloped and that the vast majority of the people are peasants, without any mechanical training. You can see right here in Belgrade that in some respects their plans are almost ludicrously over-ambitious, even before their break with Russian leaders, which gravely hurt their economy.

Yet, when you see in such things as this dormitory what they have done despite their primitive state—and when you think all across Canada of our universities, many of which have not begun to do, after generations of existence, what these people have attempted in a few years—you take off your hat to them. At least, I do.

Airlines Outgrow Their Hangars

MONTREAL (CP)—Airlines have outgrown hangars at the Montreal airport, and that posed a problem.

When the big 70-ton Stratocruisers began to arrive from trans-Atlantic hops they could not be rolled into hangars built to accommodate 40-ton North Stars and Constellations. The Stratocruisers have a wing spread of 141 feet and the tail is 38 feet high. They are 136 feet wide and high. Chief Engineer Fred British Overseas Air Corporation figured out a solution. A rail line was built in the field. Trays for planes were placed on it and a mammoth crane used as motive power to move planes in and out of hangars. The trick is to move in and out of hangars. The tail height? The hole above the door? The care of the extra feet?

Charles Rimmer Passes Away

Long illness ended early Saturday morning at his home in the Seaview Apartments for Charles Oakley Rimmer, a resident of Prince Rupert for the last ten years and former employee of Liquor Control Board of British Columbia and Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Born in 1891, in West Derbyshire, England, Mr. Rimmer came to Canada first forty-seven years ago as a boy. Three years later his family moved to British Columbia. He went to sea and served with the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services trans-Pacific vessels for a number of years until 1931.

Moving to Prince Rupert in 1941 he was with the Liquor Control Board before going to Wartime Prices and Trade Board in 1945. He was forced to relinquish work in 1946 because of illness and in 1947 went to Tranquille. After a stay of a year and a half there, he returned to Prince Rupert and had been here since.

Death, at the end, came quite suddenly.

A widow, Mrs. Blanche Rimmer, survives.

Mr. Rimmer was prominent in the Roman Catholic Church and the funeral will take place Wednesday with the rites of that church.

HOUSEKEEPING

FIRST VEGETABLES OF SEASON, CANNING OF ASPARAGUS STARTS

Asparagus is the first of the spring vegetables. Home economists tell us that it is the first new vegetable which starts the canning season and the freezing season as well. They also tell us that it is actually a native of Europe and was one of the favorite vegetables of the ancient Romans. Canadians eat only the spears of asparagus but in some other parts of the world the seeds are used to make a beverage resembling coffee.

Asparagus, once planted, is one of the few spring callers in the garden that shoots up uninvited, uninvited but always welcome. This perennial plant requires two years of cultivation before a crop may be harvested. Once planted it is a hardy guest which calls for little service, other than room service, that is, space to grow, with no competition from weeds.

Mary Washington or Martha Washington are the most common varieties grown in Canada. However, no matter which variety consumers buy they are certain points that should be watched. First of all, the asparagus should be a good green color, and it should be crisp and moist. Often, as asparagus gets older, the tips open up and tend to dry out so it is well to look for stalks which have compact tips. When asparagus is being prepared for cooking it should be washed very thoroughly, being careful to remove any dirt which may be hidden under the scales which are found clustered on the stalks. Actually, these scales may be removed if necessary. The tough ends of the stalks should be broken off because the butt end is usually quite woody. For cooking, the asparagus should be tied in a bundle and placed upright in a small amount of boiling salted water and cooked until tender about 10 minutes. If a pressure cooker is used the asparagus should be cooked at 15 pounds pressure for 1 to 2 minutes.

Any family would enjoy these tender green stalks when they are served hot with a cheese sauce, a cream sauce or with just a little lemon-butter. If any of the stalks are left-over they are wonderful to cut up in salads or they may be served on lettuce with mayonnaise. Asparagus sandwiches, either rolled or plain, are another popular way of using this attractive green vegetable.

