WILL BUY AMBULANCE

Cost of New Hospital Vehicle to Be Limited to $2000

The finance committee of the hospital board brought in a report at last night's meeting authorizing expenditure up to $2000 for the purchase of a new ambulance. After receiving this report, the board decided to call for tenders for a new ambulance, the tenders to be in by June 8.

There was some discussion as to whether a new car or used one should be purchased and whether or not it should be purchased through a bona-fide garage operator or mere agent. There was also brief discussion as to how the ambulance would be operated after it had been obtained.

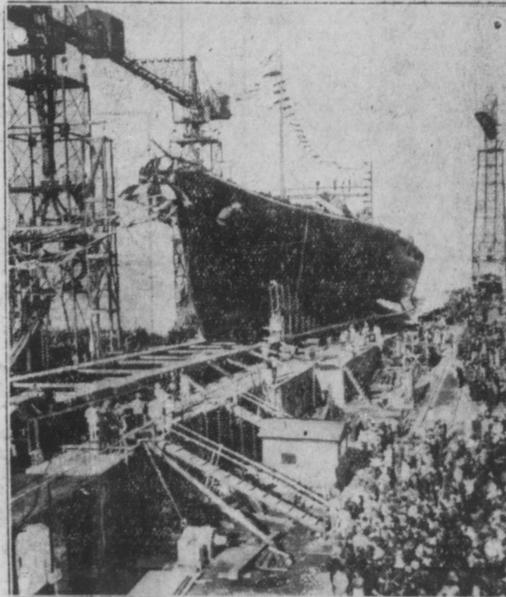

Finally it was decided to give everyone a chance to tender. The tenders for an ambulance complete will be called through the newspapers.

PICTURESQUE OLD VILLAGE OF KITWANCOOL WAS ONCE POWERFUL NATIVE CENTRE

Witchcraft Belief Is Still Extant in Colorful Indian Community—Have Never Stopped Blaming White Man For Former Leader's Death

Nestled between a range of mountains in a narrow, little valley of exceptional beauty lies the historic old Indian village of Kitwancool, the headquarters of the Kit-shan tribe of Indians. Kitwancool is somewhat of an exceptional Indian village because, although it is situated but eighteen miles up the Kitwancool River valley from Kitwanga railway station on the main line of the Canadian National Railway line to Prince Rupert, it has been little visited by white men because its people these many years have made it plain to white men that they are not welcome. The Kit-shans on various occasions have obstructed and, in a way, intimidated the white man to prevent him from entering its precincts and it is because of this that a certain amount of mystery is attached to their village. Accordingly, the native folk of Kitwancool still retain to a marked degree some of the ancient customs and beliefs, not the least of which is their insistent belief in witchcraft. Now and then this comes forcibly to the fore, one of the recent incidents in which witchcraft belief played an apparently important part during the trial of Samuel Douse, old Kit-shan chief, who was charged with murder in connection with the death of another member of the tribe, Silas Brown, but who was eventually convicted only of manslaughter.

Named fittingly enough owing to its location in the narrow valley of the Kitwancool River with towering mountains on either side, "Kitwancool" means "The Narrow Place" and the "Kit-shans" are "The People of the Narrow Place."

When nearing the modern village of Kitwancool, with its population of some 200 souls, one comes first into the view of the great ancient village now in ruins among which may still be found the remains of the massive houses of another day built out of huge cedar logs of such size that would make one wonder how ever they could be handled in those primitive days. Here along the banks of the Kitwancool are to be seen thirty of the most beautiful totem poles which are to be found in British Columbia. Covering these totems are striking examples of the old carving talent which is fast becoming a lost art.

New Village's Contrast

Much in contrast is the new and more civilized village of Kitwancool, established some twelve years ago, with its modern and up-to-date houses and church indicating that Kitwancool, like the other villages of the country, is beginning to leave the old way of living for the new.

The new Kitwancool, despite this, still holds to many of the old heathen ways. Mysterious rites are still practised there such as were so common before the arrival of the white man.

The old village of Kitwancool had many wars with neighboring tribes, notably the Nish-gas from the Naas River to the north. The Kit-shans were trained to be always ready for trouble. Suspicious nature has been virtually bred in them and possibly that is responsible for traces of this disposition which are still to be found today.

