Neil Gething, Peace River Pioneer And Booster For Prince Rupert, Succumbs

Neil Gething, a pioneer mining man and industrialist, who had high hopes for the future of Prince Rupert, was buried Thursday last at Hudson's Hope. The following sketch of his career was written for the Prince Rupert Daily News by George M. Murray, M.P., Cariboo, a friend and neighbor of the late Mr. Gething.—Editor.

Neil Gething, who gave his name to Gething Mountain, who knew the mining trails of British Columbia well, was killed New Year's Eve at Hudson's Hope while watering a horse. He was in his eighty-fifth year, came of Welsh stock and was a native of Battle Creek, Mich.

Mr. Gething was a pioneer of the Montana, Nevada, Kootenay and Cariboo mining camps. He was a candidate in Prince George's first mayoralty election. The legendary John Houston, editor and politician, first mayor of Nelson, was a pal and partner of Gething. Colonel Lowery, editor of "Lowery's Float" and the "Greenwood Ledger," was another old friend. When the Grand Trunk Pacific was building to Prince Rupert, Gething bought the land which formed the original townsite of Prince George and sold the area to the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Prince Rupert And Japan

THE FACT that a seven-million-bushel deal has been made with Japan for the shipment of Peace River wheat to that country causes Page Rideout, who still campaigns wherever and whenever possible for Prince Rupert as the logical outlet for the Peace River country, to deplore with considerable effect the fact that that grain should have to be moved by circuitous routes via Edmonton to the port of Vancouver. Mr. Rideout's article in the Daily News yesterday may have been a lengthy affair but it made out an effective case, with some logical deductions and many facts and figures, in the campaign for Prince Rupert as the outlet for the Peace River. It also brings up the question again as to why Prince Rupert, 500 miles closer to the Orient than Vancouver and possessing a large grain elevator with all port facilities, should not be used for the shipping of this northern British Columbia wheat.

Prince Rupert, itself, content with its new prosperity, seems to have been pretty indifferent of late to such things as the Peace River outlet, idle elevator, inactive shipbuilding plant and such things. It does not speak too well for our own initiative and energy when people from the outside like Page Rideout are the only ones to raise their voices and keep such questions alive.

CELANESE PUBLICITY

A BIG advertisement which appears in important newspapers throughout the United States (two, Chicago Tribune and Wall Street Journal of New York, have been received by the editor) is centred with a map of North America. On the map are shown two cities—Prince Rupert, British Columbia, and Bishop, Texas. Background of the advertisement is a panorama of Port Edward's Porpoise Harbor showing the Columbia Cellulose high alpha cellulose mill. Another panorama shows the new organic chemical plant of Celanese Corporation of America at Bishop, Texas. The advertisement is published by the Celanese Corporation to illustrate graphically the two geographic extreme of its great chain of plants. It is impressive publicity for Prince Rupert.

Text of the advertisement is as follows:
The distance from Bishop Texas to Prince Rupert British Columbia, via Cumberland Marland, and other Celanese plants, is approximately 4900 miles. This span represents a planned and integrated source of raw materials and production for Celanese Corporation of America.
Early in the company's history, the Celanese management took steps to assure supplies of major raw materials to protect the growth of the business. This has enabled the company to meet the increasing demand for Celanese products—textile yarns, chemicals, plastics—which has doubled and redoubled many times.

This policy led in 1944 to the building of a plant near Bishop, Texas, to produce organic chemicals from petroleum natural gases. It was more than a plant. It was an advanced and efficient plant for oxidizing hydrocarbons by methods commercially engineered for the first time. In World War II it helped contribute to the chemical needs of the defense program, in addition to supplying chemicals for Celanese's own use. Today it is vastly expanded into one of the great chemical production centres of the country. It is also fortified with modern laboratories and pilot plants for continuing large-scale research in petro-chemistry, in which Celanese has pioneered for many years.

