Sharp Words Break Out on Little Lake

PRINCE RUPERT—Sharp words rang the Little Lake hearing Tuesday as E. W. Weston, chairman of the B.C. Power Commission, and Douglas Frizzell, acting mayor, jumped to fight for Duncan's right to criticize.

Mr. Frizzell said he was here to criticize the Power Commission. What he has said is germane to the issue. I understand all this for Mr. Weston. If anything, the Power Commission is accused of being contemptuous. These people (Power Commission) forget the servants of the people.

William Randolph Hearst

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, patriarch of chain newspapers, brought many innovations to American journalism during the half century he directed a vast empire with a value estimated as high as $200,000,000 at the peak of his spectacular and often provocative career.

Violent controversies swirled around him. Through his papers stretching from coast to coast he carried on campaigns for or against causes, jousting with governments, highly placed individuals, "criminal corporations," politicians and many others.

The publisher was praised and condemned. By some he was regarded as a genius, by others as a "yellow journalist." There were those who referred to him as a defender of the helpless, and those who called him a rabble-rouser.

To those who praised him and those who reviled him he remained essentially a remote and mysterious person, and associates said much of the mystery derived from the fact that he permitted neither praise nor attack to swerve him from principle or action.

Shortly after the Munich agreement of 1938, Hearst accused England of "flooding the United States" with propaganda to win this country's backing in her difficulties. His speech was termed a "reply" to Winston Churchill, who had urged that America join with Great Britain and France in an effort to halt the aggressions of dictator nations.

"We are quite sure," Hearst once said, "that we oppose Russian communism, German nazism and English and French imperialism. We support American liberty and democracy, American freedom of the press and freedom of speech, including freedom of the President to take a few fireside shots occasionally."

Immediately after Pearl Harbor, Hearst, in a personal column he conducted, had this to say:

"Well, fellow Americans, we are in the war and we have got to win it. There may be some differences of opinion among good Americans about getting into the war, but there is no difference about how we should come out of it. We must come out victorious and with the largest V in the alphabet."

Shortly after victory, the American Legion awarded him its Distinguished Service Medal for his "intense patriotism" in supporting the program and principles of the Legion. The organization's national executive committee, which voted the award, praised the publisher as "a constant champion of the rights of veterans for the last 26 years" and as an "outstanding American."

The final assessment of Hearst may well be that he was, at heart, an American once and for all more than a pro-German or an anti-Britisher which he has often been contemporaneously dubbed.

Police and Newspapers

ALTHOUGH it's been part of the routine for many years, detectives will talk no more with newspaper reporters in Vancouver. In future, whenever it's considered advisable to acquaint the public with what's going on, it will be given to the press from police or detective headquarters.

This being the case, the only course left for the press is to work along on an independent basis which to a considerable extent it does anyway. But, let it also be said, dependable assistance and co-operation from the authorities is always appreciated by the press and is a good insurance against unauthoritative and embarrassing matter. Crime detection, while it may not actually take longer, could, under the new ruling, not get into print as early as it would under other circumstances. In newspapering, there is supposed to be a vital distinction between live news and history. Co-operation between police and press is better all around.

Air Hostesses Prefer Career

JOHANNESBURG (CP)—South Africa's aerial glamor girls apparently prefer the adventures of their flying service to settling down in matrimony.
Contrasted with the trend in airlines overseas, attractive stewardesses on the state-owned African Airways don't often leave their jobs to get married. A recent report showed that only 15 out of 50 resigned to get married in the last three years.

The report said this rate was below the average "wastage," official term for personnel losses in government departments employing women.
Miss Alma Wright, 24, who has been on the airline for several years, expressed the general sentiment of the girls when asked about this, "I haven't finished having a good time yet," she said.

As I See It

by Elmore Philpott

One Paper Towns

EDMONTON—Coming back to this thriving capital of Canada's most booming province, the thing that strikes me most is that there is only one newspaper.

As a newspaperman—and a newspaper reader long before I was a newspaper writer—this is a sign of the times which I don't like.

In the long run I think the people of any country are worse and worse served as their press gets into fewer and fewer hands. A city which has never had any daily newspaper is certainly better off when it gets one. But any city which has had anything more than one newspaper, is nearly always worse off when there is only one survivor.

GRANTED that in Edmonton, as in Hamilton, and many other cities in North America, the papers that have survived are models of respectability.

All news is more honestly and accurately reported now than it was in earlier times. Occasionally some papers relapse back into the old bad ways—say at election times when some still sian the news ridiculously. Also, when we are in a period of international tension, such as we are now in, even the supposedly objective international news wire services sometimes mix up news with blatant editorial opinion, in as poisonous a mixture as the "news magazines" and some magazine digests have been dishing out for the past few years.