In 1889, the Kit-shans had their first clash with white men who attempted to reach their village of Kitwancool. The reserve commissioner for Canada, A. W. Vowell, accompanied by R. E. Loring, Indian Agent at Hazelton, and Mr. Skinner, a surveyor, came up the valley with the intention of laying out an Indian Reserve. They were nearing the conclusion of such work which they had been carrying out at other points in Central British Columbia.

Nearing the village, the government party was met by a hostile enough looking band of partly dressed, painted Indians, each carrying his hatchet. In the forefront of these was to be seen Samuel Douse, one of the leading chiefs of those days. The intention of the Indians was to protect their believed rightful ownership of the land. Their belief in those days was that, when a reserve was formed, the land had been in reality taken away from them and only a small portion loaned back.

A Grim Demonstration

After Messrs. Vowell and Loring had explained the purpose of their visit, the tribesmen finally agreed to listen to a meeting with the officials who decided to make camp at one end of the village. Meantime, the natives went about preparing one of their large houses for the meeting. The place was decorated round about with carved wooden bears while in the middle of the room, with a blanket wrapped around it, was a wooden image of a pallid-faced human mounted on a box. In one hand of the image was a rifle and in the other was a bullet. It wore a stiff white shirt and on the breast was a hole with another hole in the back as though a bullet had gone through. Around the hole on the breast were the representations of spatters of blood. The bullet in the hand was to represent the missile with which the figure had been killed. Nailed to the lap was a glass frame over a letter containing this message: "Dear Mr. Government: When you pay $100 ransom and erect a monument to Kitwancool Jim, we will let the government and the white man enter our village."

Mr. Vowell was highly incensed on seeing this and poked the image with a stick. He refused to have anything further to do with the Kitwancool Indians and left forthwith, telling the natives that they would have to apologize for this performance before they would be allowed to have any reserve. Consequently, the village went for years without an official reserve.

In more recent years, settlers have come into the Kitwancool Valley and taken up land and a few years ago the Indian Department decided that a reservation had better be established for the Indians so surveyors, accompanied by Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers, were again sent in. Once more the Indians were up in arms to defend

CANDY SECRETS FROM A LITTLE FRENCH-CANADIAN SWEET SHOP

Down in Quebec there is a quaint sweet shop where you can buy the most delectable home-made candies. Its fair owner, whose name reveals her patrician French ancestry, makes every delightful, old-fashioned sweet with her own hands. The very names suggest old-time goodness—peanut butter fudge, penoche, pralines, divinity candy. But one ingredient, common to them all, is as modern as tomorrow. It is Carnation Milk.

Here is what Mrs. de B— says of it: "Carnation Milk is wonderful for making candy. I always use it."

What Mrs. de B— did not say is that there is a very definite reason for the silky-textured, melting-smooth candies which Carnation makes. It is the finer cream particles—broken up by "homogenization" and distributed uniformly all through the milk, so that every drop shares in this creamy fineness of texture.

The same smoothness and rich creaminess which Carnation Milk gives to candies, it gives to all dishes in which it is used. Pure, whole milk evaporated to double richness, it saves on butter and cream; is always uniform in quality, always dependable. It is protected at the source; Carnation "field men" are constantly busy teaching dairymen the money value of good food, clean water and well-kept barns for their cows, and of the clean hands and clean utensils that keep the milk up to the Carnation standards of purity. Being sterilized, it can be kept without waste. And in results it outdoes even the best of bottled milk.

Here's a recipe for a simple delicious candy. The free Carnation Cook Book has other delightful candy recipes. Send for it—also free Baby Feeding Book, to Carnation Co., Limited, 134 Abbott St., Vancouver, B.C.

Carnation Coconut Cream Candy—2 cups sugar, 1/4 tsp. cream of tartar, 1 tbsp. butter, 1/2 cup of Carnation Milk, 1/2 cup water, 1/2 tsp. vanilla, 1 cup shredded coconut. Mix sugar, cream of tartar, and Carnation diluted with the water, cook to the soft ball stage. Remove from fire and add butter. When cool add vanilla and beat until creamy. Add coconut and drop from spoon into small balls on a buttered plate, or mold on a buttered plate and mark into squares.

USE THE SAFEGUARDED MILK

Doubly rich in cream, Carnation Milk makes every dish richly delicious. And how it cuts your cream and butter bills! Use this pure, dependable milk for all cooking. Carnation Milk, through the constant activity of Carnation "field men", is safeguarded at the source, by clean housing of every herd and clean handling of all the milk. And this protection continues until Carnation Milk reaches you in its hermetically sealed containers. (See recipe above.)