Home economists say that the best start for canning asparagus is an early one, particularly for those who have an asparagus patch in their garden. Insure the quality of canned asparagus by starting early in the morning to speed the tender young stalks on their way into clean, hot jars or bright clean cans. Prepare asparagus for canning in the same manner as it would be prepared for cooking, being sure that the asparagus is cut in lengths to fit whatever type of container that is to be used. The asparagus should be tied in uniform bundles and allowed to stand upright in sufficient boiling water to come halfway up the stalks. It should then be covered and brought to the boil and allowed to boil for 3 minutes. After the 3 minutes boiling, the asparagus should be removed from the water and packed hot into the container. All the tips should be up, except the 3 stalks for the centre, which should be placed with the tips down. One-half teaspoon of salt should be added to each pint sealer or 20-ounce can or, if quart sealers are used 1 teaspoon of salt should be added. The asparagus should then be covered with boiling water, allowing of course, 1/2-inch headspace in glass sealers and 1/4-inch in tin cans. Pressure canning is the only really safe way of canning vegetables although some home-makers can vegetables in a boiling water bath with success. When canning asparagus in a pressure canner thirty minutes at 10 pounds pressure should be given pint jars or 20-ounce cans, and 35 minutes for quart sealers or 28-ounce cans.

Most everyone who is fortunate enough to own a home freezer or is able to rent frozen food lockers naturally, wants to freeze asparagus, for use throughout the year. Once the stalks are all washed, cleaned and cut in uniform lengths for freezing they should be blanched, that is partially cooked, in boiling water allowing 4 minutes for large stalks and 3 minutes for medium stalks. After the blanching is completed the asparagus should be cooled immediately in ice water. When the asparagus is completely cooked it should be packed and sealed in cartons so that no moisture will be lost during the time the asparagus is in storage. The cartons should then be frozen immediately.

ARTIST TOO—Commander (E) John Osborn, of Vancouver, a marine engineer by profession and an artist by avocation, has enough hobbies to occupy every off moment at sea. Engineer Officer of HMCS Ontario, Commander Osborn in his spare time turns from turbines, machinery and boilers to oil painting, embossed copper work and other related hobbies. During the Ontario's present training cruise in Australian and New Zealand waters he has been recording on canvas scenes of the places the ship has visited. las Frizzell, Dr. W. S. Kergin and Ray L. Johnson of Prince Rupert and Mr. Murdo Smith, A. O. Morris, Mrs. Clarence Michiel, H. Gale, E. T. Kenney Ltd., Herb Spencer, C. Newhoven, James Piffer, Lloyd Johnstone, David Bain, Lakelse Investments Ltd., Dr. Garland May and Vernon McMahon.

New Life for Premier Mine

Silbak-Premier mine could use 50 more miners in its extended operations in the famous old mine in the Portland Canal district, 16 miles inland from Stewart. If it could get them, said D. L. Pitt, managing director, who was in the city last evening on the Camosun returning north after a trip to Vancouver. There are at present 176 men employed at the property which continues to be the one important producer of the area.

Silbak-Premier is now getting the most of its ore through its own former workings from adjoining Premier Border ground. This year, it also expects to be handling ore from Indian mine, two miles to the north, which ore will be brought to the Premier mill by an aerial tram.

Mr. Pitt would not hazard an estimate as to just when the Indian ore might be arriving at the Premier mill. Tram construction still has to be completed and then mining machinery will have to be moved on to Indian and set up. The mining crew on Indian will be housed at and work from Premier.

Mr. Pitt admitted that 17-cent and 18-cent prices for lead and zinc were an important factor in keeping Silbak-Premier running. For many years, when in its own ground, it was a spectacular gold producer.

Recent diamond drilling on the Premier Border has disclosed hitherto unknown ore body existence on the 600-foot level of Premier Border, including also back into old workings Silbak-Premier ground. All of the mine further life is expected. Silbak-Premier is negotiating with contractors the immediate sinking of shaft to explore further possibilities of Premier. A level may be added this year to make available further grade ore.

In this modern age, nickel helps a lad to grow up strong and healthy. Cold liver ail, toothache, medicines and toilet preparations are all processed in equipment made of pure nickel or nickel alloys.

Today's bicycles are being made stronger, more durable — but lighter in weight — with the help of alloys made strong and tough by the addition of nickel.

In the dairy, the purity of milk is protected by the use of nickel-alloy materials in the pasteurizers, coolers, bottling machines and other equipment.

Nickel is on the job most everywhere

Hundreds of everyday uses for Nickel have been developed by the Nickel industry through a planned program of research. Today a large share of Canada's Nickel production is being diverted from peacetime uses into channels for preparedness. So the Nickel mine facilities, greatly expanded over the past decade, are again being operated at peak capacity. There is actually more Nickel now being delivered by Canada to the free world than in any peacetime year.

