WATER MAIN LAID DOWN

Queen Charlotte Volunteers, None Too Willing, Do Work

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY, Dec. 29.—It was decided some months ago to renew a private, antiquated water system that fed several houses and shacks in the vicinity of the Queen Charlotte Hotel.

After much talking, calculating and arranging it was decided to start work on the system bright and early one morning.

Lots of out-of-date implements in the form of man-handled shovels and mattocks were resurrected from a shed behind the Ranger Station and were distributed among the none too eager volunteers.

One portly gentleman came along with his hands in his pockets and volunteered to be "Straw Boss." As he could not be persuaded to do anything else, this position was allotted to him. This particular gentleman has the reputation of being the best judge of a pick and shovel in the northern country. "He has not yet been able to find one that would suit him."

The work continued merrily all morning, with passersby offering advice—instructive and otherwise—so that good progress was made with the digging. Toward mid-afternoon several of the now repentant volunteers put on their thinking caps and recollected that they had office work to finish or a store to attend or a car to try out, etc., until but a skeleton crew remained. Nothing daunted, this crew worked with a will with the result, ere dusk the following day, the work was done. The water flowed and Queen Charlotte sinks once more to rest.

TAKING STOCK

This is a good time of year to be taking stock. Merchants all do it once a year and every other person should now and then look back and note what has been accomplished. This glance backward will influence the action that is to be taken after the New Year.

If nothing has been accomplished, it is time to consider the reason why. To live a life of drift is to revert to the aborigine condition.

WHY ANY FEAR?

There is still a good deal of pessimism in the world. Speaking of this the Vancouver Star says in a leading editorial article:

Fear, widespread fear, fear of the nameless seems to have possessed people's hearts of late. Dim and dread forebodings of dire happenings are furtively whispered between men at street corners, across lunch tables and in clubs and offices, and more blatantly disseminated by the shallow purveyor of the catch phrases of the day.

Family men greet puzzled wives and children with taciturnity and preoccupation. Manufacturers and business men, hesitant of the future, slacken endeavor. Salaried men and wage earners are fearful that each pay day will find the dreaded discharge notice in the envelope, and hanging over all, the gnawing anxiety of the unemployed because of the starvation and degradation that seems to be around the corner.

Let us drag the bogey out and examine him carefully. What is it that is feared and by what name should it be called?

Economic collapse, Panic, Communism, Mob Rule, the negation of all the plans and principles upon which the lives of most men have been based, the overwhelming of that peace and security for themselves and their families that the general run of them have spent their lives striving for?

Has not this fear gone too far unchecked, and have the victims not already in imagination endured the nameless horrors that they dread?

Overshadowed by the probability of some near and impending personal calamity, he who is of stout heart makes such dispositions as he can to avert or minimize his misfortune and must perforce await the outcome.

Should the worst of his fears be realized, it is a common experience to find that even the profoundest woes have their compensations and are not so bitter in reality as they were in prospect.

So, perhaps, mentally and spiritually, men have already drained the cup to its bitter lees and the worst of their anguish may be behind them.

Trade languishes, exchanges fluctuate chaotically, the brake on the wheels of progress screeches ever more dimly.

Mechanically one harps on the discernible factors, war debts and reparations, tariffs, disarmament, abandonment of the gold standard, social revolution.

Are not these bogeys also? Senators Reed and Smoot, the investigating committee at Basle, and all men who have given the matter serious thought, agree that Germany's capacity to pay for the sins of a past generation is exhausted.

What if the subject is debated in the parliaments of every nation interminably, the facts are there and are inescapable; they are already discounted in the minds of men and their crystallization into definite and final compromise has no further power to harm.

Tariffs?—a bugbear for some time to come, but commodities and services must exchange from hand to hand and from nation to nation, unless mankind is content to revert to a more primitive scale of existence, of which there is no evidence, and artificial barriers erected to dam that flow will inevitably be remodelled in the interests of self-preservation if for no other cause.

Disarmament?—the world resounds with the groan of the overburdened taxpayer—depleted treasuries and unbalanced budgets sound the knell of this mad race for naval and military supremacy.

Abandonment of the gold standard?—this much-heralded storm has already burst; practically only two of the nations now vaunt the yellow metal; yet the wheels of commerce, though creakingly, revolve.

Social revolution?—the peoples of the world have lived in it for a century past and the trend of the revolution has been the amelioration of the lot of mankind.

Far from perfect is the modern social system, else the millenium had dawned. Much remains to be altered and improved and the forces making for change seem to accelerate their pace, but not at one sweep shall the present system crumble; the forces of anarchy are puny and the forces of decency and order are overwhelming.

Dark and lowering are the clouds, but men, in their hearts have already felt the angry rush of the oncoming gale and seen the spume of the high tossed billows. They are girded for the storm: what need they further fear? Watchmen! what of the night? Courage! The dawn cometh.