But on the whole anyone who cares to examine the purely informational services of the newspapers must come to the conclusion that there is more news than there was say thirty, fifty or sixty years ago; and is more accurately reported.

BUT WHERE the newspapers have gone back to on their editorial pages. There was a time when the editorial page was the core and heart of most papers—in fact was the real reason for its publication.

If that was a good function of the press, that is to interpret public questions, and debate public issues—then who could say the press as a whole is doing any kind of a job today?

I challenge anyone to examine the editorial pages in most Canadian big cities today with those of 1891, 1901, 1911, 1921. The color and fire has died right out. Here and there is a bright paper which really still believes in, or permits, free discussion of the big questions. But most papers have abdicated. They might just as well out their editorial page—for what goes by that name is as dull as dishwater—and let's through to the public just as little light.

GERALD W. JOHNSON, of the Baltimore Sun, writes in a recent Atlantic Monthly that no less than forty percent of all U.S. dailies have ceased publication, since 1929. Unless I miss my guess, we are likely to see a whole wave of further mergers and "folding ups" when the present inflationary boom busts. Perhaps quite soon.

The stern fact is that most of the newspapers are operating on a very thin slice of profit, over cost, right now. Even a ten percent drop in net earnings would send many to the wall.
When the time comes when two or more publishers have only two choices—merge or go broke separately—who doubts the answer?

MR. JOHNSON thinks that we will get a whole new rash of small opinion papers. He thinks these will be four page affairs, selling for a cent, and catering

"She was awfully rude all evening. That's the last time I'll drop in on her unexpectedly when she's having a party!"

SHARP WORDS

We need Strathcona Park, untouched as the only remaining laboratory of coast forest conditions in which our scientists can study our native animals under natural conditions and plan soundly for their preservation.

PARK IS NEEDED
"We need Strathcona Park as an integral part of future planning for the already great and constantly expanding forest industry, based chiefly on outdoor recreational assets of exactly the type this park provides in fullest measure."

"There is completely satisfactory water storage available elsewhere on the Campbell watershed. Wise resource management, decent behavior demand the alternative be used."

Marshall charged the power men wanted to keep the park inaccessible. "A few thousand dollars and a couple of weeks' work" would re-open the trail, he claimed.

He doubted if the water controller had enough specialized knowledge in park management to determine right from wrong. "If you were the Lord God himself, you could not find conditions to counteract or even limit the depredation the Power Commission plans, except by outright refusal of a licence."

"We do not want Strathcona Park preserved to the fullest possible extent or any other extent. We want it preserved without qualification and without meaningless promises of performance that cannot be lived up to. We want it developed entirely by and under the full control of people who understand modern park use and importance—not by people who believe parks have value only as damsites. We have previous and present experience of the commission's understanding of coast conditions and recreational values. None of it is calculated to inspire confidence."