Nearly 5000 miles to the north of Bishop, at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, another important supply project is about ready to begin operations. Here, near some of the world's largest and finest timber reserves, a tremendous, modern pulp mill has been constructed by Columbia Cellulose Company, Ltd., a subsidiary of Celanese Corporation of America. It will produce substantial quantities of high alpha cellulose, scheduled to begin early this year.

Cellulose is one of the basic raw materials for making Celanese chemical fibres. It is also an important strategic material along with iron, oil and cotton.
World supplies of cellulose are less than the demand. The operations of Columbia Cellulose Company, Ltd., in Canada will materially increase America's supplies of this vital raw material on a self-perpetuating basis. For the company's lease with the Government of British Columbia calls for harvesting timber like a crop. Scientific cuttings and modern reforestation methods assure timber in perpetuity.

These two great sources of raw materials strategically located in extremely favorable production areas—Texas and British Columbia—are capable of supplying a substantial part of the needs of the eleven other Celanese plants manufacturing chemical fibres and yarns, woven and knit fabrics, plastics and chemicals. They are likewise important additions to the economic assets of the United States, and to the military potentials of our country.

ON FOREIGN TRAVEL

IN A FEW days I expect to take off for a newspaper trip to Europe, the Middle East and India. Some of my old friends, the "pukka sahibs," are letting me know that they think this is a grand idea. They always figured that I would come around to their way of thinking if only I could go out "east of Suez" and see things for myself.

This seems like a good time for a few words about the whole question of commentaries by stay-at-homes and eye-witnesses.

IT SEEMS to me that there is no fallacy quite so dangerous as that no one should write or speak concerning relations with foreign countries unless that writer or speaker has been to that country. If that were a binding rule we would have to cut out most of the editorial pages in our newspapers. We would also, incidentally, have to close down millions of churches and similar religious institutions, all of which are staffed by people who tell us a great deal about persons they have never seen or heard and places (like heaven and hell) where they have never been.

WE HUMAN beings gain our knowledge in only one of two or three ways:

By what we see, hear, smell, touch, taste.

By what psychologists call "extra sensory" perception, what women might call "intuition" or what preachers might call "visions."

If we based our attitudes and actions only on what we ourselves had learned at first hand we would be a pretty ignorant lot.

We gain most of our knowledge of the universe by weighing the evidence as to what other people say they have seen or heard, or learned by means we consider reliable.

WHAT ACTUAL travel in a foreign country does do is to enable you to get the feeling or mood of the country, in a way that you just can't get it second-hand.

In 1949, for instance, I travelled throughout western Germany and most of the countries in the North Atlantic Pact. I came home convinced that western Europe was simply incapable of fighting another war, such as those of 1914 and 1939; and that if the English-speaking powers expected to build a continental military defence against potential Russian aggression across western Europe they would have to supply the hard core of the land armies themselves—for Europeans had "had it," as the British say.

BUT THERE are two sides to this local mood business. It often does the visitor more harm than good.

If you are a white man, for instance, and go to the southern U.S.A., you soon find yourself absorbing the local race assumptions—almost in spite of yourself.

Actually you can get a better bird's eye picture of that situation from long range than short range.

RAY... Reflects and Reminisces

Robert Burns' birthday anniversary is near and haggis is coming to Prince Rupert all the way from Scotland. The day after the dinner the haggis will be harder to find than the Stone of Scone itself.

The British Bookmakers' Association is quoting a thousand to one odds against war in 1951. It's the year the King and Queen will visit Australia and New Zealand. Is it a good time to make wagers? What Ian didid the King and Queen journey to the short time before the outbreak of the last struggle?

Mrs. Carlson of Keremeos almost started something. A lot of us profuse to scoff at the individual who predicts the approach of the world's end. Yet—and there is a yet—deep in one's thoughts can be the feeling that, after all, it's no so improbable. It is quite possible that last Monday was a spell of anxiety plenty felt and who betrayed themselves by trying not to show it.

A year or so after 1918, as memory of the war dead kept so closely enshrined, the lure of spiritualism grew. There were no suggestions of a fading universe. But interest in the future state and in those who had but recently died was becoming more and more marked. Scores of Prince Rupert people were particular to attend meetings in Vancouver. It was just another passing phase.

