Three Men Saved By Hairline Margin From Monoxide Rush

Rescue Work at Coalmont Is Now Suspended and It May Be Two Weeks or Month Before Bodies of Entombed Men Can Be Taken Out

BLAKEBURN, Aug. 18:-By a hairline margin last night, three more names missed being added to the list of 45 who perished in Wednesday's coal mine explosion here. George Murray, manager of the Coalmont Collieries Ltd., Fire Boss Frank Bond and Wester Salimpa, a miner, were caught in a rush of carbon monoxide gas while at work "sealing off" a fire 1800 feet from the mouth of the mine. They just managed to reach the head of the pit when they collapsed.

Meanwhile all work on No. 15 level, where rescue workers were pushing towards the 42 bodies which are still entombed, has been suspended until the fire is blocked off. It will probably be a fortnight or perhaps a month before all the bodies are recovered.

will have an important influence on your fall wardrobe. So put aside your golf clubs and tennis rackets for the moment and lend me your ears. I have much of interest to report about the new things for autumn displayed at the mid-season openings. The debate about skirt lengths is definitely over-with an overwhelming victory for the longer silhouette. Normal waistlines are taken for granted. Coat lengths, after a period of hesitation, advance floorward-the daytime models shown by Premet measuring nine inches from the ground. Peplums and capelets survive in smartly modified forms. Trimmings increase in importance-with such houses as Vionnet, Worth, Lanvin and others advocat-

The

Long and Short of The Fur Coat

Question

A little slower to join in the new silhouette movement . . .

the fur coat family is now among its strongest advocates.__

All of which means that this year's fur coats have very little in common with last year's. We are in an entirely different era. The new movement expresses itself with particular emphasis in regard to the length question. Your new fur coat must be either definitely long-or it must show a generous amount of the skirt beneath it. A fur coat that displays just two or three inches of the costume is decidely declasse. It is the afternoon coats-developed in moire caracul, Persian lamb, broadtail or Summer ermine-that are long, in accordance with the frock styles. Sports types and formal fur coats both take a stand for the three-fourths length. Leopard, logwood, seal, otter, lapin make the casual sports coats-while white ermine, butter ermine, white caracul and white lapin are used for evening models, which, by the way, usually show uneven hemlines. The trend is toward eloquence, luxury, variety-and so we look forward to a most pleasing style season in furs. I, for one, am very glad to see the end of the era when every woman looked

FALL FASHIONS LAND FROM PARIS

struck in the new woolens and worsteds—the designs being frank adaptations of prevailing patterns in men's suitings. Ribbed silks, such as marocain, heavy canton crepe faille, as well as bengalines, are good. For coatings, looped or curled yarn fabrics, such as the new boucles, wool eponge and the like, are so old fashioned in effect that they strike an entirely new note of sophistication which promises success. Metals are staging a comeback-but the textures are lighter, making them more youthful. Patterns, too, are youthful-in exceedingly intricate allover effects. Huge motifs, giving a poster-like effect, are developed in pictursque fabrics for evening wear. They are used on a variety of materials . . georgettes, poult de soie, taffeta, moire, duchesse satin, chiffon and sheer lames.

Fall Coat Style Secrets

You can tell them by their collars and their sleeves-the fall coats of 1930. Some have entire sleeves of fur-others have elaborate cloth sleeves with puff outline or a standing fabric cuff above the elbow. Collars are elaborate in outline-and usually they are furred. The curly surface furs are best-but flat furs with surface depth and the longhaired types are also widely used. Deep cape collars, sometimes of waistline depth, are approved in such a soft fur as mole. They are convertible-and may be worn as a softly draped shawl collar that is decidedly swank. Fur borders are smart-but they must be broken-not extend around the entire hemline. Belts appear on almost every coat for both sports or dress-and they ushally hit a little above the normal waistline. Many of the sleeves are set in from the neckline-giving a new and very pleasing shoulder line. Tweeds in monotone and two-tone effects, as well as colorful mixtures, are receiving the lion's share of attention for sports. Velvet-finished woolens, like fine suedes, duvetyns and velours, are chosen for dressy types. The flared silhouette remains-but it is achieved by ingenious cut rather than by the more obvious set-in godets. Excepting for the sports types, coats are definitely longer.

Blackberry Is First Among New Colors

"Off-blacks," as Paris describes them, are in the foreground of the smart color picture this fall. Blackberry leads all the rest-and what a lovely, elusive shade it is-really a black with a soft overtone of blue that is captivating. The plum shades are good-both blue plum and red plum. Rich browns, tinged with red or purple, are in the limelight—as are the wine tones and extremely dark pure red. Very dark green will have prominence, too, among these many deep shades that are stealing the thunder of pure black in the race for favor this fall.

Poorest Exhibition of Ball Seen This Season When Native Sons Make Twenty Safeties

In the poorest exhibition of ball seen this season, Native Sons of Canada wallopped the Centrals by a 23-5 score in yesterday afternoon's league fixture. Making 20 hits off four pitchers, the Sons took every opportunity to fatten their batting averages, and the team's average for the game was .500. Nick Chenoski, who started for the Centrals, had a sore arm and after two innings, in which the winners scored five runs on seven hits, retired in favor of Downie. He just faced the first two and was headed nicely toward walking the third when Dido Gurvich went in to try his luck. He didn't fare much better as the Sons continued to bombard all sections of the field with hits. In all the Sons scored 14 runs and 13 hits off Dido in the three innings he was on the mound. In the sixth, Gavin, third baseman relieved Gurvich in the box and succeeded in retiring the first three men who faced him, two by the strikeout

Plans have been received for the construction of a new Salvation Army Barracks to be built on Granville Court.

A unique feature of an arch to be erected at the foot of Sixth Street in connection with the reception of Sir Wilfred Laurier will be the insertion of two glass panels in one of which will be several trout swimming and in the other specimens of native gold.

Not an argument can be raised in Stewart as to why the power company should not be granted these ights. Everyone is in favor of it, admitting that it will be a wonderful thing for the district as a whole. Stewart, because of its situation and easy access to Meziadin, will naturally be the distributing point if and when the company decides to go ahead with its project.

Across the bridge the new road, a mile and a half long, can be plainly seen and makes a good appear-
