American Defender Successful In Defending Yachting Trophy Against Challenger From Britain

United States Sloop Finished Five Minutes and Fifty Seconds Ahead of Shamrock Today to Win Fourth Straight Victory and Series

NEWPORT, Rhode Island, Sept. 18.—The United States sloop Enterprise today completed a successful defence of the America's Cup when she won the fourth straight race and the series from Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, the British challenger, four victories to none. The American yacht finished the thirty mile triangular course in three hours, ten minutes and five seconds. The Shamrock crossed the finish line at 1:55:55 p.m., five minutes and fifty seconds behind the Enterprise. It was the closest race of the series and the British vessel held the lead for a part of the time but fell behind and could not again overtake the American although she caught up on her considerably. There was a brisk wind and a choppy sea, weather conditions being, if anything, more suitable to the challenger.

Order Made For More Jurors at Assize Session

As quite a number of persons summoned for jury service did not turn up at the opening of the Supreme Court Assizes yesterday, an order was made on Sheriff S. A. Nickerson to summon 14 talesmen. However, counsel were able to agree on a panel out of such jurors as were in attendance for the Ness case. The Grand Jury and other members of the petit jury were then excused until 9.30 this morning when court resumed. It is understood that the Grand Jury intends to make an inspection of various public buildings in the city and report upon same.

SHOW WAS EXCELLENT

Delightful Entertainment Offered By Elks' Lodge in Presentation of "Queen of Hearts"

Musical Comedy

Fine Musical Score added to Rollicking Farce to Make Good Measure

The rollicking and melodious 3-act musical comedy "Queen of Hearts," presented last night at the Moose Hall under the direction of the Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McNaughton by the local Elks' Lodge in aid of its Christmas Cheer Fund, was a really delightful entertainment. A large audience in attendance had nothing but favorable comment to make of the show which included not only a laughable stage farce which by itself would have gone over well but, interspersed with this, for a good measure, a fine program of colorful and tuneful musical, chorus, dancing and revue numbers, several of which virtually brought down the house. All participating in the program reflected great credit not only upon themselves but upon those responsible for their training. Beautiful costumes were a feature. The farce plot revolves around the consequence of a quarrelsome business partnership and many ludicrous situations are brought about. Taking the major parts as the quarrelsome partners are C. J. McNaughton and James Farquhar. Mr. McNaughton is a professional showman and, as might be expected, acquits himself with credit. As for Jimmy Farquhar, stage plays in Prince Rupert are hardly complete without him and he is cast on this occasion in a part giving him opportunity to display his histrionic talents with credit to himself. It is one of those blustery roles for which he is so well suited. Leading ladies' parts are taken by Mrs. McNaughton and Miss Connie Thorne. Mrs. McNaughton is a very winsome fiancee for Jimmy Farquhar. Miss Thorne, making her first appearance on the local stage, takes splendidly the part of a charming wife who may be excused for her temperamental through the arising of situations which she cannot control. In any case, Miss Thorne does her hysteresis just as if she meant them and is quite at home behind the footlights. Alex Cannon, another regular on the local stage, leaves nothing to be desired in his depicting of the decrepit and faithful old bookkeeper. Another find on the local stage is Fred Stephens playing as a dictatorial lawyer. Fred does this so well that many wondered that he had not been called upon before to take part in this sort of thing. It may be expected that he will not be overlooked in the future. Another of more important roles is that of the emotional maid taken by Miss Jean Roberson who is not only if not vivacious in this part. Miss Nellie Gurvich makes a demure stenographer and Bill Mitchell a unique office boy. Both are very good.

After outfooting the Enterprise for the first twenty minutes, the Shamrock's lead was rapidly cut down by the defender which was far to windward and, at 11.25, the American boat stepped into the lead and was estimated to be a mile ahead, completely reversing the first twenty minutes of sailing. The Shamrock continued to drop behind, being evidently unable to point into the wind and lost valuable time heading shoreward searching for smoother water. At three minutes past 12 o'clock the Enterprise rounded the first ten-mile mark with the Shamrock following about nine minutes later. The breeze continued to freshen, blowing up to eighteen miles an hour as the Enterprise began the second leg—a close reach. With a heavier breeze, the Shamrock managed to pull down the Enterprise's lead at the second mark which was rounded by the defender at two minutes after 1 o'clock, the Shamrock following less than seven minutes later.