Some Canadian visitors who spent a few weeks in Pusan are back home. They dislike Korea—especially Pusan. They have difficulty finding words suitably descriptive. One is reminded of some visitors to Prince Rupert about half a century ago.

Seek Industries—Lakehead Cities Burying Hatchet

PORT ARTHUR — Port Arthur's civic finance committee has decided it should bury the hatchet and try to work with next-door Fort William in enticing new industries to the Lakehead.

The committee has agreed to the principle of a joint industrial committee which would advertise the benefits to industry of establishing Lakehead plants—whether in Port Arthur or Fort William.

"A new industry established in either city is of benefit to both cities," said Alderman Earl Richardson.

The joint-committee plan came to the finance body from Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce. It tied in with a suggestion by Alderman Mrs. Eunice Wishart that a special effort be made to bring new war industries to Port Arthur.

Mrs. Wishart's civic tourist committee worked with a similar Fort William committee until Fort William withdrew from the arrangement.

"We must be above cut-throat business," she said.

Letters will be sent to the Ontario Department of Development at Toronto and to the resources department at Ottawa, describing advantages for war industries here.

Mrs. Wishart said that when she was in Duluth, Minn., recently she found plants being geared for a possibility of 15 years of war. Port Arthur's population was growing and more job opportunity was needed for its people.

The government had helped many industries to establish in Ontario but none had come to Port Arthur.

Former Rupert Woman Passes

Mrs. G. W. Dunn, who lived in Prince Rupert for several years before World War II, her husband having been stationed here in charge of an assay and ore sampling plant conducted by the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co., passed away in Vancouver on Sunday of this week. While here, Mr. and Mrs. Dunn resided on Fifth Avenue West. Having come from Rosstand, they went back to Trail when Consolidated closed down the plant here a few years ago. Mr. Dunn retired and since then they had lived in Vancouver.

Mrs. Dunn was an active member and worker of the United Church while here. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Hawthorne Dunn, in Vancouver.

Arnold James Henriksen, who appeared before Magistrate W. D. Vance yesterday on a charge of false pretences was remanded for trial in eight days. The charge is in respect to a check issued to Enterprise Grocery December 30 on a against which Henriksen is alleged to have had no funds in bank.

Henriksen, who is a married man with family living here, was arrested last week in Vancouver as he disembarked from the steamer Chilcoth on which he had sailed from here. He was brought back to Prince Rupert Tuesday by Royal Canadian Mounted Police plane-piloted by Sgt. Reid.

R. Shrubbsall is sailing tonight on the Prince George for Vancouver where he will enter Shaughnessy Hospital for further treatment.

Legion Land Sale Plan Is Approved

A general meeting of the Canadian Legion last night approved resolutions the executive has entered into with a view to selling the property on the waterfront east of the new building to the city to be held for an arena.

The meeting backed up provincial command in their efforts to have relief from B. C. Hospital Insurance premiums extended to wives of men in receipt of war veteran's allowance, widows in receipt of pensions and dependent parents in receipt of pensions. The secretary was instructed to circularize clubs and organizations in the city asking for their support to the cause.

The meeting agreed to empower the executive to negotiate the upper floor of the Third Avenue property to the Prince Rupert Club on a ten-year lease at $137.50 per month.
The financial statement showed a profit of $4,200 before depreciation and a loss of $16,000 after depreciation. Accounts payable had risen from $13,990 to $15,000. The financial statement was approved and accounts ordered paid.
Mr. Wright reported for the hospital and sick committee.
A vote of thanks was extended the citizens of Prince Rupert for their support of the two bylaws concerning Canadian Legion property at the civic election.
One new member, Mrs. Lawrence of Copper Mountain, was introduced by President James Nicol, who was in the chair.

Britain Plans General Census

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (AP)—More than 60,000 enumerators will begin a house-to-house survey of Britain April 8, marking the country's first general census in 20 years.