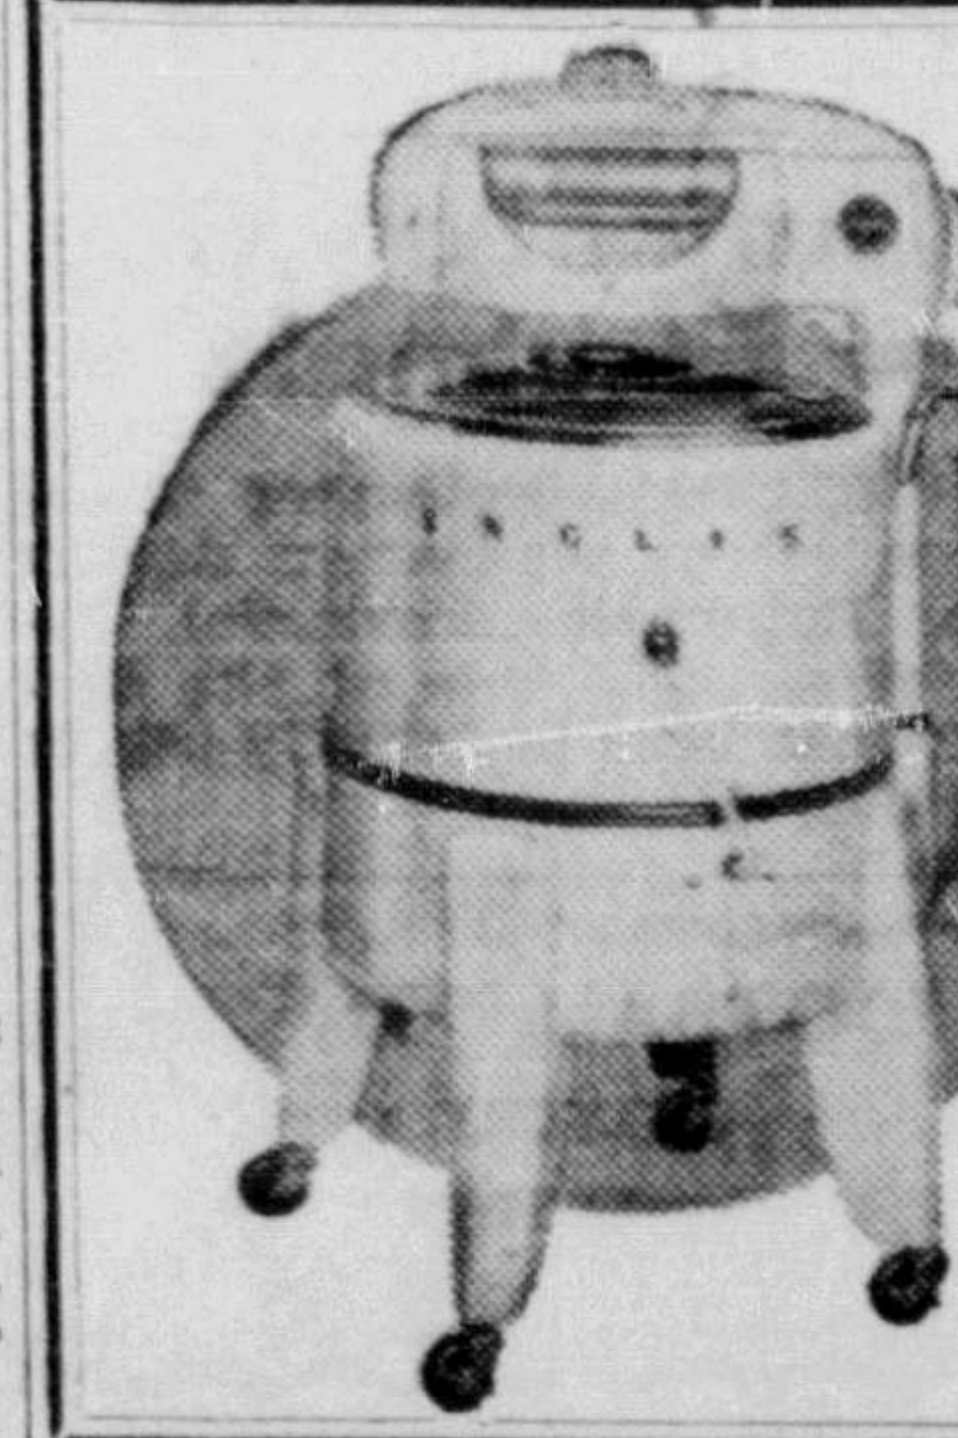

LOST FOREVER
The Sportsmen's Council brief continued: "Millions of future citizens, including sportsmen, will be forever denied the opportunity of seeing what their country once was."

He said "uniformed nonsense" had been talked of Lower Campbell Lake and he said it would be 10 years before true fishing conditions there could be judged.

Marshall accused the power promoters figured they could let more cheap "special contracts" while the public simmered down and forgot what it had lost. "But don't mean to forget. We trust you to reject this application. We don't mean to lose it. We hope we can trust the government to keep Buttle Lake and Strathcona Park protected from this kind of misuse forever."

to the various classes or groups who want such matter.

I am not sure he is right. I think there may be enough astute publishers in the business of publishing the big mass production dailies to print on a single editorial page the different points of view that in earlier times appeared in different rival newspapers.

AGGRESSION

Editor, Daily News:
Language is a human device. Every word has been coined by man to make known his needs, desires and thoughts. New words are added to our vocabulary as new instruments are brought into use in the service of the human race. We often use a single word with many different meanings, depending on how it is applied.

In my opinion the word "aggression" is over-used by the United Nations in their propaganda. Many times I have read that the business of the United Nations is to repel aggression anywhere and everywhere. That statement sounds silly to me as aggression in one form or another is the dynamo of progress and a fundamental of competition.

Eliminate aggressiveness which is a form of aggression, then we enter a dark age of decay. A world that cannot change cannot live and prosper. The late Henry Ford, inventor of the assembly line and mass production, has many times been acclaimed a benefactor of the world. Still, his achievement was an act of aggression against the small manufacturer and tradesmen in many lines. The department stores and mail order houses are aggressors against the small shops. Remember—through an act of aggression came the birth of the world's most aggressive nation today. The United States of America was born and baptized in the Seventeenth Century. Again in 1864 through an act of aggression the negro people of the southern states were emancipated from chattel slavery although it took a civil war to do the job. Mr. Editor, I think most of us talk too much and think too little. May I further point out that every law or statute passed by any government is an act of aggression against some person.