G. NESS IS ACQUITTED

Jury Finds Local Fisherman Not Guilty of Scuttling Boat to Collect Insurance

George Ness was this morning acquitted by a jury in the Assize Court on a charge of having scuttled his own boat C.N. for the purpose of collecting insurance on her. The jury was out about an hour and a half after Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald had charged them. Ernest Lewis, co-defendant with Ness, was automatically set free on a similar charge. The judge in his charge warned the jury that the chief witness, Ernest Lewis, was an accomplice of Ness and his evidence should not be accepted unless fully corroborated. If the accused told the truth in giving evidence on his own behalf, then he was not guilty. His wife had corroborated the evidence. Milton Gonzales was defence counsel for both Ness and Lewis. W. E. Fisher prosecuted.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—As a protest against the government's tariff proposals, Rt. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King yesterday moved an amendment to the motion to go into committee of ways and means stating that "this House regrets that the government has seen fit at a special session called to deal only with unemployment to propose great increases in customs taxation on a wide range of commodities under circumstances which preclude this House and country from securing adequate information regarding the proposals and proper Parliamentary discussion of them. In the opinion of this House, the tremendous increases in taxation proposed will not end unemployment but will inevitably increase the cost of production in the primary industries of agriculture, fishing, mining and lumbering, thus making it more difficult for Canadian producer in these industries to meet world competition in marketing their products." Speaking on the tariff proposals, Mr. King said: "I wish to protest in the strongest language against the time at which amendments to the tariff have been brought down and the circumstances under which they have been introduced. The government was seeking expedition so that its members could go to the Imperial Conference. Common decency and courtesy alone would demand that any changes in the tariff against Empire goods might be left until after the Imperial Conference."

RIGHT POLICY

Under our British system of rule by the majority, Premier Bennett is taking the proper action in raising the tariff on manufactured goods imported from other countries. As long as the manufacturers do not raise the prices as a result of the protection they receive, all will be well.

With the assumption that the market for Canadian goods will be enlarged it ought to be that Canadian manufacturers will lower rather than raise prices, bringing them nearer to the prices at which similar goods are sold in the United States.

While this paper has been opposed to raising the tariff higher than it has been, the voice of the people has to be recognized. The people have asked for the change and the government undoubtedly had a clear mandate from them to carry it out.

Further than that, we believe Liberals and Conservatives will agree in hoping that the change of policy will be good for the country. We need more prosperity and less politics. If Mr. Bennett can give us prosperity greater than the former government gave, we shall all be glad that he was elected. If, on the other hand, it should develop that prosperity does not result from the change, the people will make it their business to change back to the former administration. Results will be watched with great interest, both here and everywhere throughout Canada.

HOW BIG ARE YOU?

The size of a man is indicated by the manner in which he stands defeat. If he is a big man he comes up smiling when knocked down. He does not bear petty spites in connection with his defeat. He takes hold and is ready to fight again.

Several examples of local men who have borne their defeat well are outstanding. There is the case of Colonel Peck, who was defeated by Fred Stork. The Colonel took his defeat like a real man, met his opponents with a shake of the hand and congratulations and best wishes and is again in the field of politics representing a constituency in Southern British Columbia. Another outstanding example was that of S. M. Newton who some years ago was beaten so badly that even his friends predicted that he would never be heard from again. But Mr. Newton was not really beaten, but only temporarily cast down. He returned to the political game to be elected mayor several times with large majorities.

When a person enters politics he must expect to be beaten. Most of the best statesmen of the country have been beaten. It indicates a petty spirit to resent it. Only the small man does that.

times with large majorities. Colonel McMordie was on more than one occasion overwhelmed by votes but never really beaten. M. M. Stephens laughs with his opponents and enjoys the fight even though not always victorious. George Bushby is a prince of good losers. John Dybhavn bore no malice while Manson lost and won with equal equanimity.

Some women are not as foolish as appearances would seem to indicate.

SENSATION AT ASSIZES

Ernest Lewis Turns King's Evidence Against George Ness in Scuttling Case

Ernest Lewis, youthful co-defendant, caused a mild sensation when he turned King's evidence Wednesday afternoon at the Supreme Court Assizes against George Ness in the case in which the two men were charged jointly with having scuttled the fish packer C.N. Lewis told the court how Ness had said that he was going to "drown the boat." Lewis said that he would have nothing to do with it to which Ness replied that he did not want him to have anything to do with it only to be a witness for him in case he should get into trouble. Lewis then proceeded to tell of the operations of Ness leading up to the alleged scuttling. Taking a dynamo from the larger boat and putting it in a skiff, Ness then went aboard the packer again and went below. A few minutes later there was a slight explosion and Ness came through the door as though he had been knocked off his feet. Smoke was meantime coming out of the doors and windows of the boat. Ness took rocks from the deck and threw them in the fish hold. Then the two men got in the skiff and Ness took a double-bitted axe that lay in the skiff and chopped a hole in the port side of the boat. Later, although the smoke ceased and the fire seemed to abate, Ness went ashore and got a skiffload of rocks and dumped them on the C.N. when it seemed to stop sinking as the water reached the level of the pilothouse. Going back to the beach, Ness, according to Lewis' story, took the dynamo into the bush and hid it.