The form to be filled in will be about two feet long, twice the size of the last questionnaire in 1931. People will be asked the familiar census questions—sex, age, marriage status, where they were born, where they live and work. Some new ground, however, will be broken this time on such detail as availability of piped water, fixed baths and other household arrangements.

Already there are signs that the date fixed for the census may lead to bitter controversy. April 8, is a Sunday, and protests have been received by the authorities from an element of the populace opposed to anything savouring of a breach of the Sabbath laws. There have been threats of refusal to supply any information unless the enumerator calls around some other day.

Many other problems have cropped up as well.

When the census was taken in 1941, it was found there were 136,000 people in the United Kingdom who spoke Gaelic. Fortunately, all but 6,700 knew enough of the English language to get by. As a result of that experience consideration was given to the printing of forms in Gaelic. This precaution, however was deemed unnecessary as friends were usually available to act as

TAKE MORE THAN DAY

Furthermore, enumerators will not be able to complete their canvass on the single day fixed for the job. They will find it impossible to visit all the inhabited islands scattered along the coast of the islands, the hundreds of lonely lighthouse-keepers and others living in isolated areas.

Detailed and complete analysis of the census which will cost approximately £1,250,000 (about $3,750,000) will be spread over several years, but a preliminary return on distribution of population is expected to be released within a few weeks of census day. A rapid survey, based on a one percent sample of returns, will then be prepared for publication within 12 months.

A detailed record of British social life in the middle of the 20th century, will be furnished by special surveys founded on the census information.

By co-incidence a census will be taken in the Republic of Ireland on the same day. To facilitate their respective surveys, census officials in both countries will exchange copies of the forms to be distributed. It will be the first time in 40 years that a simultaneous census has been carried out in all sections of the British Isles.

Enumerators and staff assigned to the census job will be under oath not to disclose the information received. Assurance has also been given to householders that the returns will not be used to track down deserters from the armed forces, income tax dodgers or other defaulters. Heavy penalties may be imposed for breach of confidence or refusal to give the information requested.

Is Working To Split Season

Early Treaty Changes May At Least Free Hands of International Halibut Commission

The question of extending the halibut fishing season with particular reference to the proposal for a split season which would enable the fishing in certain grounds that are not now touched, is still receiving the close attention of the federal Department of Fisheries and the International Fisheries Commission, according to a letter which has been received by the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce from Stewart Bates, the deputy minister of fisheries. However, there appear to be a number of complications yet which are delaying any immediate action on the matter although treaty changes may be made which would permit of freer action by the Commission.

The letter from the deputy minister of fisheries informs the Chamber that "the United States Government has interpreted the provisions of the existing treaty as not containing authority for the Commission to recommend regulations to the two Governments that will provide for more than one fishing period within a season. Because of this interpretation the Commission is unable to act."

"Moreover, the Halibut Commission held public hearings in the fall of 1949 at the principal ports in the State of Washington, British Columbia and Alaska regarding a proposal for a "split season." The method proposed at that time met with serious objection from a large number of the fishermen and other interests. There are, however, a number of variations to the so-called "split season" which would probably be acceptable but because of the interpretation by the United States Government of the existing powers of the Commission, none of them can be acted upon.

"We have had discussions recently with a representative of the United States State Department regarding a revision to the treaty which would clarify the powers of the Commission and allow it to make recommendations concerning regulations for extending the fishing season. . . . Following the comments of the Canadian interests on the Pacific Coast to the proposed revision of the treaty, negotiations will likely take place with the United States Government for the purpose of finalizing a new treaty."

Twin Models Are Favored

NEW YORK (AP)—Dame Fashion is seeing double, say advance notes on spring style trends.

Everything will come in twos, from the silhouette—one for day, one for evening—through fabrics and colors, two to a costume, down to details such as twin collars and belts, double sleeves, hat brims and skirt flounces.

Ultra-slim is the word for suits and street dresses, with taut hipline and many skirts actually "ducking under" the hips at the back. Walking ease is provided through "back flips" or morning-glory flares.