What is happening in Asia today is what took place in America in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

The United Nations stand for status quo which is agreeable to those who have all but not for those who have nothing. It may be that the world will see a lot more aggression before the rich of Asia have less and the poor have more. Of course, we understand the poor spend their money but the rich don't live long enough to spend theirs.

GEORGE B. CASEY.

HE SAID IT!

Controversy over future power developments at Buttle Lake, Vancouver Island's elysium in Strathcona Park, goes on apace. Dr. W. C. ### LET HIM PLUNGE!

A New Yorker says he's going over Niagara Falls in a few weeks and, what's more, will come back alive. Perhaps it's just as well to permit it. People will tire, after a while of seeing their faces published. Across the Atlantic, a dozen or so ambitious folk will attempt to swim the English Channel. At least, they are saying so. But what good will it do, and besides, the water is becoming cooler.

William Randolph Hearst died yesterday in his 88th year. With the early advantage of a wealthy father, he built a newspaper empire, although he might have accomplished it under other conditions. Prior to Hearst, large headlines were rarely seen. When he appeared, there was hardly anything else seen.

Sample Room Theft Case

A preliminary hearing of two men charged jointly with theft of eight cases containing several hundred dollars worth of salesman's samples from the sample room of the Commercial Hotel will continue next week.

In police court yesterday, five witnesses were heard testifying for the crown against Adrien Vanderyagt and Larry Swanson. Crown alleges the two were responsible for removal of Salesman James Morton's sample cases from the Commercial Hotel to Swanson's room at the Inlander Rooms, between June 30 and July 1.

Leslie Helgerson, bar manager of the hotel, told Prosecutor T. W. Brown, K.C., he found both accused in the corridor behind the bar when he heard a door slam, Saturday afternoon (June 30.)

"Only way they could get there was through the sample room from the lobby," Mr. Helgerson said.

A door leading to the lane was locked and only could be opened from the inside. He found the two standing in the doorway and near at hand a truck which he said he had seen Vanderyagt drive before.

"I asked them what they were doing there. They said they were taking a breath of fresh air. I told them I would have to lock the door," Mr. Helgerson said.

MUCH NOISE

Mrs. Amy Kasper, operator of Inlander Rooms, said Room No. 2 was occupied by Swanson. Sunday morning (July 1) she had entered the room after no one answered her knock. She said she was investigating complaint of neighbors that "an awful lot of noise" had come from the room the previous night.

In the room she found "several suitcases, and other baggage, and all kinds of merchandise strewn around." She said the cases were "similar" to the ones in the courtroom shown as exhibits.

Later, Mrs. Kasper said, when police came with search warrants, she had noted carefully the number of cases removed. There had been eight of them, same number as were in the courtroom.

Harold Helgerson, manager of Commercial Hotel, told Mr. Brown he had rented the sample room to Mr. Morton during the last few days of June. Then Mr. Morton had used the sample room as a storage place for the cases, which numbered eight and "looked similar to those" in the courtroom.

When Mr. Morton called for the cases at 2 p.m. Sunday, they were not in the sample room. Mr. Helgerson said he telephoned police immediately.

Const. Robert Ross said he had received the call and had appeared at the hotel about 2 p.m. He found the door to the room locked and a large window partially open. A table stood underneath the window, he said.

Then, he said, he spent several hours watching Room 2 of the Inlander Rooms. Const. Jerome Schwinghammer said he relieved Const. Ross and continued watching the door of Room 2. Neither constables had seen anyone enter or leave the room they were watching, until the room was entered by Sgt. Wales, and Constables Horn, Redhead and Briggs, about 3 a.m. Monday morning.

Both witnesses, the Helgersons, had seen Vanderyagt drinking Saturday afternoon, they said.

Vanderyagt had been staying at the hotel for about two weeks. Sunday evening the hotel manager said Vanderyagt had called on him, saying "he was worried about the cases being found in Swanson's room and had offer-

Five Hundred Giving Blood

Canvassers for the Red Cross volunteer blood donor clinic, still actively at work in various parts of the city, are reporting good response. Over 400 volunteers have now signed up and, by the time the clinic starts next Monday, Chairman T. Norton Youngs expects to have at least 700 volunteers on the dotted line for appointments.

In the previous two years there were 500 volunteers. Expectation is that the figure will be well exceeded this year.

Mr. Youngs emphasizes those who have not been contacted by canvassers can make their appointments at his office.

The clinic will operate here next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. A van with equipment and two attendants, including nurse, will arrive Sunday from the steamer Camosun from Vancouver. Nine others of the clinic personnel will arrive Monday by air.

The clinic will be held, as usual, at the Civic Centre and the new kitchenette there will be used for the first time in connection with the serving of coffee after the blood has been drawn from the donors.

100 Enter Swim Races

There should be close to 100 entrants in the swimming meet the end of this month to show what they have learned in two months of lessons sponsored by the Civic Centre.