Other witnesses at the trial testified that there was no evidence left on the craft of an explosion or fire which, Ness declared in his insurance protest, had necessitated his scuttling the boat. W. H. McCallum, insurance agent, told of $6,000 having been paid in insurance on the boat. A large part of this went to Dr. W. T. Kergin, who had two mortgages on the boat, and the balance to Ness and Ed. Christiansen, his partner.

After Lewis had given his sensational evidence, Milton Gonzales, defence counsel, asked for an adjournment that he might prepare his cross-examination. The case resumed later in the evening, after dinner and reached its concluding stages last night before being adjourned till this morning.

After the Grand Jury, through its foreman, J. A. Smith, had brought in a true bill in the case of Ness, separately from Lewis, the accused was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the charge of "having at or near the entrance of Kitkatia Inlet on or about May 7 unlawfully cast away or destroyed the gasboat known as C.N." The empanelment of a petit jury was proceeded with, those agreed upon being: Arthur Brooks-bank, foreman, Frederick W. Lawrence (Ocean Falls), Joseph Brown, Murdo McArthur, W. H. Simpson (Houston), H. A. Swain (Terrace), L. S. Davidson (Stewart), Ellsworth Mustard (Premier), Alex Creerar (Anyox), William J. Curtiss (Stewart), Frank Dresser (Anyox) and J. W. Reynolds. Defence counsel exercised many challenges and the crown prosecutor, W. E. Fisher, two stand asides.

The Crown's Case
Reviewing the evidence that would be presented by the crown, Mr. Fisher explained that witnesses would be produced to prove the condition of the boat and that there were no subsequent signs of explosion or fire although the accused had signed a statement that there had been such a terrific explosion and fire that he had had to cut a hole in the boat and submerge her in order to extinguish the fire.

J. H. McLeod, collector of customs, produced a copy of the C.N.'s registration papers. She was 30 feet long and equipped with an Eastern Standard four cylinder gas engine. The boat was owned equally by Ness and Christiansen and two mortgages of $1880 each were held on it by Dr. W. T. Kergin. After the sinking, Mr. McLeod admitted in cross-examination, Ness had been in his office but he could not recall the nature of their conversation.

S. D. Johnston, insurance agent, told of Ness presenting to him his protest for insurance and read the protest which had been signed by the accused. There had been some engine trouble, the protest read, but a change had been made to another gas tank and the engine seemed to run smoothly again. They were proceeding up Ogden Channel when he (Ness) opened the pilot house door and there was a terrific explosion which threw both men stunned to the deck. When they came to, they were driven out of the pilot house by the flames. The hatch covers were blown off and the vessel was all aflame. The only thing to do was to cut a hole in the hull so that the vessel might fill and sink to the water's edge, thus extinguishing the flames. The boat, however, after this had been done, continued to sink by the stern and in about an hour and a half had completely disappeared.

Insurance Paid
W. H. McCallum told of having insured the C.N. on August 1, 1929, for $6,000 on application of Ness. The boat had been valued at $6,750. After the accident, witness had been asked by the insurance company to get a personal statement from Ness. This he had secured from Ness. The insurance was paid in two drafts—one for $4,147.35 being turned over to Dr. W. T. Kergin, who held the mortgages on the C. N., and the other for $1,837.65 to Ed. Christiansen, joint owner of the boat with Ness. Ness had asked witness to give the check to Christiansen rather than to himself.

Under cross-examination, Mr. McCallum said that, on several occasions, both before and after the payment of the insurance, Ness had spoken to him expressing the desire to salvage the C.N. as he believed he knew where he could find it.