Milk from Canadian cows, packed in Canada in Canadian cans and cases.

FROM CONTENTED COWS

what they believed to be their rights. Samuel Douse was again among the foremost of them. The Indians actually took possession of the surveyors' instruments, not knowing at first that Mounted Police Officers were in the party. When the officers, at first wearing plain clothes, donned their red tunics, the Indians dropped the instruments in the road and fled precipitately, the survey being finally carried out.

Story of Kitwancool Jim

The story of Kitwancool Jim,

leading up to the events chronicled above, is one of much interest. About the year 1884, the Indians of this district were reported to be planning an uprising with the intention of killing all the white men. There had been an outbreak of measles, not only at Kitwancool, but at Hazelton, Kitzequia and Kitwanga villages. Many had died and the Indians, with typical superstition, thought that the measles had been sold to them in sugar which they bought from the Hudson Bay

Co. store. The Indians thus planned revenge upon the white men.

Two daughters of Kitwancool Jim had been among those who had died of the measles. Soon after, Kitwancool Jim was going along the road between Kitwanga and Kitwancool, crying out loud in a usual native fashion. While travelling along the road, he came upon his wife's uncle who was accused of being a witch-crafter. "If I were you, I would save some of my crying for the rest of your family," the uncle told him.

"I haven't finished with your family. Do not blame the whites for the epidemic. It is I who has caused it."

So angered was Kitwancool Jim with this disclosure that he shot his wife's uncle on the spot and killed him. He thereupon ran to Kitwancool and confessed to his father what he had done. The father said to him: "I do not want you and your trouble. You had better go back to Kitwanga, your wife's home."

Meantime, news of the impending (continued on page 5)

2 cups water 4-6 eggs beaten
1/2 cup sugar 1 teaspoon Vanilla
Few gratings nutmeg

Dilute milk with water and bring to scalding point—do not boil. Mix sugar, salt and beaten eggs. Pour the hot milk, a little at a time, over the egg mixture, stirring to blend thoroughly. Add the flavoring and pour into a buttered baking dish or individual custard cups. Set into pan of hot water and poach in moderate oven (240° to 325°F.) until firm. The custard is done if a knife blade comes out clean when thrust into the centre. (Simple enough for the most delicate child.)

RAILROAD IS WINNER

City Defeated in Softball by Score of 6 to 2.

The Canadian National Recreation Association took the City into camp last night in a fast and exciting softball game by a score of 6-2.

The City played airtight ball for the first six innings, but in the seventh, Comadina, who was pitching for them, walked two men with the bases loaded, thereby opening the scoring for the C.N.R. A. The Railroaders continued to increase their lead and by the ninth, had collected six runs, the City team getting two runs in the first two innings.

Both teams played excellent ball throughout with the Stalker brothers starring for the City team and Stiles and Cameron for the C.N.R.A. A good sized crowd of fans attended.

WIN THEIR THIRD GAME

Borden Street School Going Strong in Junior Football

Borden Street School recorded its third straight win when it defeated Booth Memorial School by one goal to nil in the Junior Football League yesterday.

The game was keenly contested all through but Borden was clearly the better team and only fine goal-keeping on the part of Bremner for Booth, coupled with weak shooting, kept the score down.

Dungate centred clear across the goal but there was no one up to put the finishing touch to it. Then Ivarson hit the Borden crossbar with a fine drive. Borden was soon pressing again and Bremner saved repeatedly, a long shot of Leslie Wilson seemed a certain goal but the Booth goalie cleared it. Gomez made a fine run but was crowded out. Halftime found no score.

Borden still had the better of the second half. Nakamoto had a free kick that was barely cleared and Ferguson and Eby defended well. In a breakaway Booth forced a corner and Gomez just headed over the bar. Wilson made a good run and finally beat Bremner from close in. Booth attacked again but the forwards were weak and Borden maintained the one goal lead.

The game was an interesting one to watch with the play going from end to end rapidly. Nakamoto was in rare form for Borden his speed and sure tackling stopping Booth. Fisher was safe. Currie though slow was sure. Williscroft kicked strongly though not always with judgment. Wilson was the pick of the forward line with Dungate and Hardy next. Campbell showed neat footwork.