NEWS OF THE MINES

AROUND PRINCE RUPERT

Atlin Possibilities Discussed By Resident Engineer —Mountain Boy Quiet—Alice Arm Looks For Silver Improvement

The placer gold mining industry of the Atlin area, which showed a pronounced decline from the conclusion of the World War in 1918 to 1929, has the actual potentiality of a substantial expansion, declares Dr. Joseph T. Mandy, resident mining engineer for northwestern mineral survey district, in a government report. The figures covering this period show a psychological condition resultant from the World War rather than a potential condition of the field and are contradictory to the promise of the area. Today capital is once more turning to gold with its increased value and unemployed men are searching for the opportunity to dig the only metal that is always readily traded for the things they want. For these the Atlin area still offers much promise in its unexploited opportunities. The section is easily accessible and from Atlin good automobile roads lead to all the main placer activities. The placer gold production of the Atlin division for 1930 was 3,141 ounces at $53,397 as compared with $40,936 for 1929. This shows a significant increase and, on account of the growing interest and still latent possibilities in this phase of mining in the section, expansion of output may be expected in the near future. With the exception of the Campagne Francaise des Mines d'Or du Canada, which came into partial production in 1930 and promises a sustained production during the 1931 season, the larger operations are still engaged in preparatory work but have made considerable advances nearer the production stage. Considering all factors, it is apparent that, with increased interest in prospecting, sounder mining and exploration methods that are being introduced and the tendency to more careful appraisal of values in the ground, the Atlin section promises a substantially increased placer-gold production in the future. Although increased interest in prospecting for "pay" placer ground in the Atlin area is evident, the section is not yet receiving the attention it warrants. Since the active placer days of the old-timers new gold-bearing creeks have not been seriously prospected for and operations have been practically confined to creeks originally marked by the old timers. A false assumption that, if other creeks were richly gold-bearing, the old-timer would have discovered them seems to prevail. Operations of the old-timers were necessarily confined to the shallow and rich creek ground that was amenable to the crude methods employed and the difficulties of transportation that had to be confronted. Although most of this type of ground on the original creeks has been worked out, it is equally true that practically no serious effort has been expended by prospectors in an attempt to discover similar deposits on other creeks of the area. In the known gold-bearing creeks operations subsequent to those of the old-timers have been continued in drifting and hydraulic mining in the bench and deeper ground with some shovelling from remaining virgin patches in the creeks and, in some cases, the reworking of old tailings. This practically embraces the activities of recent years with its confinement to the originally prospected area. Considering the greatly improved transportation facilities into this area, it is unfortunate that no serious consideration or effort has been given to the possibilities of important placer gold discoveries in likely new sections. It must, however, also be considered that, even from the present known gold-bearing area, a substantial increased production is not only possible but latent potentialities are still unexploited. These possibilities may produce a greater amount of gold in the future than was won from this area in the bonanza days of the past. The successful outcome of this phase, however, is dependent upon methodical and sound methods of initial exploration drilling and the co-operative introduction of drainage tunnel systems to make possible the mining by drifting of deep ground not otherwise efficiently workable by this method. Generally in the Atlin area an increased tendency toward sound mining principles is apparent in the placer gold-activities and improved methods are being worked out and applied. The industry is in a healthy condition metals other than gold. The public of Canada and the United States generally is more in favor of silver stabilization than it was years ago. Mr. Tolin declares. The Bridge River gold area is holding the spotlight so far as mining development in British Columbia today is concerned, states Mr. Tolin.

With improvement in the price of silver in prospect, Alice Arm camp is becoming very hopeful. If a real improvement in the silver situation should come about, Alice Arm, due to its heavy silver ore deposits, should be one of the first camps in British Columbia to derive benefit.

Table with columns for NAME and ADDRESS, numbered 1 to 10.

The nations have renounced war.

Let us also renounce the instruments of war.

The above men and women, irrespective of party, STAND FOR WORLD DISARMAMENT BY INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT.

They are convinced: that competition in armaments is leading all countries to ruin without bringing them security, and that this policy of competition renders further wars inevitable; that wars in future will be wars of indiscriminate destruction of human life; that so long as measures of disarmament are delayed, the Governments' assurances of peaceful policy will be valueless.

THIS "POLYGLOT PETITION FOR WORLD DISARMAMENT" is now being circulated in many countries throughout the world and is to be presented to the International Disarmament Conference.

Not this country alone, but every other country, should begin at once to destroy those armaments by which peace is rendered impossible. R. B. Bennett.

We have a trust towards the Old World to mould and strengthen world opinion that the cause of disarmament may be augmented. This is a high mission for a young land. W. L. Mackenzie King.