Coats, afternoon dresses and evening clothes run to extreme fullness. Stately, elaborate evening gowns are reminiscent of the 18th century and Edwardian eras, with boned bodices, puffed overskirts, crinolines and hoops. Even many of the short evening frocks have their full skirts crinolined.

Other interesting features are low-cut backs in some daytime dresses—though necklines show an upward trend—and puffed-out harem or lantern hemlines on afternoon and short evening dresses.

Among favored fabrics, light in both texture and color, silks lead in importance. They range from mohair and rich ribbed otoman to paper taffeta, chiffon, silk organdies and oriental gauze. There are also zephyr woollens, wool chiffon, wool that looks like linen, and cotton that looks like wool. Some two-fabric combination are organza with satin, lace with taffeta, wool with faille, and jersey with taffeta.

Steel blue gives the perennial navy—a lighter shade this year—competition for first color choice. Other contenders include boldly contrasted black and white, blue-tinged pinks called sherry orchid, tones of violet and of white—wax, white rose, magnolia—and a raft of gastronomical hues such as iced coconut, banana, honey, butter, strawberry ice, French vanilla, pumpkin and tabasco.

Make-Up Is Paris Must

By DOROTHY WADDINGTON

PARIS (Reuters)—A girl may stroll down Fifth Avenue or the Strand with only a touch of powder and a discreet lipstick and feel like a million dollars,
but in Paris it's different.

The Parisienne is a firm believer in make-up and any woman, even with the fairest of complexions, feels drab if she does not use it.

This habit of dressing one's face has the advantage of allowing a woman to change her personality at least once a year.
What could be better for the morale than to pop into a beauty salon, spend an hour relaxing, and come out with a new face.
Rouge just a dot higher, a new curve to the mouth, a new slant to the eyes and a new harmony of colors do the trick.

Dr. Janine Mercier, a French skin specialist, affirms that creams and powders are not harmful to the skin.

She advises the use of first-class creams with a lanolin base or milk—unless you have rainwater at your disposal. The chemicals used for disinfecting water supplies in most cities are hard on delicate skins.

With every new season, a new type and shade of make-up is created to match the silhouette of the moment. The new face often signs the season's styles more distinctly than the color or cut of the garments worn.

This season, little rouge is used here on the cheeks, attention being focussed on the lips and eyes. The latter are given an Asiatic slant by the use of a fine line traced with the pencil "eyestopped" at the roots of the eyelashes and continuing upwards for an eighth of an inch at the end of the eyes.

For the lips, cupid bows are out. The centre of the lips are filled in and the top sides drawn in as straight a line as possible, while the under lip remains natural.

Weird Machines Liven Festival

LONDON (C)—The Eccentrics
Corner to be set up on the south bank of the Thames for the Festival of Britain promises to be a "doozer."

Laurie Lee, the poet, organizing this special phase of the 1951 festival, believes many of the exhibits already submitted could surely be classified as startling.

It never occurred to him that national inventiveness could respond so smartly when he sent out the call for "something rich and strange." He urged especially that he wanted contraptions that work like mad but don't do anything in particular. That's precisely what he's getting.

One of the latest entries to show up is a tricky little gadget for grinding smoke. A staircase with weighted steps gives the sensation that a person is walking upstairs when actually going down. There is also a rubber bus which deflates automatically when approaching a low bridge.

Mr. Lee was particularly intrigued by a rather elaboratelyconstructed machine whose sole object was the blowing out of matches. He sent the model back with the suggestion it be perfected by making it light the matches as well.

What he describes as an "interesting novelty" is a cunning mousetrap in rough brick. It is important, he said, that the trick should be rough.

Lured in by the smell of cheese, the mouse is diverted into dead ends until it becomes mystical. Its frantic running stirs up pepper on the pathways, causing such violent sneezing that it dashes its brains out on the rough brickwork.

Lee, however, is not quite sure what to do about the man who offered to dry up the skies for the festival and enclosed testimonials of his powers of rain-topping.

This genius implied that if his offer was not accepted he would make the festival an "absolute hell."

