VOTE ON BYLAWS

Supporters of the two relief work bylaws which are to be voted on tomorrow are urged to get out and vote and bring out their friends. The unemployed badly need the money and it will be a good thing for the city to have the money spent. The polls will be at the City Hall from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. It would be a calamity if because of apathy on the part of the ratepayers these bylaws should not be passed.

Fine New Illumination System Downtown Is In Use; Very Attractive

Marks Another Step In Advancement of City—Big Contrast to the Days When Local Folk Used Bugs

The switching on today of the ornamental street lighting standards on Third and Second Avenues by Mrs. C. H. Orme, wife of the mayor, marks a further step in the advancement of Prince Rupert toward that place which must eventually become this city's right as one of the most important cities on the Pacific Coast. That day is rapidly approaching and was well recognized by the decision of the city to carry out this installation, the first of its class in British Columbia.

Modern requirements of pedestrians and vehicular traffic, necessitate a high intensity well distributed efficient illumination. In olden days when traffic moved at a relatively slow pace, a low intensity of illumination covered the requirements and objects were readily distinguished by silhouette. Today, however, the use of the automobile moving at increasing speed demands a much higher intensity of illumination and objects must be distinguished immediately by direct light.

Modern high intensity illumination assists materially in attaining the object of well governed cities, viz, a better, safer, cleaner city enhanced property values and civic progress an dis one of the cities' greatest assets.

In the past, the payment for street lighting has been accepted as a necessary evil but where municipalities realize street lighting is an investment rather than a liability, and gives immediate returns in traffic betterments, decrease of accidents and will pay dividends in enhancing property values, increased trade and attraction of desirable residents, then will civic bodies recognize the advantage to be obtained by the installation of better and more beautiful up-to-date lighting.

The history of street lighting in Prince Rupert dates back to the year 1908 when the pioneer at that time may remember starting up his old storm lantern to assist him in reaching his home over the narrow sidewalks and streets at that time and, if he was unfortunate enough to mistake the location of the sidewalk, he more than often found himself in the musk, minus his lantern and with the necessity of finding his way home as best he might. What a boon he found the few lamps placed at intersections of the streets when energy was turned on from the old steam plant at Cow Bay.

Better and Better
Shortly after incorporation, the city fathers decided to adopt a higher intensity and arc lamps replaced the old 100-candle-power lamps at the intersection and incandescent lamps were extended to meet the needs of the residential districts.

Today marks the first installation of a higher standard and, within a short period, the citizen will look back with the same thought in mind in comparing the new lighting with that displaced, as did the pioneer his lantern and the older method of street lighting.

A great deal of thought, study and investigation has been made by the Northern B. C. Power Company in the purchasing of material for this installation; every article from the wire, conduits, standards, lanterns, etc., has the seal of "Made in Canada." The same care exercised in the purchasing has been carried out in planning the system and it has been proposed, the idea being carried throughout, to make this installation outstanding and a model system for other cities to follow and one the designers can, with pride, refer to as a model to be followed in progressive ornamental street lighting programs.

FISHERY ADDRESS

John Dybhavn Interesting Speaker At Luncheon Yesterday of Local Gyro Club

John Dybhavn, manager of the Royal Fish Co. and president of the Prince Rupert branch of the Canadian Fisheries Association, gave the Prince Rupert Gyro Club, at luncheon yesterday, a very interesting talk on the fisheries of Canada, British Columbia and Prince Rupert. The address proved very timely and was much appreciated by members of the service club.

After briefly alluding to the observance in Prince Rupert of National Fish Week and the important part the fisheries played in the prosperity and business of this community, Mr. Dybhavn proceeded to compare the present relative scarcity of fish—both halibut and salmon—with the wonderful abundance in 1908 and 1909. In those days the fish had been plentiful and gear more primitive than it was today. Up to a few years ago there had been great exploitation of the fisheries, fishing had been carried on under arbitrary regulations and depletion soon became evident. This depletion was to be noted in the salmon as well as the halibut fisheries.