Instructor Ian McHardy says, although plans for the meet have not yet been finalized, it is hoped to have three styles of swimming contests for each class and a diving meet.

Prizes and trophies will be awarded to winners.

Cool weather lately has caused many younger members to drop out but it hasn't dampened the enthusiasm of classes II and III, says Mr. McHardy.

Tentative date of the meet is August 28.

Floating Church Here Again

A "church on the water" is how the sleek, white-hulled, 104-foot diesel yacht, Lower Light, is termed by its crew of 18 who shipped into port this morning on their return trip to Portland and home.

The missionary vessel—operated by the Apostolic Faith—left Tacoma July 23 headed for Alaskan ports. Capt. R. R. Crawford is the missionary skipper, a preacher, a singer and a happy man. His mother founded the denomination which now has spread over many parts of the world, and Capt. Crawford is general overseer of all the work of Apostolic Faith.

On its return trip, the Lower Light will bring to many fishing villages along the coast the music of a seven-piece ensemble of three violins, a viola, a cello, a bass viol and piano, and the songs of the Lower Light Quartet, and radio famous voices of Mrs. Agnes Eklund, soprano and Mrs. Arthur Hiatt, contralto.

The Lower Light was in port here several weeks ago and fouled one of her three propellers. Because the screw which needed replacing was left-handed, it could not be fitted here and an order was radioed to Juneau for a cast. The vessel sailed to Juneau with two screws operating, "and we only lost about one knot an hour in speed," said Capt. Crawford. The vessel cruises at 10 knots. The propeller was replaced at Juneau.

At Juneau the screw arrived by airmail and was promptly fitted. A former army aircraft rescue vessel, the Lower Light is powered with three diesel engines. A 20-kilowatt auxiliary power plant furnishes lights, heat and current for utilities. There is cabin space for 30, and she is equipped with high-power two-way radio, automatic pilot, radio direction finder and full pilot-house control.

Capt. Crawford said that Apostolic Faith has pioneered in the use of many modern methods to spread the Gospel, and were first to use the airplane in religious work.

Headquarters of the faith is at Portland, where there are two churches, the Tabernacle seating 2,500 and has an outside platform to hold a 75-piece orchestra, a 50-voice choir and a corps of 50 ministers and church workers.

Earlier this year, Lower Light spent three weeks circumnavigating Vancouver Island. When the church on the water reaches Vancouver in about a week, the mission crew will hold a week's evangelistic meeting there. On its way the twin loudspeakers on the bridge will carry to all who would listen the story of a faith which has spread to "nearly every corner" of our world.

Women Patient Is Tough Test In Cold Cures

LONDON (CP)—Scientists seeking the elusive cure for a common cold have run into an unexpected snag. They have discovered a human "guinea pig," a woman who can't even be given the sniffles, let alone an experimental cough or cold.

The test-tube patient is Mrs. Kathleen Chaffey, 45-year-old housewife of London's suburban Eltham, Doctors attached to the research unit at Salisbury in Wiltshire, where colds are artificially induced, are puzzled by the woman's strange resistance to germ inoculations.

She goes there for 10 days every three months to be infected but while other volunteers sit around all choked up, with eyes streaming to the accompaniment of a sniffing chorus, Mrs. Chaffey just relaxes and offers unappreciated sympathy.

"When I had been to the United States three times without catching a cold I suggested to the doctors that I was just wasting their time," she said. "However, they asked me to keep going, apparently under the impression they can learn something from me."

A former nurse, Mrs. Chaffey hasn't succeeded in passing on the secret of immunity to her husband. He catches cold at the least provocation and suffers from chronic hay fever as well.

Blind Scotswoman Guides Cub Pack

EDINBURGH (CP)—Elizabeth Gardner of Balgreen Park, a handsome 36-year-old woman who is blind, has taken over the leadership of the 128th Edinburgh Wolf Cub pack, junior branch of the Boy Scouts.

She trains the boys, putting them through their Tenderfoot tests, and takes them to summer camp.

Miss Gardner is also a qualified Red Cross worker. She lost her sight 10 years ago and then took up voluntary work for the Red Cross and the Wolf Cubs. Her regular job is as secretary to the matron of a home for blind women here. She can take shorthand fast on a Braille machine and typewrites with accuracy.

In any spare time from her job and her activities with the Red Cross and the Cubs, she is taking sewing lessons.

Gillnetters Have Mishaps

A series of mishaps followed gillnetters of this area over the week-end, resulting in one boat partially destroyed by fire, two others grounded, and one man in hospital with injuries.

William McDonald, a gillnet fisherman fishing for North Pacific Cannery, is in Prince Rupert General Hospital with burns, after fire broke out on his boat while returning to base Saturday, reports reached here today.