Canada owes it to herself to give wholeheartedly to the cause of disarmament and all peace endeavours the vigorous and energetic co-operation of its youth. She has a glorious future. War alone can check her mighty progress. International jealousies are the sole cause of war from which she seeks to abstain. Ernest Lapointe

Let us not forget that vast armaments are not only oppressive but dangerous. War has been renounced. Why has there not been a like renunciation of armaments? Sir Robert Borden.

RANGERS IN GREAT FORM

Won Two Holiday Games and Increase Leadership Margin in National Hockey League

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—New York Rangers continued their winning stride by taking two victories over the holiday season in the National Hockey League. On Friday night they blanked their townsmen, New York Americans six to nil, and Sunday night won a close two to one victory from the Chicago Black Hawks. The Rangers are now leading the American division by 11 points.

Boston Braves, by virtue of a draw Saturday night with the Montreal Maroons at Montreal, moved into second place in the American division along with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Toronto Maple Leafs retained first place in the international division by defeating the Canadiens two to one in an overtime contest Thursday night at Montreal. The Canadiens came back Saturday night and took a two to nil decision from the Maple Leafs at Toronto. One point still separates the Maple Leafs from the Canadiens.

SPORT NEWS

While the big international features in British sport continue to draw patronage, so many clubs, especially those devoted to football and cricket, are in financial difficulties that unless remedies are found quickly there is a serious possibility of a collapse. If professional football and cricket clubs were compelled to sell up, many would be found bankrupt. Wigan, the English Football League club, has gone out; Derby County, an English First Division club, have issued a serious warning of what will happen if there is not better support. Today there are two First Division clubs whose liabilities are more than $300,000, their assets—grounds, stands and estimated value of players—are not comparable with that figure.

Every week things are getting worse. Gate receipts do not meet charges. Two football matches brought in $3,500, expenses exceeded $4,000. Clyde, the Scottish League First Division football club, have made it plain that at the end of this season, unless there is a great change for the better they will have reached the end of their tether. Hamilton Academicals drew $325 from their home game with Aberdeen on November 7, and the following Saturday, when they were at home to Dundee United, the receipts amounted to only $140. Leith Athletic took only $160 in a home match. When it is mentioned that home clubs have to pay their opponents a guarantee of over $400, or one hundred pounds, some idea of the seriousness of the position will be gained. Every football club, too, faces a coming "close" season with big sums to pay in wages when nothing is coming in.

Turning to cricket, almost every country club last season lost at least $8,000. To ease the situation the advisory committee of the M. C. C. has agreed to a reversion to the percentage system of deciding the county championship. Instead of all counties having to play the same number of matches, they can in 1938 suit themselves according to their means, so long as they keep to a minimum of 24 games. Even lawn tennis clubs are not immune. Queen's Club, London, one of the most famous sports clubs in England, have lost members in alarming numbers. Today they have abolished the entrance fee to get new members.

Promise Yourself

To be strong, that nothing can disturb your peace of mind. To talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet. To make all your friends feel that there is something in them. To look at the sunny side of everything, and so make your optimism come true. To think only of the best, and to expect only the best. To be as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own. To forget the mistakes of the past and to press on to the greater achievements of the future. To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature a smile. To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others. To be too big for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

Guide to Correspondents

The Daily News welcomes correspondence on live topics of the day or any other subject of public interest, but letters must be brief and to the point. The long-winded correspondent has no place in modern journalism.

Every letter must be signed by the writer, not necessarily for publication but as a matter of good faith and courtesy. All unsigned documents go to the waste paper basket. Letters of a caustic character must have the signature appended for publication.

Letter should be written on one side of the paper only. Correspondents must avoid personalities and the language should be such as would be allowed in the ordinary rules of debate.

NO CHANCE WITH WOLF

Alaska Predatory Animal Hunter Tells How Bush Dog May Be Trapped

KETCHIKAN, Dec. 28—Two deer a week is figured out to be the average feed for one wolf, unless other food is handy and easier to get according to the United States biological office.

H. H. Gubser, predatory animal hunter for the Territory, who has been making the rounds of this part of Alaska, says that deer have no chance when a wolf starts after one for a meal. The only protection for the deer is to take to the water where he can fight off the wolf.

The Territory pays a bounty of $15 for each wolf killed and the same for each coyote killed. The pelts also are worth something. It is the business of Mr. Gubser to show trappers and others how to kill the animals. He does not use any poison, but through the use of scents and other means advocates the trapping of predatory animals.

The first coyote appeared near Dyea in Alaska in 1900. Since that time they have spread to the interior along the Yukon to St. Michael and even to the Koyukuk in the Arctic circle, as well as on the Porcupine river.

Mr. Gubser says wolves are not nearly so numerous on the islands in Southeastern Alaska as is generally supposed, but there are enough of them to make great inroads on game. They "beachcomb" at times picking up fish and other food, but their main diet is deer meat.