Austin Kennedy, engineer and diver for the Pacific Salvage Co., told of having located the C.N. in fifty feet of water near the entrance to Kitkatia Inlet. There were seaweed and barnacles growing on the boat when he dove to it but cabin and pilot house were intact. After the boat had been located, it was towed to a nearby beach where it was examined thoroughly. Inside the boat witness testified that there might have been ten or twelve tons of rocks, the majority being on the port side in the fish hold. There were a couple of rocks in the bunk on the starboard side. Witness saw no signs of an explosion. He could remember no windows broken nor bulkhead blown out. Neither were there any signs of fire. The most of the rocks were thrown out of the boat and a patch was placed on the port bilge over a hole which looked like it had been cut with an axe. The boat was then brought into Prince Rupert and turned over to Capt. Paul Armour.

Difficult to Do
Under cross-examination, witness said he could hardly see how the hole could be cut in the boat with so many rocks on the same side.

Fire Chief D. N. McDonald was the next witness. He told of having made an examination of the C.N. at the dry dock on August 12. He could not locate any signs of fire or explosion. Fire usually left signs of scorching and an explosion usually opened up the bow of a boat.

It would only be a very slight explosion that would leave no signs, the fire chief said under cross-examination. The only sign of fire was a slightly scorched piece of timber in the fish hold. The chief's opinion was that there had been no explosion or fire.

Examined the Boat
Capt. Paul Armour, local manager of the Pacific Salvage Co., told of having been instructed by the underwriters to save the C.N. He had gone out and located the boat but had not been present at the actual salvage operations. After the boat had been brought to port, however, he made a thorough examination of it. He saw no signs whatever of fire or explosion. The usual result of an explosion was to open up the stem, raise the pilot house and decking, etc. In this case there had been nothing like this. Not even any windows in the pilot house had been broken. A lantern and electric light bulb above the engine were unbroken. Witness examined the gas line and found the valve to the carburetor closed. The engine could not have been running with this valve closed. Ignition wires had been disconnected and there was no sign of a dynamo or generator.

Capt. Armour proceeded to tell of a conversation with Ness the next day in the presence of the crew of the Helac, the salvage boat. He (Ness) wanted to know who was going to pay him for the two months he had spent looking for the C.N. Armour replied that he (Ness) would have to put in his bill to the underwriters in the usual way. Asked how the rocks had got in the boat, Ness explained that, after he had located the boat, he had taken three dozy loads of rocks from shore and thrown them on to the boat as she lay on the bottom so she would not drift away.

Under cross-examination, Capt. Armour insisted that there should be some signs of fire or explosion if these had actually occurred. He admitted, however, that explosions did queer things some times. Members of the salvage crew had had specific orders not to tamper with anything on board.

On Ernest Lewis being called, Mr. Gonzales objected to him, as one of the accused, taking the stand for the defence. As a matter of fact, he had been given no notice that Lewis was to be called by the crown.

Gave Notice
It turned out, however, that Mr. Fisher had given notice to T. W. Brown, Mr. Gonzales' associate in the defence, that he intended to call Lewis.

Mr. Justice D. A. MacDonald ruled that Lewis should take the stand. Mr. Gonzales could have an adjournment for cross-examination if he desired.

Lewis testified that they had gone to Porcher Island to pick up some logs which he and Ness had obtained during beach combing operations. They went to the fox farm and stayed there overnight, proceeding next day to Hanson's Harbor to get two skiffloads of rock to be used for ballast in the bow. Later Ness came to the boat and said that the logs were not there. He then suggested that they go back to the fox farm and load a little furniture to take into Prince Rupert. They got half a dozen chairs and, as it was getting late, decided to wait until next day before setting out for Prince Rupert.

The next morning, witness was aroused by Ness who was already up and taking in the anchor. Breakfast had also been cooked by Ness and after witness had had his meal he went out on deck and saw some rocks lying on the starboard side of the deck. It was at this time that Ness had said he was going "to drown the boat," witness demurring from having anything to do with such a thing. Witness then gave details of what had happened up to the time of the sinking of the C.N.

After the sinking, witness and accused took to the skiff and rowed to Oona River. About a month later witness told Capt. Armour where the boat could be found.

At the request of Mr. Gonzales, the case was adjourned at this point.

EASY WIN FOR HIGH

Piled Up Big Score Over Borden Street in Junior Soccer Game

The Junior Football League fall schedule got off to a start last evening when High School won over Borden Street rather easily.

High School always was on top in the first half with the hill in its favor but the second half was more even and, in spite of the one-sided score, Borden put up a plucky opposition.

Morgan kept a fine goal for Borden but he received an arm injury and did not resume in the second half. Harold Fisher, A. Hardy and J. Campbell were best for the elementary school team while Wilson had hard luck with a fine shot in the second half that Suehiro saved in a splendid manner.