Bremner kept a fine goal for Booth and had his share of luck. Ferguson was fairly reliable and Eby though slow made few mistakes. Gomez and Cromp were the best halves. The forward play was weak with Ivarson and Christison the best but there was little combination.

Booth—Jim Bremner; Ferguson, Eby; DeMarco, Gomez, Cromp; Nelson, Ritchie, Ivarson, McMeekin, Christison.
Borden—Morgan; Currie, Fisher; Williscroft, Nakamoto, Naylor; Lindsay, Wilson, Hardy, Campbell, Dungate.

SOFTBALL AT SCHOOL

Smith and Unger Teams Are Now Tied For Leadership

Unger's team defeated Stinech on Wednesday in the High School Softball League by a score of 9-2.

The winning team was first to bat. Cross opened the scoring after being advanced by Unger and Gillis. When they were retired they showed good infield work, retiring Stinech's team in one-two-three order.

At bat again, Unger's team scored when Tobey made the circuit assisted by Emmelmann's hit. Stinech's team was again held scoreless.

In the third inning Deane and Hanson scored for Unger's team, their opponents again being shut-out although Lindseth got to third.

The fourth inning gave three more points to Unger. Emmelmann walked and went to second on Cameron's sacrifice. He was sent to third by a two-bagger from Cross and home by Unger's hit. Cross went to third and Unger to second on a fumble. Both came home when Gillis hit safely. In the field this team was still playing airtight ball. Arney was notable for a fine catch.

Tobey and Arney scored for the winners in their last inning at bat, being advanced on hits by Emmelmann and Cameron.

The Stinech team now made a desperate effort. With one out on strikes, Obata walked. Moxley was put in as a pinch-hitter and delivered. Blake's hit brought in Obata. Moxley went out at third but Blake got around. Worsfold and Hale hit safely. However, this rally was cut short when Stinech's fly hit was caught.

Stinech—Hale, Blake, Worsfold, Moxley, Johnson, Lindseth, Obata, Battery, Stinech and Worsfold.

FOUR ON TOP NOW

Philadelphia, New York, Washington, Detroit Lead American League Parade

NEW YORK, May 14.—The alignment of leading teams in the American League was Philadelphia, New York, Washington and Detroit as a result of yesterday's games in which each of these clubs was victorious. The Cleveland Indians were relegated to fifth place by the Senators. Billed to meet all the stronger teams of the league within the next week or so, it is expected by many observers that the Indians, who were enjoying first place honors only a few days ago, may slump even further.

Rain prevented the playing of all games in the National League yesterday.

Scores were:
American League
Philadelphia 7, Chicago 5.
Washington 9, Cleveland 3.
Detroit 2, Boston 1.
New York 3, St. Louis 2.

In the report of Principal Hartness to the school board last night it was noted that the tennis court had been completed and had proved a popular piece of work. Students and staff appreciated the board's action in helping financially to put the court in shape and the members individually for their technical advice and help.

Softball has been started at the school under the leadership of Harry Gilliland and junior football is being played.

uprising against them had reached the whites and the Hudson Bay factor sent a runner to Port Simpson for help. The appeal was in turn sent to Esquimalt and the old steamer Beaver came up the coast with fifty Red Coats, thirty special police and a judge and jury on board. The Beaver left the large official party at the mouth of the Skeena River whence the 180-mile trip up the Skeena River to Hazelton was made by Haida canoe.

The Indians had heard that the intention was to arrest Kitwancool Jim first and take him to Hazelton and hang him.

In due course, a party of thirty police officers, with R. E. Loring, later to be Indian Agent at Hazelton, as chief of police, started up the Kitwancool Valley with the intention of arresting Kitwancool Jim for the murder of his wife's uncle. The police detachment had timed its trip so as to reach Kitwancool about 2 o'clock in the morning when few, if any, of the Indians would be astir. However, Kitwancool Jim was not unprepared for he had secreted himself in one of the large houses and had tied up dogs at intervals for a distance of one mile in order that they might bark and give him warning of the impending arrival of the police. The officers arrived and Kitwancool Jim's house was surrounded. The chief of police had ordered that there was to be no shooting and that Kitwancool Jim was to be taken alive.

After the detachment of police had spent some time in a vain effort to spirit their quarry out of his hiding place, Kitwancool Jim climbed to the roof through the hole used to let smoke out of the building and, jumping over the heads of the police, ran for his life, the officers giving chase.