Meanwhile, the same day, two gillnetters founded off Port Esquimaux. No one was injured, but details could not immediately be gained.

CHALLENGE OF

for energetic measures and the department requested the Fisheries Research Board of Canada to make a complete survey of the situation. The board gathered data as a preliminary to a general investigation of the whole Skeena system. Questions set by the investigating scientists were sharply answered: Was there really a decline in the salmon runs, or were they fluctuating naturally with other animals? Were all five species of salmon involved, or were some stable or increasing? Some were going down, which were they? What was the cause? What could be done about it? Some were decreasing was there any way of letting the industry have more fish without producing bad results for the future? Answers to these questions were handed by 1948.

As a result of this investigation a report was published in 1949 by Dr. A. L. Pritchard, now director of conservation and development in the Department of Fisheries at Ottawa, but who at that time a member of the staff of the Fisheries Research Board. Findings in the report placed the trouble mainly under three headings: Predation, Commercial Fishing and Obstructions.

Corrective measures were planned and some were applied immediately. Some seals being the predators in the Skeena area, the Department of Fisheries increased the bounty paid to fishermen on hair seals by stages, from $2.50 to $5.00. Supplementing this has been an organized hunt on the Skeena and adjacent areas where these animals are known to congregate during the pupping seasons.

WATER CONTROLS
To offset the heavy toll taken by the commercial fisheries by increased power and efficiency of modern fishing fleets the department has tightened its controls, under fishery regulations, and when necessary extended close seasons, or closed the salmon fishing season entirely.

Obstructions in streams resulting from natural causes are being cleared in a general program of stream clearance. In Fisheries field men, back where necessary by the specialized services of Fisheries engineers, have made periodical sweeps of the Skeena system to ensure that obstructions in spawning streams are cleared without delay. But the major obstruction was at Moricetown Falls and it was here that the department made its great effort to rehabilitate the Skeena River salmon runs. As is usual with most important Fisheries projects, a biologist made preliminary studies. The department wanted to know if the expense which would be involved in corrective measures was essential. This called for a really intimate knowledge of the salmon populations running through the Bulkley River section of the Skeena system, as well as a detailed analysis of water conditions affecting these populations.

Dr. D. J. Milne of the Fisheries Research Board was the scientist chosen to make this special survey of the Moricetown Falls area and he spent three years on the job. Tagging experiments were made each season over the three year period, to ascertain the length of time spent by fish below the falls and to estimate what percentage of the runs reached the upper river. Discharge rates and water temperatures of the Bulkley River were taken daily. Fish counts were made at key points. These data, assembled and put into the prosaic form of graphs, gave the required answers.

In 1945 it was estimated that the Moricetown sockeye population was 85,000 fish, with 10,000 coho as a makeweight. In that year a dangerous low water level occurred in the days following August 20, when one channel of the river dried out and many fish were unable to pass above the falls.

TOUGH FOR PINKS
Observations, following the same pattern in 1946, gave the population at 59,000 sockeye and 65,000 coho, while in 1947 the combined sockeye and coho runs were upwards of 45,000 fish. Small schools of other salmon varieties were also noted in all three years. It was found that pinks, poor jumpers at the best of times, seldom if ever made the leap which would enable them to reach the upper spawning grounds.

As a result of investigations and surveys, the department's engineers produced plans of a fishway which would fill the following requirements: (1) pass fish successfully at all levels at or below the "danger point" of August 20 and during the time fish are migrating; (2) be sufficiently large to accommodate the peak of the runs, estimated at eight fish per minute, and (3) be of a type which would not require fish to jump—this latter to take care of the weak-jumping pink salmon.

Plans were completed and when blueprints were corrected and finalized there emerged on paper the following: for the right bank, a fishway 125 feet in length and eight feet high, with vertical slotted baffles of steel plate, to form 12 pools each 10 feet long; on the left bank, a fishway 150 feet in length, designed in the form of an L to follow the natural bend of the canyon at this point and having also 12 pools. Baffle plates are in two sections, one of 3/8-inch steel abutting four feet from the fishway wall, the other, of 3/4-inch steel, abutting from the opposite wall for a distance of one foot and slightly downstream. This leaves a gap of one foot which is the vertical slot through which the water passes. With water velocity considerably tamed by the series of baffles, fish will swim easily through these slots and will have no need to surface. The wide space behind the larger baffles makes resting pools, and the value of these pools is enhanced by back eddies created by a small steel plate set in the end of the main baffles at an angle of 60 degrees.

These fishways overcome a total drop of 12 feet through the canyon and the size of the pools will permit the accommodation of five fish per minute. Thus the two fishways more than satisfy the requirements calling for a total handling of eight fish per minute. It was estimated that an expenditure of $80,000 or more would be called for in construction of fishways according to these plans.