Depletion had made evident the necessity for scientific study of the fisheries with a view to conservation and development. Both government and industry had begun to realize the necessity for the fullest knowledge of this subject in order to conserve the great natural wealth and more intelligently regulate the catching of the fish.

Investigations with regard to the life history of the fish were being carried on. Halibut were being studied under the International Fisheries Commission. Investigations were being conducted of the life history of sockeye, pink and chum salmon. From the results of these investigations it was expected that great benefits would accrue.

By means of close seasons, endeavors were being made to protect the fish during the spawning period. This applied not only to halibut and salmon but also to pilchards, herring, crabs, clams, etc.

In the way of education, steps were also being taken. The educational program included the encouragement of better processing methods and instruction of fishery overseers, shore fishermen, hatchery employees, etc.

RICH MAN WAS HERE

A. P. Dawe, who won $409,000 last Saturday by holding second prize in the Dublin Hospital Sweepstake on the Manchester Handicap, is quite well known in Prince Rupert, having been a resident of the city for several months about a year ago. While here he was in the service of the National Airplane Lumber Co. as skipper of one of the company's gasboats.

Six months ago, Mr. Dawe wrote from Vancouver enquiring as to chances of obtaining employment here. He should not be worrying about being out of work from this on.

REPORTS ARE EXAGGERATED

Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. does not give endorsement to the claims for Big Missouri Mine that were reported to have been made by Duncan McViechie, engineer, recently.

S. G. Blaylock, general manager of Consolidated, stated in an interview in Vancouver that he regretted the tendency to give exaggerated estimates of what ore might be at the mine, and said that developments by the Consolidated so far did not warrant any such estimates of ore values as Mr. McViechie was purported to have made.

"I am sure Mr. McViechie can not have been correctly quoted in this article," said Mr. Blaylock. "It is true that a 100-ton pilot mill is nearing completion. This mill will check up the value of the ore taken out in development and will serve as a pilot mill to work out the mining problems in connection with this deposit.

"It is also true that there are some areas giving high assays in gold. The article, however, gives an impression which is not justified by the work done to date, and on that account must be considered regrettable."

One Machine Virtually Demolished in Attempt To Take Off; One Sinks

Pilots and Occupants of Northbound Ships Miraculously Escaped Death or Serious Hurt—Will Mean End of Flight to Alaska

Near fatal disaster marked the attempted take-off from Telegraph Creek for Atlin yesterday afternoon of two Pacific International Airways planes bound from Seattle to Alaska with Edward Lowe, president of the company, and party on board. The weather was very unfavorable for flying and one of the two planes, a Fairchild, piloted by Harry Blunt, after having attained considerable altitude, developed engine trouble and the pilot tried to bring the ship down on Sawmill Lake nearby. He failed to do this, however, and landed on a wooded hillside, one mile from Telegraph Creek, virtually demolishing the plane but escaping himself miraculously with but rather minor hurt.

The second plane, a Fleetster, went through the ice while attempting to take off and sank partly below the ice into water. It was expected that it would be raised without damage to the machine. Pilot W. J. Barrows was not hurt. The double smash-up, once again illustrating the dangers of between season flying in Northern British Columbia, is expected to halt the Lowe expedition to Alaska. Before he was located, it was planned to use the two planes in connection with the search in the Atlin district for Capt. E. J. A. Burke and his two companions. Blunt, while quite badly shaken and cut up, is in very good shape, considering his narrow escape from death.

