Receive Them Well

ORIDE in the triple victory of Prince Rupert's L' Job's Daughters drill team at Richmond was evident everywhere yesterday as news of their success was read from one end of the city to the other. Winners in previous international contests, some success was not entirely surprising, but to be adjudged winners in each of three main contests is a matter of special pride.

To whom should go the credit?

First of all, to the girls themselves. They have given so much of their time and their very hearts for perfection in the varied manoeuvres they performed so expertly.

Then, to their instructor, Alex Mitchell. Always enthusiastic and keen for perfection, Mr. Mitchell has been able to spread his enthusiasm to his students, and they vie with one another to achieve the high standard desired.

And credit also is due to the parents of the girls. Often, at much sacrifice they back up the team to their limit. Now they have gratification. And to the many others who through their interest and support made the team possible, its success is their greatest reward.

More publicity has come to Prince Rupert through the success of our Job's Daughters than could be realized through years of organized paper work in public relations.

And in all their many contacts in the various centres they have visited in the last few years, nothing but praise has been given by the people they met for their circumspect behaviour. That is advertising and publicity of the highest character.

Prince Rupert has big reasons to be proud of the Job's Daughters. Their return to this city a week from today should be suitably acknowledged and a proper welcome planned and staged.

prices at mills or loading points was $8,000,000. This includes all timber products. The most valuable consists of saw logs, which may include logs for pulp. Other products include poles (chiefly cedar), piling (chiefly hemlock) hewn railway ties, cordwood and fenceposts. The present rates should increase. Actually there is an interesting development in the matter of comparative values of species of timber. A year ago spruce, coast and white, was the most valuable, but more recently western hemlock has moved into first place. About one-third of the value of production comes now from hemlock, one-quarter from spruce and one-sixth each from bassam and western red cedar. To the pulp and paper interests the hemlock is more valuable while for the lumber mills spruce ranks first.

The assurance of a continuous demand for products of the forests in this area will have an advantageous effect on the economy of the whole district. It will be no mere seasonal or temporary activity. In this connection it is interesting to recall that the first forest management licence issued in the province was that granted to the Columbia Cellulose Co. at Watson Island. One feature of this government measure is that through agreed-upon reforestation procedures a permanent stand of timber will always be assured. No more will there be logged-off areas without replacement. And as the growth of the forest will be assured so will the prosperity of the district be certain.

of East Delta, B.C., were in the city Thursday when opportunity was taken to renew several old friendships. They called on Mr and Mrs. Alex MacKenzie who they remember all of forty years ago, and there was enjoyment in recollection and reminiscing. They also had the pleasure of meeting Jack and Joe Lindsay, well known local old timers whose youth was spent in Victoria and southern B.C.

His mother, a widow, in Ketchikan, was notified of the tragedy but details were lacking.

> He is the second son lost in a plane crash as his older brother Captain Malta L. Stepp jr., was killed in the crash of a plane in England during World War II. He was the first Alaskan flier to have a commission with the fore the fatal accident.

Howard Stepp was born in Ketchikan when his father was transferred there in 1930. He was a graduate of Kayhi and later attended school in California He had been flying out of Cenhouse at Vancouver this week. Burial took place at Fairview terville, California, this summer, and was fliyng a crop-dusting plane at the time of his death.

It would be an exaggeration to say that Mr. Dale planned the exact pattern of play which would defeat this contract. When he selected his opening lead he had no idea it would turn out so well. He deserved credit nevertheless for the thoughtful play which brought about Mr. Champion's downfall.

On lead against the four spade contract, Mr. Dale's natural inclination would be to lead the deuce of hearts. Good players always lead the lowest card from a holding of three to an honor in their partner's bid suit.

But in this case the old master decided to open the queen of hearts. This was not an attempt to confuse the declarer, but to avoid confusing Mr. Muzzy. In other words Mr. Muzzy consistently leads the honor from three to an honor in partner's suit. For purposes of clarity and simphification, Mr. Dale was trying to play his partner's game.

What a fatal illusion this lead created in Mr. Champion's mind. Mr. Muzzy overtook the queen of hearts with his king and laid down the ace of the with the jack of spades made suit. BRADFORD (CP)-An impoverished 100-acre farm near here is paying off for Jim Steers, a 31year-old farmer with a firm belief in modern methods of agriculture.

The land wasn't much for ield when Jim started working it 12 years ago. Most of it was sloping and every time it rained the topsoil started heading for the hollows. The crops didn't have a chance.

Jim, who had taken short courses at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, invited the college expens to help him. They told him how to map out his farm, how to follow contours, seed grass waterways and what crops should be planted where. They also gave him a five-year program that has proved suc-

Spruce-mead, as he calls his holding, is actually a dairy farm. All the crops are planted with that in mind. Mixed grains and plenty of hay are the main items. He once planted a corn crop but had to give it up. It proved difficult to handle on hilly land even when planted on a contour

SCIENTIFIC USE

On one side of his sloping fields this year, he has four or five acres of alfalfa planted in two-year rotation with grain. The lower areas are kept in hay crops as much as possible to prevent erosion. Grass waterways are provided to drain off rain without removing soil.

As well as being a successful hay and grain farmer, Jim has followed the latest methods in cattle raising. Last year he built a loafing barn and milking parlor for his dairy herd.

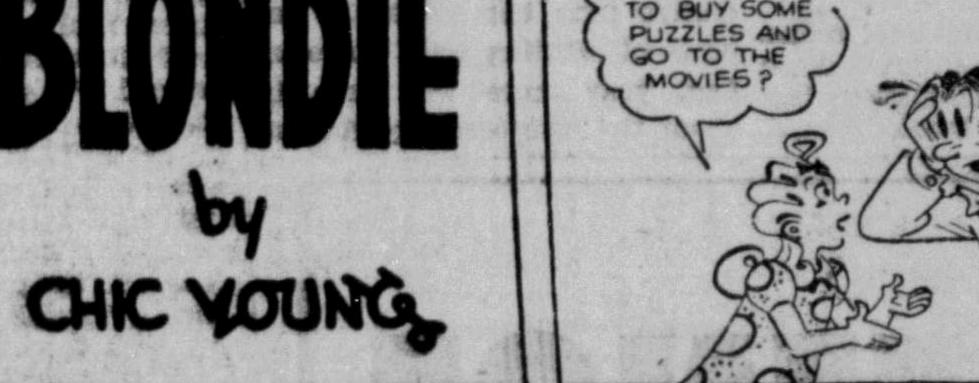

He is also something of a contour missionary. Other farmers in the district have started workling their farms across the slope.