In the late summer of 1950 the Department of Fisheries obtained the necessary appropriations and the project commenced. First step was the construction of a scale model. This was used as a working basis. WORK AT 40 BELOW
The construction crew went into action on October 29 and for some weeks the principal work was rock blasting. Winter conditions, which come early in these parts, made the job difficult. Deep ice and snow which covered the river bed were cleared away with flame-throwers. When a passage had been cleared men were able to work at levels which, during the late spring and summer, were 20 feet under rushing waters. To keep out the trickies of water which even in winter find their way along the sides of the canyon, sandbag coffer dams were built. This work was carried out without pause in temperatures that often went down to 40 below zero.

Practically the entire length of both fishways called for rock excavation, accomplished by drilling and blasting, although some sections are sheer reinforced concrete walls rising from the river bed. By the end of March all concrete had been poured and steel baffle plates were being bolted into position. But at this time, too, great masses of ice would come swirling along the upper river to disappear suddenly as water plunged beneath snow and ice at the gorge. By now it was unsafe to walk across the river by the bridge. This meant loss of precious time and work had to be organized to cut movement from bank to bank as much as possible.

The work was finished just in time. Spring freshets already were increasing in volume. A difference of only a few days in timing would have made it impossible to complete it until the low water period late this fall. This would have been of little help to the 1951 sockeye and coho runs. Completion of the Moricetown Falls fishways represents another step in the department's program of protecting and developing the salmon runs of British Columbia.

Editor, Daily News:
My attention has been drawn to a news item in a recent edition of your paper describing a golf contest between the Gyros and Rotarians. There is a degree of inaccuracy in the report.

My name is mentioned as giving the Gyros' star golfer, Joe Scott, some form of pep pill to improve his game. Anyone who has seen Mr. Scott play will agree that there is little, if any, room for improvement.

Actually, I was trying mass psychology on the poor Rotarians who have been beaten with monotonous regularity by the Gyros in every contest from ping pong to bridge.

I felt that, if the Rotarians were allowed to win, it might give the whole club a psychological lift—a badly needed "shot in the arm" so that they might again develop delusions of grandeur and continue to challenge the Gyros.

Mr. Scott, who has a strong sense of ethics, would not of course, have been a party to such chicanery and I was forced to

Blackwood on Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

After a slow start, the bidding on today's hand suddenly blossomed out into a mad scramble of doubles, rescues and overbids which came to a jolting stop at a contract that could have been beaten—but wasn't.

Mr. Muzzy doubled the two spade bid because he knows Miss Brash is an overbidder and he has seen others collect big penalties by doubling her. He cut it a little too fine in this instance, however, and two spades almost certainly would have been made.

Of course, it didn't look that way to Mr. Meek. Holding no spades at all, he was afraid he was in for a terrible set. After some thought he decided to rescue at three diamonds.

But rescues don't fit in with Miss Brash's type of game. As far as she was concerned her partner had made a bid—in fact, this was the second "bid" he had made on the hand. Miss Brash thought her cards would make a good dummy for a diamond contract, so—wham, five diamonds! Mr. Abel doubted that and there was a bad moment during which it looked like Mr. Meek would have to be carried out.

He recovered, however, in time to see Mr. Abel lay down the king of hearts, which was taken by the ace on the board. "Steady, partner," said Miss Brash, with a confident smile.

Well, there was one chance and Mr. Meek took it. At trick two he led the queen of spades from dummy. Mr. Muzzy played low and Mr. Meek threw a small club. Mr. Abel won with the ace of spades and fired the queen of clubs. But it was too late.

Mr. Meek won in dummy with the ace and led the jack of spades. Mr. Muzzy ducked again and another club was dropped from the closed hand. On the lead of the ten of spades Mr. Muzzy covered but Mr. Meek ruffed. He then cashed the ace of diamonds, crossed to dummy with the king of diamonds and led the nine of spades on which he placed his last club.

Mr. Abel ruffed this trick and led a club. But Mr. Meek ruffed in his hand, then ruffed a heart in dummy and threw his two remaining hearts on dummy's good spades.

"Why did you look so glum at the start of the hand, partner?" asked Miss Brash. "Did you think we'd missed a slam?"

The village commissioners have decided to send a night letter to Hon. Herbert Anscombe asking that a government agency be set up in Terrace to eliminate the nuisance of drivers having to go to Prince Rupert for vehicle and drivers' licences, as the RCMP had ceased acting for the government in this capacity.

Hi R. King, executive secretary of the Canadian Cancer Society, B.C. division, is expected in Terrace on Friday and will meet the Terrace executive that evening in the Red Cross Hospital.