The Fleetster plane had moved from the aviation field to Sawmill Lake without her load with a view to taking off with skis on a good stretch of ice obtainable there. The machine was landed perfectly by Barrows but, while it was being taxied up the lake, the ice caved in and the big plane is now sitting half way through the ice partly submerged in 20 feet of water, her wings keeping her from sliding entirely through the ice and sinking. Pilot Burrows had a narrow escape from drowning when the machine submerged with him but quick action saved his life. Edward Lowe jr., president of the Airways concern, who was standing on the ice when it collapsed, suffered badly from shock and drenching. With one of their planes wrecked and the other sitting in the water where it will have to remain until it freezes over so it can be dug out, the Pacific International Airways men feel that it was a tough day and that the north is just about a relentless now as it was in the good old days of '98. However, it might have been a good deal worse, they admit, and some of them have good reason to be thankful that they are still alive.

Bad weather was holding Pilot Everett L. Wasson at Whitehorse this morning. He is anxious to get out and locate Capt. E. J. A. Burke and two companions whose deserted plane he found a few days ago in the Frances Lake area. Having completed what is considered to be a very thorough search of the sector around Prince Rupert, Flight Lieutenant Phinney and Flying Officer Dunlap were this morning awaiting orders from headquarters as to their future operations.

COASTLINE EXAMINED

Check-Up By Planes South of Here Reveals No Trace of Renahan Plane or Party

In a careful reconnaissance of the inlets and coastlines between here and Butedale, Flight Lieutenant Phinney and Flying Officer Dunlap, in the two Royal Canadian Air Force seaplanes, which have been operating out of here for over two weeks, were unable yesterday to find any trace of Pilot Robin Renahan and his two companions or their plane which disappeared on the night of October 28 while en route from Seattle to Atlin to join the search for Capt. E. J. A. Burke. While it has been pretty well established that Renahan met his fate north rather than south of here, it was felt advisable that the country between Butedale and Lowe Inlet, which had not been checked, should be looked over. Butedale, where he gassed up and pushed off at 5:20 p.m. that night, stating that he hoped to make Ketchikan before stopping for the day, was Renahan's last known landing place before his disappearance. Despite the fact that the aerial search has now been on for over three weeks out of here and Ketchikan not the slightest clue has yet been disclosed as to what might have been Renahan's fate.

Leaving at 10:30 a.m. and returning about 3 p.m. yesterday, Flight Lieutenant Phinney and Flying Officer Dunlap proceeded to Butedale but were unable to land there owing to the place being obscured in fog. They cruised along Douglas Channel and up Kitimaat Arm but were unable to get as far as Kitimaat village owing to fog. They crossed Pitt Island and passed over the north end of Banks Island, returning to the city via Ogden Channel. No landings were made during the day.

Having completed what is considered to be a very thorough search of the sector around Prince Rupert, Flight Lieutenant Phinney and Flying Officer Dunlap were this morning awaiting orders from headquarters as to their future operations.

TERM FOR MAYORALTY

It is proposed that there shall be a two-year term for the mayoralty instead of one as at present. Judging from street talk there seems to be a good deal of difference of opinion in regard to this. It is solely a matter for the people to decide. They will be given an opportunity to vote on it at the election. A bylaw has been passed by the city council and if endorsed by the people will become law. If defeated, the condition remains as at present.

Those who favor the bylaw say they think every man who takes the position of mayor should be given a two-year term because if he is a good man his usefulness would be greater the second year than the first.

Those who oppose the move say that if a man shows ability there is nothing to prevent his getting a second term but if he does not, he can be ousted at the end of a year and a better man put in his place. They think the one-year term a protection to the public.

Both systems have their advantages. We should be glad to hear from any who have opinions to express in regard to this matter.

BREAK CANADIAN MONOPOLY

Canada has been looming rather large in the public eye in the United States of late. During the last federal elections night after night speakers dealt with the lumber situation and urged that the duty on lumber coming in from Canada be raised in order to prevent importations and to keep their own men employed.

The latest is to operate a big paper mill in Alaska for the purpose of breaking "the Canadian monopoly of the paper business."

Only a few years ago the businessmen of Ketchikan tried to induce their federal government to impose regulation on the halibut business that would prevent the sale of American caught fish in Prince Rupert. All these are decidedly unfriendly attitudes. They are fostered by interests that wish to make a profit by the change and they have no interest whatever in international relations. They see only that their small sister is making some progress and they want to get away from her the small amount of business that she has.