High was too big and strong and had too much experience for their opponents. Walters was chief goal scorer with eight goals and Marshall and P. Fisher added two more each. Marshall a newcomer turned in a good display at outside right. Cross was a fine centre half.

High School—Suehiro; Blake, Erickson; Davies, Cross, Eby; Marshall, Hill, Walters, Welle, P. Fisher. Borden—Morgan; H. Fisher, Currie; Williscroft, Hardy, Nakamoto; Wilson, Veitch, Naylor, Campbell and Dungeate.

There was a good attendance, with the Borden School rooters adding considerably to the fun of the game.

Jack Campbell refereed.

In 1500 professional boxing matches held in New York State since last December, only 22 have ended in fous. All were main bouts.

As a pill salesman and drug corporation president respectively Sam Joy and W. H. Plommer make brief appearances to good advantage.

Musical Score

As for the excellent musical and dance program which does so much to enliven the whole entertainment, only sketchy comment can be made of a few of the more outstanding numbers.

By many, the Old Fashioned Girls' Revue in connection with Act Three was considered the best of the musical numbers. Certainly it was beautifully costumed and executed and those who said that it alone was worth the price of admission were expressing the sentiments of many. William Plommer appears as soloist, assisting Mrs. F. W. Allen as the Old Fashioned Girl. The Ballet Chorus appears as erinoline girls, the whole turn being very pretty indeed.

Another interesting item was the Kiddies Kutie Kewpy Revue in which little Miss Mickey Lawler is soloist, assisted by eight cute little girls billed as the Shetland Pony Chorus. The wee misses were brought back to the platform for repeated encores.

The Queen of Hearts Revue with Bill Mitchell as soloist and Misses Vivian Hickey and Louise Krikevsky giving a reading number was another of the prettiest items of the musical score. Both the Elks Ballet Chorus and Pony Chorus gave colorful assistance.

Mrs. Dave Brown acquitted herself well as soloist in "Sunny Side Up," used for opening and closing. Sam Joy was soloist in "Here Comes the Show Boat."

The show will be repeated tonight and tomorrow evening.

The full cast and program was as follows:

The Cast

Miss Sally Parker, The Stenographer, Miss Nellie Gurvich.
Krome, The Faithful Bookkeeper, Alex. Connon.
Jimmy, The Incurable Office Boy, Bill Mitchell.
Mrs. Geo. B. Nettleton, a Temperamental Wife, Miss Connie Thorne.
George B. Nettleton, The Crabby Senior Partner, C. J. McNaughton.
T. Boggs Johns, The Junior Partner, Jimmy Farquhar.
Tony Toler, The Pill Salesman, Sam Joy.
Florence Cole, Mr. Johns' Queen of Hearts, Mrs. Ura McNaughton.
Mr. Samuel Applegate, President of The Northwestern Drug Corporation, William Plommer.
Mr. Thos. J. Vanderholt, Attorney, Fred H. Stephens.
Coddles, The Very Romantic Maid, Miss Jean Robertson.

OMAHA, Nebraska, Sept. 18
 —Efforts are being made by the National Boxing Association to bar from future contests all fighters who are not members of the association. New York is the most outstanding state outside of the association and it is expected it, with several other states that have not come in, may make an effort to control the game against the rest of the states.

SPORT CHAT

While the fistic world has been guessing whether Jack Dempsey would attempt a comeback, the former heavyweight champion has been making financial hay as a high priced referee. This summer the Manassas Mauler refereed fights in practically every city of any consequence on the Pacific Coast. His fee ranged from $1,000 to $3,000 for each bout.

Miss Olive Gatterdam, the popular young swimmer, is to marry Jack Bond of Toronto, formerly of Tillsonburg. Miss Gatterdam's gallant effort in the Canadian National Exhibition marathon was one of the high lights of the swim. Two years ago she came to Toronto from Seattle, a 17-year old school girl, and won second place in the marathon that year. Toronto took her to its heart and last year gave her ready sympathy when a tight bathing cap forced her out of the water when she was well up in the race. This year, after a splendid race, Miss Gatterdam finished in seventh place, just out of the money.

Interior Couple Wed at Kitwanga

Mrs. Martha Simpson Became the Bride of Archibald Campbell
On Monday

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hobenscheid at Kitwanga on Monday last when Archibald Campbell and Mrs. Martha Simpson were united in wedlock.