Copies were made to all of us so that we could have the exact wording of the law which has now been passed by the ten governments. I have many a time in my mind that cut in full for the purpose of keeping the law as it stands for the benefit of all aged persons for all aged persons.

Green of the official seemed very surprised at the P.M.'s motion. He referred to the indirect sales tax. He made it clear that the old age pensions would stand on its own feet.

He said that the government declared at the provincial level that they wanted the federal government to do it along with them.

Leading Chefs Reveal Secrets

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The "Gourmet Festival" in honor of the 2,000th birthday of Paris, spiritual home of the epicure, which has just ended here provided top-secret recipes of world-famous chefs.

Chefs of famous eating places each presided for a week at a time in the kitchens of the expensive Chambord restaurant and each disclosed his favorite recipe. Gaspé Salmon was the choice of the only Canadian chef, Fernand Schid of the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec. Here's his recipe for "La Darné de Saumon de Gaspé, Frontenac."

Chop fine a pound of mushrooms, a half-pound of white onions and a sprig of parsley, and saute them in butter until golden brown. Blend into them a half-pint of Hollandaise sauce, whipped gently until well mixed. Chill the sauce in the ice-box until firm.

Plan on three-quarters of a pound of salmon per person, and poach gently in a frying pan, covered with a pint and one-half of dry white wine, until the salmon is a bright pink color and the wine has been reduced below the salmon level.

Remove the salmon and place in a baking dish, covering each piece with a generous spread of the firm sauce. Bake for five minutes under a moderate flame until the sauce becomes golden brown. Serve in a hot dish with the poaching wine poured over.

FINE SOUP
"Germiny, Froid et Chaud" of Louis Barthe of Maxim's, Paris: Chop fine a quarter pound of sardines and saute gently in an ounce of butter. Add to this two quarts of rich chicken broth and bring the mixture to a boil. Add four egg yolks and remove from fire. Add one-half pint of heavy cream, stirring in slowly. If serving the soup cold, add a small amount of chopped chives.

Schoolboys Are Taught Woodlore

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (C)—A course in woodlore may become part of Ontario's public school curriculum as a result of an experiment in which 44 city-bred boys participated near here.

The boys, between 12 and 14 years old, came from Forest Hill Junior High School, Toronto, and Pickering College at Newmarket, Ont., to learn something about wild life.

From their headquarters at a nearby lodge they spent a week journeying into the woods, visiting lumber mills and hacking their way through the bush.

The students who came this year paid their own way, but it is the hope of C. R. Blackstock, director of health and physical education at Pickering College, that such courses eventually may become part of the curricula of public schools, subsidized by the province.

At Helmsley, an instructor with the Ontario lands and forests department, attended the "classes" and showed films of conservation, wild life, thinning and planting of trees.

Grange of Cafe Chambord, New York:

Boil three cups of milk, adding two ounces of butter folded into a teaspoonful of flour, and mix them boiling for half a minute. Remove from the fire and fold in 12 egg yolks and the grated skin of two California oranges. Add three ounces of cognac and mix slowly with a wooden spoon. Then fold in the whites of six eggs, beaten until stiff.

Grease a shallow baking dish with butter and sprinkle the bottom and sides with powdered sugar up to a quarter-inch from the top of the bowl. Pour the mixture into the dish, and put it in a hot oven for 15 to 18 minutes. When the soufflé starts to rise, remove it from the oven and scrape around with a thin knife on the inside of the dish. Complete the cooking until it has risen. Serve immediately.

DAILY SALAD BOWL FROM HOME
GARDEN RICH IN VITAMINS

Earliest Loose Heading Lettuce Matures in 60 Days

There is no better way to make sure your family has a daily dose of Vitamin A, calcium, and other nutritious ingredients which the "green, leafy" vegetables supply than by serving a daily bowl salad.

Famous chefs pride themselves on their salads. One uncooked salad may be served every day at dinner with a great variety of nutritious ingredients produced in the home garden.