Split Decision St. Louis Bout

ST. LOUIS — Frances Ray Famechon, easily battered in the first round, made a game comeback to gain a split decision from St. Louis Charley Riley in a bruising ten-round featherweight bout tonight. Neither man scored a knockdown.

Miss Helen White sails tonight on the Prince George for Vancouver, where she will take a plane to Montreal to resume her nurse's training at Royal Victoria Hospital. Blackwood on Bridge

When your partner bids four no trump asking for aces and the next hand passes, you are required to answer, indicating how many aces you have. Now and then a player will pass his partner's four no trump because he has previously opened on an absolute minimum hand. Don't do that. If your previous bid or bids have been sound, however minimum, you must consider partner's four no trump as forcing. Trust your partner. He is asking you for information—not for a blind guess as to how many tricks the combined hands will take.

North-South vulnerable. South dealer. North (Mr. Champion) S-A K Q 9 8 7 H-K Q J 7 D-A 6 5 C-7 East (Mrs. Keen) S-10 9 8 3 H-10 2 D-K J 10 9 C-3 5 3

West (Miss Brash) S-6 5 H-9 6 D-Q 7 3 C-Q J 10 9 4 2 South (Mr. Muzzy) S-7 3 E-A 8 5 4 3 D-3 4 2 C-A K 6

Mr. Muzzy opened today's hand with a minimum holding and my venturesome friend, Miss Brash, was right in there with an overcall of two clubs. After Mr. Champion's jump to four no trump, Mr. Muzzy decided to do a little master-minding of his own—a sad decision indeed. He had only three face cards. He had no intermediate cards. He didn't see how there could be a slam. He had Miss Brash's suit well stopped. He passed.

Now Mrs. Keen made an excellent shot with her opening lead. She opened the jack of diamonds, and Mr. Champion couldn't make more than five no trump. "Right again," said Mr. Muzzy, looking to the kibitzers for approval of his "smart" pass. Then the ceiling fell in on him. Mr. Champion pointed out that proper play would have brought a grand slam at hearts. It was easy. Mr. Muzzy could have pulled trumps after winning the probable club opening. He could then lead three rounds of spades, discarding a diamond from his hand on the third round. A fourth round of spades would follow, trumped in the South hand.

Next, dummy could be entered with the diamond ace and the fifth spade would furnish a parking place for South's last diamond. Mr. Muzzy lost, the six of clubs, could be trumped on the board. Miss Brash was very pleased with herself over this deal. She considered that her overcall had kept her opponents out of a slam. But I would wager that she lost points on the deal, because if Mr. Muzzy had played seven hearts he probably would have fubbed it—and Miss Brash would have got a plus score.

Rectior Favors Soccer Pools

PLYMOUTH, Eng. — R.Y. Richard Crookshank, rector of Biche Ferrers, in Devonshire, has offered to serve as chaplain to any organization set up by sweepstake or football pools players to defend their liberties.

The rector, who admitted having an "irregular pool investment," said he would like to know "what ludicrous nonsense" anti-gambling forces were peddling intelligent ethics and morality. In his opinion gambling was no necessarily a moral danger. "Do the puritans seriously wish us to believe that a fatherly mother or children doing a puzzle for a small prize are miscreant sinners?" he asked. "If they suggest that a gentle word at a tavern, guessing the weight of an end stake made by a wretched swindler, is a wicked offence?"

Declaring such views were born in a "spirit of bigotry," he charged they had a tendency to turn young people away from the churches. "My advice to the so-called abandoned and unprincipled raffles, sweepstakes and pool-players and so on is to form a society for the protection of their liberties," he added. "If they would care to have an honest and sane champion I humbly offer myself to them."

THE EXPERTS Say...

By KAY REK Canadian Press Correspondent WELFARE CONFERENCE

Naturally, hundreds of social workers showed up at the recent White House conference on children and youth. But the Washington sessions weren't top-heavy with the profession. Not by any means. Phyllis Burns, Canadian Welfare Council official and one of 65 Canadian observers at the conference returned to say she was particularly impressed by the fact the social workers profession represented "only about 20 percent" of the total group of some 5,500 persons.