We do not like this attitude of mind which, while outwardly very friendly, is really fostering enmity. Canada is struggling to make for herself a place in the sun and the United States ought to be big enough to allow her to do it in peace and without trying to checkmate her every move.

RADIO INTERFERENCE

Editor, Daily News:—There is at present approximately $100,000 invested in radio by citizens of Prince Rupert and they are not getting the value out of their investment on account of the excessive interference in the city especially during the past week.

We would not advise anyone in Prince Rupert to buy a radio until the interference in this city is eliminated as it is impossible lately to get radio reception without excessive noise.

It is up to the radio owners and dealers of Prince Rupert to get solidly behind the Radio Association and government inspector, so that this matter can be taken up with the proper authorities and have this unnecessary noise eliminated.

GALA DAY AT METLAKATLA

Whole Village Rejoices at Marriage of Miss Florence Rudland and Francis Leask

Yesterday Metlakatla was in gala mood. Flags fluttered, bands played, church and town bells rang. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Florence Louise Rudland, youngest daughter of Henry Rudland, to Francis Leask, second son of William Leask, chief councillor of Metlakatla.

The ceremony, which was solemnized in St. Peter's Church by Rev. Canon Rushbrook, was a brilliant yet impressive function. The bride, attired in white satin with the regulation veil and coronet of orange blossoms, was attended by six maids while the groom also has six supporters.

The relatives of the contracting parties entertained the whole village. The feast was a sumptuous one. At the close, the various guests departed to their homes laden with as much as they could carry.

SHIPBOARD INTERVIEWS

Ambassador, Motor Car Magnate and Singer, Example of Day's Work of Newsmen

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Smooth and slow through a thin fog and the gathering dusk the great ship slid to anchor of quarantine, at the entrance to New York Harbor. The sharp hoarse roar of the chain tearing out of the hawse-holes, tinkling of bells came across the water where waited on the Customs Cutter the ship new reporters and the camera-men with tripods and flashlight paraphernalia. The Aquitania lay, a long sharp bulk of shadow her belly studded with amber and orange lights, while half a dozen tugs backed and swung toward her.

The reporters were impatient. After a lengthy wait at the barge office on Manhattan's lower tip the cutter had started them off presumably for the Aquitania at one o'clock in the afternoon. She headed at a good rate, for Quarantine off Station Island and there she lay until seven in the evening. The Italian gentleman with the 1870 collar kept walking about the deck muttering below his breath. He was going out to interview Galli Curci who had just returned from a tempestuous time in Europe. Nobody had much to eat. The photographers amused themselves like school boys running about and playing practical jokes on each other. The early view of Manhattan's sky-line in bright misty weather faded from the minds of the special reporters as their interiors became void. These special men who were sent down to interview Sir Ronald Lindsay, the new British Ambassador to Washington, had thought the topless towers grand. But that was half a day ago. The Aquitania was 18 hours late because of the fog.

When they got aboard they learned that it had thickened up again inside and a steward told one of the Americans the Cunarder would anchor for the night rather than run the risk of crashing her bulk through a ferry boat.

Consciously or unconsciously the reported used English slang in reply: "You're spoofing me."

"No, kidding," said the steward diplomatically.

Tallest Diplomat

Sir Ronald obviously enjoyed his interview. He was asked innumerable questions about politics, the economic situation, prohibition, his family, his sports. One of the reporters said to the ambassador, "Well, Sir Ronald, Sir Esme Howard may have been dean of the diplomatic corps, but you will certainly be the tallest diplomatist in Washington." Sir Ronald is six feet four inches tall.

The ambassador explained gently that since he was diplomat he could not belong to any political party.

"Yes, sir, but if you did belong to a party what party would you belong to?"