Helicopter At Stewart

STEWART—Stewart residents got their first view of a helicopter in action during the past week when one arrived from the Bowser Lake area and landed on a forty foot lot on Fourth St. It was piloted by Mr. Runnells who, with a crew of five men, is prospecting in the Bowser Lake area for the Karl Springer interests. While here a visit was paid to the headwaters of American Creek to look over some claims there. D. D. Kimball, accompanied by Angelo Bugnello, were with Mr. Runnells on the trip.

Better Terms Are Sought

Not All Ootsa Lake People Satisfied With Alcan Deal

BURNS LAKE—McNeely DuBose, vice-president of the Alcan, landed near Wistaria, Ootsa Lake, on Sunday last. Wistaria is a hot-bed of contention in regard to the settlement of the Aluminum Company of Canada with the settlers who will be flooded out by the construction of the Nechako Dam.

Some one hundred and fifty settlers, trappers and guides, headed by Cyril M. Shelford, president of the Settlers' Association, waited on Mr. DuBose as his plane landed.

Many settlers appear to be willing to negotiate but quite a number are seeking higher terms. Mr. DuBose was attended by Fred Clarke and W. Metcalf of the Alcan and two independent valuers.

Herr Klaverweyden of Wistaria spoke at length for the settlers who will be displaced and also for the trappers and guides who will be deprived of a livelihood, on which subjects Mr. DuBose appeared to be well informed.

As he boarded the plane at 5:00 p.m. on his return to Vancouver he received 'boos' from some of the gathering.

Railway Wants Terrace Water

The village commissioners were in session on Wednesday afternoon with all five in attendance. Correspondence from the Canadian National Railways asked if the village could supply 20,000 gallons of water per day for a water tank and what the cost of this service would be.

Information will be sought from Smithers as to what arrangements exist with the railroad there before this letter is answered.

The public works department has requested a water line for their new site on the Laird subdivision. The department will be advised that, if it is prepared to instal a 4-inch transit pipe, the village will supply the water, cost of which will be deducted from the taxes. Other customers in that area will have to be supplied.

The Canadian National Railways would be willing to grant easements of the water and sewage lines across their right of way and similar easements are required from the B.C. Power Commission.

In a letter to the commissioners Sargent, Robin and Saik requested their lots on the southeast corner of Lakelse Avenue and Kalum Street be sub-divided to face Lakelse Avenue instead of Kalum Street. The village approved the sub-dividing but turned this over to the town planning committee for their recommendation.

A request from H. Philip to have the lane opened up in the rear of his property on Lazelle Avenue East will be investigated.

Terrace Needs More Housing

TERRACE—Anticipating a good deal of illness here next winter, especially among the children, Dr. Weare, at Tuesday night's meeting of the Hospital Interim committee, deplored the poor housing conditions in the town which now has a population of approximately 3500. He said that good hospitalization and medical care was needed here. The committee, which had taken on a heavy responsibility, should make plans for a hospital to meet the needs of the town for the next ten or twenty years.

The meeting was held in the Oddfellows' Hall and was attended by committee members H. M. Wightman, chairman; Mrs. L. Newhouse, secretary; Dr. Weare, Harold Lynum, Mr. Newhavin, P. Van Stoik, Rev. P. M. Mallett, C. Adam and Mrs. D. G. Little.

As the committee still lacks the information necessary to call a general meeting for the taking over of the Outpost Hospital, especially information from the BCHS, further letters of inquiry will be sent, the answers to which should decide the date of the public meeting.

In the meantime, the committee decided to accede to the request of Mr. McDonnell, president of B. C. division, that an estimate of the cost of re-lining the hospital furnace with brick be sent to him. Mr. Adam volunteered to attend to this matter immediately.

Shellfish Cannery Becoming Year Round Operation—New Logging Concern

Queen Charlotte Island Cannery plant at New Masset is developing into a year-round operation. It is very busy at the present time putting up crab meat after having packed clams earlier in the year. Some tuna were also put up recently, a catch having been delivered from the west coast.

Several boats are engaged in crab fishing between Tow Hill and Rose Spit, packing the choice cold water crustaceans to the cannery. As many as 40,000 crabs are brought in by some boats which leave their sets out while making deliveries to port.

The Masset cannery is providing a substantial payroll for the village, white women having now joined the native workers.

A. B. Anderson's sawmill in nearby Delkatta Inlet is also providing regular employment for Masset.

A new logging operation has also been commenced by the Ryall interests in Delkatta Inlet, taking out pulpwood for delivery to the Powell River Co.

Mr. Lloyd Walker, enthusiastic sportsman of Seattle, will make his annual hunt under the guidance of Buster Harrison. He has volunteered to show game and wild life pictures to be sponsored by the Tweedsmuir Park Rod & Gun Club. Proceeds will be used in clearing out the waste fish during the spawning season on the trout waters.