Others re-entertained labor and the church. Several hundred appeared on behalf of the teaching and medical professions. Hundreds of young persons took part in the sessions. "There were a number of university and high school students," Miss Burns said in an interview, "and all were vocal." She described the debate on resolutions as "simply terrific." People queued all day, waiting their turn to speak.

While the conference was based on the needs of children and of youth, it covered every aspect of community life. And among the delegates there was general recognition of a lot of conditions "inimical" to the growth of children. Among these: inadequacy of income (in 1948 one out of every two children in the United States came from a family with inadequate income); inequality of opportunity for education.

In a discussion on the effect of modern society on parent-child relationships, delegates reached the conclusion that the average family has become a victim of present-day social institutions—and that this is the cause of strain on family life today.

WINTER VACATION We've just discovered a publicity release recommending the Caribbean Island resorts as ideal vacation spots. It says these have come within budget-range of the average Canadian family. A five-room villa, complete with shady palms, at Nassau in the Bahamas, now can accommodate a family of five persons for $12.50 a person for one week. And listen to this: "Each villa has a lounge, two double bedrooms with shower and bath facilities and a spacious kitchen equipped with an electric washing machine, stove refrigerator and electric ironing equipment." Mother probably would enjoy her holiday much, much more if the "spacious kitchen," etc., could be omitted.

THOSE "WEEKS" Now that 1951 is beginning, the "weeks" are back again—and one of the most important to appear is Canadian Education Week. This is Canada's 15th tribute to her educationists. Inaugurated by the Canadian Teachers' Federation, to stimulate public interest in education, the project has the backing of at least a dozen nation-wide organizations. This year it will be held March 4-10.

Dream Comes True For Blind Pair

DREAM COMES WINNIPEG—Since their marriage six years ago, 37-year-old Isaac Fehr and his wife Alice, 30, have dreamed of a home of their own. Soon they will have it—but they'll never see it.

Both are blind. In the early 1920's Mr. Fehr was blinded by explosion of a dynamite cap. Mrs. Fehr has been blind since childhood. They were married in Winnipeg in 1945 and now have two children—Violet, 5, and Walter, 2. From 1935 to 1948, Mr. Fehr was a basket-maker and broom-maker in the Winnipeg Blind Institute. He quit on orders from his doctor.

Now their dream of a home "where our children will have the room they deserve" has become a reality. They expect to move out of their three-room suite by spring. The foundation and frame is completed and Mr. Fehr helped in the work. When a reporter visited the scene, he was working 20 feet up, driving nails with unerring accuracy. He uses a Braille rule to measure.

Mr. Fehr said he works eight hours a day except Sunday. He said he doesn't think it unusual that he should help build his own home.

"I've been interested in the hammer and saw ever since I lost my sight." The lot was donated by East Kildonan municipality. A cash fund, started by the Mennonite Brethren Church, brought in about $2000.

building boom had struck Western Canada and railways needed freight and new coal discoveries should mean tonnage for new railways. Gething did his part well. He discovered, staked and proceeded to develop a mountain of coal near Hudson's Hope. He first tried the Pine Pass country but said that the coal seams there were more broken up than at Bullhead Mountain, near Hudson's Hope. His interest in the new town of Prince George was the result of his Peace River coal explorations. He visualized Prince George as a clearing house of the future for the wealth of the northland.

Mr. Gething was a contemporary of J. Augustus Heinze, most dazzling of the early Kootenay millionaires. Heinze had made his fortune in B.C. mining, had built a smelter near the site of the present Trail smelter. Heinze battled with the CPR, Wall Street and all banks. Gething often recalled the sad end of Heinze's career. The Kootenay millionaire boldly entered Wall Street on his own account. He launched a bank which failed. When his empire had collapsed, he bought himself a revolver and suicided in his office in his bankrupt New York bank.