Rev. T. H. Wright, B.A., of the United Church, Hazelton was the officiating minister. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are both members of the United Church.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Hobenscheid and the groom by R. Burton. During the signing of the register, Mrs. R. A. Sampere sang "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served by Mrs. Hobenscheid, a large number of guests being present, who did ample justice to the good things provided.

The couple will reside in Kitwanga where Mr. Campbell is employed as prospecting engineer on the C. N. R.

Failure of the city to co-operate in the matter of taxation concessions to the railway company may mean loss of business to such ports as Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle it was stated by A. W. Smithers, chairman of the board of directors of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, in the course of a conversation aboard ship recently with Charles M. Wilson, local real estate dealer.

There are busy times on the local waterfront just now among the mosquito fleet because of an order from the customs department that every decked-in boat must immediately comply with the law and have its name and hailing port on bow and stern.

While coming north this trip, the steamer Cardena had an interesting event on board when a child was born to a 16-year old Finnish girl bound for Alert Bay. The passengers got up a subscription of $52.50 which was presented to the child—a boy.

C.N.R. steamer Prince William, Capt. William Thomas, returned to port at 6 o'clock this morning from a regular voyage to the south end of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

until after dinner so that defence counsel might prepare for his cross-examination of Lewis.

Admitted Getting Drunk

Cross-examined by Milton Gonzales, Lewis admitted that he was a son-in-law of Mrs. George Ness, that he had lived with them four or five years, that he often got drunk, that he offered to show Paul Armour where the boat was sunk on consideration that Armour paid him the amount owed him by George Ness and received $15 on account. He also knew that George Ness paid the fines for his wife when she was convicted of being drunk. He did not tell Armour that Ness was already out salvaging the boat.

Witness agreed that there was liquor aboard the boat at the time it sunk. They had had a bottle of rum but he did not admit that he had drunk it all himself. He said the explosion on the boat had nearly knocked him over. He did not attempt to help put the fire out although he knew there were pyrene extinguishers aboard.

"Is it your intention to get a divorce from your wife?" asked Mr. Gonzales.

"Yes, that was my intention?" was the reply.

Witness stated that he had not been promised he might go free if he gave evidence. He admitted he knew now he should have gone to the police and reported at first. It never occurred to him. He was not drunk when he told Armour the story but had had two or three bottles of beer at a beer parlor.

For the Defence

For the defence there were three witnesses, Mrs. George Ness, Francis Tracy, a prisoner in the city lockup, and George Ness.

Mrs. Ness, an Indian woman, told her story in a very convincing way. She accounted for the fact that there were no dishes aboard the boat and that the dynamo was not there. She told of the search for the boat and of George having dropped rocks on it when found. Hooks had been used in dragging for the boat. Lewis and his wife lived with them and was drunk whenever he could get a little money.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fisher she said that they owned their own home and had made the final payment on it in July.

Francis Tracy told of experience with fires on board boats when it was almost impossible to detect evidences of it afterwards.

George John Ness, the accused, giving evidence on his own behalf said he was part owner of the C.N. He had gone to get some logs with Lewis and had taken a bottle of overproof rum. They had stopped at Oona River and put a couple of tons of rocks aboard. He told of the fire breaking out and how he had made the hole in the boat in order to save her after an explosion had occurred. Before he collected the insurance money he had located the boat and had told Dr. Kergin and Mr. McCallum, the insurance agent, about it. The check had gone to Mr. Mortimer to pay his debts. He did not get any of the money himself.

Ness said he asked Mr. McCallum what he should do about the boat and he was told to salvage it. He secured equipment and went out and then learned that the police had been out a few days before he was arrested he had heard that Lewis had been telling the police he scuttled the boat with the intention of collecting the insurance but he did not leave town. He had often quarrelled with Lewis and at one time owed him money for logging. Lewis had stayed at their house with his wife and he, Ness, had had to pay the wife's fines.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fisher, Ness said his aim in trying to salvage the boat was to get her back for his own. He felt sure the boat had never sunk to the bottom in deep water.

Addresses to the Jury

Mr. Gonzales, in addressing the jury, said it was customary to try to partly sink a boat in order to save it. The accused had tried to get the boat back, even before the insurance was paid. He suggested that the witness Lewis was selling his father-in-law for $100. He was a cultus witness and was not to be believed, a man of the lowest type. If the accused had wished to commit a criminal offence he would have gone alone, run the boat on a rock, or used some other means.

Mr. Fisher, in asking for a conviction, pointed out that the motive was that Ness was heavily in debt. The insurance paid off the