Leaf lettuce is preferred by most chefs over head lettuce for salads. It is also far richer in vitamins. It comes in two types—the butter leaves, and the crisp leaves. The butter leaves are thicker, and darker green, with fine flavor, the experts say. Crisp leaves are lighter green in color, thin and somewhat brittle. Examples are Black Seeded Simpson, a butter type, and Grand Rapids, a crisp leaf type. Experts give first place in their esteem to the butter leaves.

Fast growing loose head varieties, such as Bibb lettuce are popular with many.

Romaine or cos lettuce, which produces oval leaves, standing upright, is highly esteemed by French salad experts. It is a good late lettuce, standing heat better than the leaf varieties. The leaves can be bleached by tying them up as they near maturity, but this merely changes their color, and lessens their vitamin content.

For summer leaves, chicory, also known as endive, is more available than lettuce, which usually runs to seed in midsummer. Endive may be had with curly leaves or board leaves. Many like the curly leaves best for summer, and broad leaves (escarole) for fall, as they endure frost and become sweeter after the frost comes. Sow both types in drills, thin out to six or eight inches.

Leaf crops grown in a similar manner, and much esteemed in salads, include corn salad, which is very hardy and can be harvested late in the fall; and upland garden cress, which gives a pungent flavor to the salad.

In the fall lettuce may be grown again; and the Chinese cabbage leaves are delicious. Chinese cabbage may be grown in the spring, with rich soil and an early start. But in midsummer, it always runs to seed. A late crop has no such tendency, and heads are easily produced in the fall, from plants started in late June.

All leaf crops demand rich soil. They must grow fast without check, otherwise the leaves are tough and have a bitter flavor. Plant food should be applied to the soil in which they grow at the rate of 4 pounds to 100 square feet.

Glass Boats Don't Break
GEORGETOWN, Ont. (CP)—Leonard J. Bell, who manufactures a line of small boats in this town near Toronto, has a novel way of testing the durability of his product.

Occasionally he tossed a 15-foot boat out of a second-storey window. But instead of going "crunch" the boat counced. They're plastic boats made of fibreglass bonded with synthetic resins.

The boats are strong, light in weight and low in cost. Bell has government orders for several of the craft to be used in the Arctic, because they don't even get brittle at 80 degrees below zero.

An important feature of these boats is that they're resistant to animals. Porcupines, for instance, delight in gnawing chunks out of resin-bonded plywood but they find no nourishment in resin-bonded fibreglass.

Another lakeshore pest that doesn't like these boats is the teredo, its worm equipped with a sort of brace-and-bit head which loves to bore into the bottoms of wooden boats.

Blackwood on Bridge
By Easley Blackwood

Mr. New has been a constant kibitzer at the club recently. He is trying to learn bridge and he has chosen a good way to learn. He is watching experienced players.

The thing that troubles Mr. New most of all is the thing that troubles most inexperienced players. It is the question of when to lead trumps immediately as declarer and when to postpone leading them.

If Mr. New can get this problem straightened out in his mind he will have acquired an extremely important piece of fundamental bridge knowledge. The basic consideration is this—do dummy's trumps have a more important job to do than merely following suit to trump leads from the closed hand? That is, will dummy's trumps be more valuable if used to ruff declarer's losers or to "stop" one of the opponents' suits while declarer is setting up a side suit or his own?

Today's hand is a simple example of a situation when trumps should be led at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Abel led the king of clubs and Mr. Masters won on the board with the ace.

There was no reason to postpone pulling the enemy's trumps before they had an opportunity to use them to win tricks. So Mr. Masters banged down the ace and king of hearts and was delighted to see the queen and jack fall.

He won a third round of trumps with the 10 of hearts on the board and re-entered his hand with the king of diamonds. Mr. Abel showed out of this suit, playing a small spade. This was no surprise in view of Miss Brash's rather silly double of Mr. Dale's two diamond bid.

Now Mr. Masters laid down the ace and another spade. On the second spade Mr. Abel played the 10. This puzzled Mr. Masters for a moment. Mr. Abel had overcalled in spades (not a recommended bid, incidentally) and it looked like he should have the king.

But Mr. Masters figured if Mr. Abel had the king he would have played it on this trick, so he made the right guess and ducked in dummy. Miss Brash had to play her now singleton king and five-odd rolled home.

Miss Margaret McLeod returned to the city yesterday on the Coquitlam after a week's business trip to Queen Charlotte Islands.