When Whittaker Wright, the English promoter, controlled the War Eagle, Le Roi and other mining properties at Rossland, Gething was in the Kootenay country. Wright promoted companies in England and swindled English bankers and investors. When arrested and placed on trial, Wright suicided in Bow Street court room by swallowing potassium cyanide.

"Do you give estimates?"

Gething was in Rossland in 1900 when William Lyon Mackenzie King, destined to become Prime Minister of Canada, came to the mining town to settle a strike which had paralyzed the country. Active in the strike picture at Rossland were such famous men as Eugene V. DeBbs, later Socialist candidate for President of the U.S.A.; Big Bill Haywood, who launched the Industrial Workers of the World movement and who died in Russia following the 1917 revolution; Governor Charles Macintosh of the Northwest Territories; Hon. Joseph Martin, Premier of B.C., and prominent financial and railway men from the C.P.R. and the Great Northern. Among the transient labor agitators were Moyer and Pettibone who murdered Governor Suienberg of Idaho. Out of the riot and bloodshed emerged a new labor code for Canada. Out of the wreckage of mines and smelters developed the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company and its vast metalliferous plants at Trail.

While Neil Gething often recalled the giants of the past, he retained a youthful outlook and numbered among his friends prominent figures of today. Carl Springer, gold mine operator in Ontario and B.C., was an associate. He knew all the bush pilots, W. Grant McConnachie of CPA and Russ Baker of Central B.C. Airways were his good friends; also Capt. Wop May. He admired Premier Byron I. Johnson of British Columbia, and hailed him as a natural successor to Sir Richard McBride who launched the B.C. government railway to Peace River country. Mr. Gething recently paid tribute to Mr. Johnson as the only statesman with courage enough to add one mile to the PGE Railway after the line had reached Quesnel. It was his ambition to be present at the arrival of the first train over the PGE to reach Prince George, an event scheduled for late 1951.

Gething dreamed of a great industrial centre at Hudson's Hope and never tired of pointing out that the divide between the Arctic and Pacific watersheds was the lowest pass through the Cordilleran system. Indicating a point near Summit Lake, north of Prince George, the old man would say: "The continental divide at this point is a wheat field!"

He was a member of a family in Wales long identified with mining. He had received technical training in geology at Ann Arbor University. A brother, J. W. Gething, graduated in medicine and is now living at Battle Creek. The Hudson's Hope coal was almost equal to that of the Lackawanna Valley in Pennsylvania where Gething had worked in the mines. In 1892 there was no railway within a thousand miles and the marketing of the coal was a problem which Neil Gething sought to solve during his fifty years.

Defeat merely whetted Gething's intense desire to see the country developed and he lived to see two sons operate coal mines at the "Hope" and haul the stuff out more than a hundred miles by motor truck to Dawson Creek, railway terminus of the Northern Alberta system.

Lord Rhondda, Welsh coal magnate, who became food controller for Great Britain during the First World War, was a partner of Gething and spent some millions in an effort to open up the wealth of natural resources contiguous to Hudson's Hope. He was felled by the war and, when Lord Rhondda died, a daughter tried unsuccessfully to carry out the great plans of her father for that part of the Peace River country. In addition to the late Senator Robert Green, Dr. Aylward of Victoria was a partner. The estates of Senator Green and of Dr. Aylward retain wide interests at Hudson's Hope.

Mr. Gething's gifts to the museum of the Geological Survey at Ottawa were numerous. He discovered the three-toed tracks of dinosaurs in the sandstone bedrock in Peace River Canyon. He made casts of these and sent them to Ottawa where they continue to create great interest among students. He found skulls and ribs of mammoth creatures which roamed Canada ten million years ago. Anthropologists were able to build up some of the fascinating exhibits in the Victoria Museum Building, Ottawa, from these remains. He gave Indian relics from the region to museums at Victoria, Ottawa, and the Smithsonian Institute.

Mr. Gething once had the scientific world puzzled when he shipped to Ottawa a live creature resembling a lizard which he encountered far underground in a coal seam.

Unable to continue actively in mining these last few years, Gething was frequently a partner of geologists and prospectors on tours of exploration. Of recent years he conducted a farm