Sir Ronald laughed at the jocular insistence and then said, "I think I would be in England what we call a crossbencher." He explained—drawing lines on the table-cloth with his finger to show how the benches were set in Parliament.

The reporters figured Sir Charles Marsden who had some interest in an English motor company—was going down to Daytona Beach to see Kaye Don race his "Silver Bullet."

Jericho Excavations

"I thought you were going to ask me about excavations in Jericho," Sir Charles said. He talked for a while about motors—and expressed an admiration for the way the Americans "pushed their good men ahead" in business. Then he talked about Jericho and now by digging under the falling walls the excavators had discovered crockery which proved the Philistines had not been in the neighborhood until after the disaster. He attributed the fallen walls to an earthquake.

It began to look as though the newspapermen would have to stay aboard all night.

Galli Curci's manager was anxious to explain about Madame's illness in Europe and the uproar occasioned by the report that she was ill-received.

The reporters and photographers milled around through the ship. Somebody tried to get a game of cards going. Then a tug provided by the company dropped out of the fog and hugging books and papers and cameras everybody scrambled a dozen feet down a rope ladder to the swaying deck. On the way home the uneasy ones stayed on deck in thick rain listening to a thousand hooting roars, the jangle of warning bells, and the uneven strains of "Just Break the News to Mother" mounting through the ventilator from the cabin.

Eleven o'clock and all's well at the Battery, the subway, the office, the story—the life of a ship news reporter in his 12 hour day.

NEW GARNISHES AND DRESSINGS FOR SALADS

A dash of paprika, a sprinkle of nuts, bright strips of pimiento or green pepper, or slices of stuffed olives or hard cooked eggs—and behold a new and tempting salad.

It doesn't take much extra time to give these intriguing touches to the salad. A little green vegetable colouring added to the gelatine salad makes it delectable and decorative looking. Slices of maraschino cherries or diced pimientos are effective. Grated cheese, grated raw rutabaga or raw carrot should garnish the Halloween or Thanksgiving salad; holly made from sweet cucumber pickles for leaves and pimiento for berries, or mistletoe made of green peppers and tiny pearl onions, the Christmas salad.

The same new interest can be given by varying the dressing. Here I give you a basic recipe for mayonnaise and some of the appetizing variations which can be made from it. You will notice that one of the ingredients of my basic dressing is Carnation Milk. This is most important. Let me tell you why.

Carnation Milk contributes smoothness and richness

Doubly rich in cream, Carnation Milk contributes this richness to everything in which it is used. In addition, the cream content is broken up into finest particles by "homogenization", so that the texture of any dish in which Carnation is used is notably smooth and delicate and fine.

Domestic science experts agree that Carnation Milk gives cooking results that you cannot get with even the finest of bottled milk. Carnation Milk is simply pure, sweet, whole milk, evaporated to double richness, "homogenized" to keep the rich cream distributed all through the milk, and sterilized for safe-keeping. You will find it convenient, dependable and economical for all your cooking. Send for free Cook Book, Address Carnation Co., Limited, 134 Abbott Street, Vancouver, B.C.

Carnation Creamy No-Egg Mayonnaise—2 tsp. sugar, 1 tsp. paprika, 1 tsp. salt, few grains pepper, 1 tsp. dry mustard, 1 cup Carnation milk, 2 1/2 tsp. vinegar, 1 1/4 cups salad oil. Mix dry ingredients with Carnation; beat in vinegar; add oil gradually, beating thoroughly. Chill. If thinner mayonnaise is desired, use less oil or thin with undiluted Carnation before using. Keep in glass covered jar in cold place. Recipe makes 1 pint.

Thousand Island Dressing—2 cups Carnation No-Egg Mayonnaise, 1/2 cup Chili sauce, 1 tsp. finely cut onion, 3 tsp. diced pimiento, 3 tsp. diced green pepper, 2 hard cooked eggs, cut fine, 2 tsp. chopped sweet pickle. Mix ingredients and chill.