Fishermen Using Ancient Methods

PORT ROWAN, Ont. (CP)—Fishing methods of Biblical times are repeated on the shores of Lake Erie's Long Point Bay near here by fishermen who cast their seines into the shallow water and draw them into shore.

One end of their long nets is anchored close to shore, and the other pulled through a long semicircle by men wading or in boats.

The draw-seiners catch carp, dogfish, pickerel, perch, suckers, catfish, rock bass and sunfish. Although only the pickerel and perch are generally considered good eating, the carp are shipped alive as a delicacy for special markets in the Canadian and United States cities.

The carp are kept in sunken scows and transported in tanks. They keep in good condition even on trips as far as Louisville, Kentucky, but the largest markets are Montreal, New York, Toronto and Buffalo.

The fishermen begin their season when the ice leaves the bay, and end only when it freezes over.

Urges Care of Children's Eyes

LONDON (CP)—Short-sightedness in children is often the responsibility of the mother and the school teacher.

So says Ophthalmic Otto Rasmussen after a two-year investigation into short-sightedness among school children in Kent.

Writing in a trade journal, Rasmussen blames "overworked teachers who appear to have no time to clean chalk dust off the blackboard and even less time, with large classes, to write large, legible words and numbers."

Rasmussen says that thousands of normal-sighted children have to strain their eyes in badly-lit classrooms to see blackboards. They are then rushed to clinics unnecessarily "because they could not read illegible characters in semi-darkness."

Of 16,075 children sent to clinics, spectacles were unnecessary for 7,455 and of the remainder, only 2,231 were short-sighted. The trouble can often be righted by advising the teacher to seat a child closer to the board, Rasmussen said.

Mothers encourage short-sightedness by attaching dolls and rattles to pram and cot, close to babies' eyes. A child then becomes accustomed to seeing things at close quarters.

Recall N.S. Town Way Back

STELLARTON, N.S. (CP)—Three men who used every Belgian ruse to harass the Nazis in the last war are in this coal-mining town looking for a job.

Lucien Leferve and Jules Delaux are here because Arthur Tollbeck had a hankering to see his "second home" again. They are former members of the Belgian resistance movement.

Tollbeck, who lived here from 1905 to 1919, figures Stellarton looks good. He is a machinist and the smoke stacks and industrial hum remind him of home.

They are sure they will get jobs. Eventually they hope to save enough to bring their wives and families to Canada.

The Belgians arrived at New York recently on a small immigrant ship. They had originally planned to find employment in Montreal or in Quebec's gold fields.

But Tollbeck figured Stellarton, as he remembered it, was a fine place to go. So Leferve the barber and Delaux the welder tagged along.

During the war, they played a large part in deluding and sabotaging German troop movements. After liberation by Allied forces, Tollbeck served as an interpreter with the U.S. Army and later the Canadians.

"I think I will be happy here," says Tollbeck. "I speak good enough English to get around and my eight-year-old boy would pick it up easily."

"But my wife, I don't know. She doesn't speak English at all," he added.

Every member of the cast was word-perfect. Continuous encores prolonged the play to a late hour and the fine work of the pianist, Mrs. Fred Beach, made the absence of an orchestra unnoticeable. The cast was as follows:

Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., Hugh Taylor.

Captain Corcoran, Jack Brown, Ralph Rakestraw, Bill Mumery.

Dick Dead-Eye, F. McPhee, Bos'n, Reg Drayson, Josephine, L. Drayson, Little Butterfly, M. Howell, Hebe, J. Thornber.

SPORT SHOTS

Sir Thomas Lipton, one-time errand boy who became a merchant prince and great sportsman, was elected a member of the exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron in England 20 years ago. The honor was in recognition of his gallant but unsuccessful attempts to win the America's Cup with his great yachts. Sir Thomas died later in the same year, 1931.

International women's basketball supremacy was retained by Percy Page's Edmonton Grads when they won their third straight game over Wichita Thurston at Edmonton 15 years ago. Holders of the Challenge Trophy since 1923, Grads settled the issue with a 46-25 win in that final game.

Union steamer Camosun, Capt. John Boden, arrived in port at 5:30 yesterday afternoon from Vancouver and waypoints, sailing at 11 p.m. for Alice Arm and Stewart whence she will return here tomorrow morning to sail south at noon. The Camosun brought north the usual heavy freight cargo and a considerable number of passengers. At 3:45 p.m. the Coquitlam, Capt. William McCombe, arrived back from her voyage to Masset inlet points on the Queen Charlottes and sailed at 8 p.m. for Vancouver.

Woman Doctor Mother of '51

CROSSNORE, N.C. (AP)—America's Mother of 1951 is a hardy woman doctor who reared two children of her own and only the lord knows how many others from broken mountain homes.

The kindly, 77-year-old physician, Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, rode horseback as a bride into "God's Forgotten Acres" area of western North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains 40 years ago and found there a purpose in life.

By the sale of old clothes collected from all over the United States, Dr. Sloop financed a home and school in Avery County for mountain children.

As she brought the better things in life to this remote mountain region, she just as vigorously, drove off the moonshiners and the bootleggers.

She was not averse to raiding a still herself, if the "law" balked, and she fought sometimes almost single handed for better roads, schools and agricultural opportunities.

So beloved is she by the children who benefit from Crossnore, that just her appearance in a classroom or the dining hall brings a spontaneous outbreak of applause and cheering.

Mary Martin Sloop first instilled in the people of Avery County a respect for physicians, as she gently led them from the wilderness of self-medication with root and herbs and superstitions, to an understanding of the value of the then modern drugs and medical technique.

Dr. Sloop was named American Mother of 1951 by the American Mothers' Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation, an organization devoted to the welfare of mothers and children. She was selected from 52 nominees from every state, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Stone flew at the week-end to Edmonton on compassionate leave due to the serious illness of his young daughter. The officer in the centre is not identified. (CP from National Defence)

Swiss Cheese Maker Success

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont. (CP)—Swiss-born Walter Joss knows what puts holes in Swiss cheese. But he's not telling.

Instead he's making that knowledge pay off in the variety of cheeses, he now is turning out at the factory, north of this town, he bought six months ago.

Before long Mr. Joss hopes to increase his two-man crew to five. Soon he expects to be handling and processing 20,000 pounds of milk a day.

The 31-year-old craftsman comes from a cheese-making family near Lucerne, Switzerland. And his wide experience in the cheese-making field has caused him to discount warnings of "experts" that Swiss cheese cannot be made from Canadian milk.

At the moment he's turning out five Swiss cheese moulds daily, including Sundays.

MAKES OTHER TYPES

At the same time he also is experimenting with production of various European types of cheese — Italian (Gorgonzola), Dutch (Eddam), Danish (Blue) and French (Roquefort). These he calls the soft cheeses. The semi-hards, Dutch Goudas and the brick varieties already are being produced in limited quantities.

Cheese-making in Switzerland is a highly specialized craft. Mr. Joss said it requires five years of apprenticeship, three more with a master cheese-maker and a stiff course at the National Dairy School before a man can receive a certificate.

Port Essington Woman Passes

Esther May Spalding, 25-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Spalding of Port Essington, passed away Saturday in the Prince Rupert General Hospital. She had been in the hospital for only a brief period. Interment will be made in the city on Wednesday.

cheese-maker, at the moment is assisting Mr. Joss. Three more are expected to arrive shortly, Mr. Joss' younger brother, another Swiss and a German.

Incidentally, the Joss family may try producing Yogurt one of these days.

Mrs. Joss says it's a food which they make for their own use every day of which they are fond. If all goes well it may be included in their production program.

Intrigued By Windows

Capt. William Koughan, harbor master, had no news this morning, but when a man walked into the room from on outside window, almost as nonchalantly as walking through a door, Capt. Koughan was ready with a story.

Presence of the man was all right—he was the window cleaner, but he didn't stay long enough to give his name. It was in the type of window that Capt. Koughan and the reporter became interested.

All the office windows in the Federal Building are designed so that the lower and upper halves slide open and shut in a parallel manner. They can also be removed entirely from their casing with little effort.

"A window cleaner's dream," said Capt. Koughan, "I've never seen windows of this style before." He expressed the desire to have such a feature in the new home he is building but disregarded the possibility immediately when he thought over what it might cost.

Another valuable feature of the windows is the facility with which furniture could be moved in and out as both panes can be removed with ease. For ventilation, Capt. Koughan demonstrated how a draft-free opening was obtained by just pulling out the window a few inches.

A heavy lock on the inside makes it impossible for the windows to be "jimmied."