Cucumber Dressing—1 cup Carnation No-Egg Mayonnaise, 1/2 cup diced cucumbers, 1 1/2 tsp. grated horseradish.

Cheese Dressing—1 pkz. cream cheese, 3 tsp. chopped sweet pickle, Carnation No-Egg Mayonnaise. Mash cream cheese, stir into it enough mayonnaise to make it the desired consistency, add pickle. Chill and serve with vegetable salads.

AND REMEMBER

that the extra deliciousness which you have found that Carnation Milk contributes to some dishes extends to every dish in which it is used. Try Carnation Milk for all your cooking. You'll see!

ORATORIO TAKEN UP

Ladies' Music Club Has Highly Successful Meeting In Cathedral

A most enjoyable and profitable afternoon was spent by those who attended the meeting of the Ladies' Music Club held in St. Andrew's Cathedral yesterday afternoon.

Before an audience that left no vacant seat in the centre of the church, a very fine program on Oratorio was given.

The president, Mrs. R. L. McIntosh, in a few opening remarks, informed her hearers that in the spring the club would be sponsoring a concert in aid of funds to be guaranteed to the Toronto Conservatory of Music for examining pupils here and asked for their patronage at that time.

After the singing of "O Canada," Mrs. C. L. Monroe, who was in charge of the afternoon's proceedings, read a paper of much interest on Mendelssohn's "Elijah," descriptive of this and other Oratorios.

The program, which was of unusual interest, and particularly well rendered throughout, was as follows: Mrs. E. J. Smith being the able accompanist:

- "O Canada."
- Paper on the Oratio "Elijah," Mrs. C. L. Monroe.
- Organ Solo—"Lord God of Abraham" (from "Elijah"), Mrs. E. J. Smith.

Investment In Building and Loan is Sound

Broad Field Offered By Intermountain Building and Loan Association of Canada

Company Expanding

Assets Exceed Half a Million Dollars — Non-Speculative Investment First Mortgage Security Only

Attention throughout British Columbia has been widely directed to the good work accomplished through the agency of Building & Loan Associations by the activities of the Intermountain Building & Loan Association of Canada, incorporated under the Savings & Loan Association Act of British Columbia.

Founded upon the sound principle of co-operation, encouraging the commendable quality of thrift and establishing its investments under strict Government supervision in such form as to make them unusually safe, building and loan associations are institutions which are well worth the most careful study and investigation.

The records made by them in giving unusual returns in money invested the opportunity to build up a capital account which earns money while it is being established and the facilities and assistance afforded members who desire to build or own their own homes makes the investment plan under which they operate particularly attractive.

Not New Experiment
Building and loan associations are not an experiment. They have stood the test of time and the vicissitudes of financial depression. Year after year they have increased in popularity to such an extent that they now play a prominent part in the community life of all countries where advanced civilization prevails. Especially is this true of the Old Country, the United States and Canada. In these countries as well as others, the prominent part they play has been recognized by the government which, to thoroughly safeguard the shareholders, have enacted special legislation governing such associations. It is under this strict government regulation that the Intermountain Building & Loan Association carries on its business in Canada.

In British Columbia there are prosperous business men who, as wage earners, laid the foundation of their present prosperity through their payments of $5.00 or $10.00 per month in these associations. These monthly payments were small but, compounded, they grew rapidly to an amount which enabled him to swing deals or engage in business to his profit. Then again there are hundreds and hundreds of men in B.C. who own their own homes who would never have become property owners had it not been for the opportunities made possible through building and loan associations.

Intermountain Association
The Intermountain Building & Loan Association of Canada, which maintains to the highest degree the benefits of such associations in the province, has men behind it of the highest standing in the community. It maintains offices in Vancouver, Victoria and Trail.

The association is playing an ever-increasing part in the building up and development of the province through the encouragement of thrift by the payment of monthly sums, the 7% compound interest which they are able to offer making their plan peculiarly attractive. The association also offers exceptional facilities to shareholders who are