One hot-headed Irishman, so the story goes, gave Kitwancool Jim the customary three commands to halt and, after Jim had failed to halt, he was shot in the back, although the policeman claimed that he had meant to hit him in the leg, dying a few hours later. The Kitwancools took the body away for burial. The policeman was later sent to prison for his failure to obey orders.

The killing of Kitwancool Jim has ever since been a sore spot with the Kit-shans. Ever since they have resented white visitors, even tourists, coming up their valley. They have endeavored consistently, although never with actual violence, to keep the white man out.

Witchcraft Belief
Despite the fact that a great deal of good missionary work has been done at Kitwancool and that there is a Christian church there, the belief in witchcraft is still firmly imbedded in the minds of the people of Kitwancool. Especially is this so among the older people although there are also many of the younger folk who also believe in necromancy. They have a fear of witchcraft which it seems almost impossible to eradicate.

The witchcraft, according to the native belief, is usually a bachelor and a recluse. Any person of this sort who acts the least suspiciously may get the title. Many of them who are thus dubbed may capitalize the situation for, while they may have more or less of a hunted life, it is not unprofitable.

Although it has never been seen, every witchcraft is supposed to have what is known as a "witchcraft box." It is supposed to resemble a coffin in shape and to contain at least a portion of a human corpse. It has holes in it and from these holes protrude long sharp sticks. If the witchcraft wishes to cast his spell on anybody, he has but to get some piece of that person's clothing and hang it on one of the sticks. If the witchcraft can get a collar, it may bring about sores on the neck or stiffness. If a wristband or part of a sleeve can be obtained, the arm will become paralyzed or shriveled. If he can get a shirt or some of the clothing around the body, a sore back may develop and so on. These ailments are all supposed to lead to a lingering death for the person bewitched.

PICTURESQUE OLD VILLAGE OF KITWANCOOL WAS ONCE POWERFUL NATIVE CENTRE.

gratitude to the witchcraft. If the gifts are not satisfactory, the bewitched person may not get better, in which case it is not impossible that the simple principle of "mind over matter" may play its part in bringing about a gradual death.

The witchcraft may say that the person who comes under his spell is not going to reach "the moon of the next fishing season" or "the moon of the falling leaves." Then that person is bewitched and gifts must be sent in the attempt to remove the spell.

Further, the witchcraft must walk around the house of the bewitched two or three times before the spell will take effect. If he can be prevented from thus walking around the house, the spell may be broken. Incidentally, the witchcraft during his nocturnal wanderings usually makes weird noises. He may whistle and thus cast more evil spirits. Under the spell, the fright, or whatever psychological effect it may be, causes the bewitched to get in a worse and worse condition.

After the burial of a bewitched person, if a witchcraft can walk around the newly made grave two or three times he has the power of casting a spell upon the balance of the family. If he cannot walk around the grave in this manner or is prevented from doing so, the spell may not take effect upon the rest of the family.

Friends of a person who has supposedly died of being bewitched have been known to sit on a grave for three or four weeks with guns awaiting the appearance of the witchcraft by night.

Even though missionary work has been done for years among the various villages of this part of British Columbia, it is asserted that, although all the Indians profess Christianity, there is still at least one or two supposed witchcrafters plying his dark arts in every village, commanding a certain amount of belief from the native residents.

No white person lives in the picturesque village of Kitwancool. The natives there a few years ago built a beautiful church at considerable cost but there is no resident clergyman other than the native lay reader. Four years ago Archbishop DePencier visited the village of Kitwancool and it was a memorable occasion indeed. He was given a royal welcome. A new house was especially built in which to receive the distinguished clerical visitor. Everything with which it was furnished was bought brand new for the occasion.

A wagon, beautifully decorated to the native eye, went to Kitwancool station to get the archbishop and his wife. They made the archbishop sit on a white goatskin and it made little matter that the ecclesiastic's black broadcloth clothes were almost white on arrival at Kitwancool through having caught the falling out hair from the goatskin. Surmounting the wagon was a banner reading "Welcome to our Mr. Bishop." Welcome arches with similar legends were placed throughout the village.

While Kitwancool has no resident missionary, a clergyman of the Anglican Church either from Hazelton or Kitwancool visits there once a month to conduct services. Rev. T. D. Proctor, formerly of Hazelton, used to do this work and later Rev. Mr. Bannister, also of Hazelton. Now it is carried out by Rev. Henry Flores, who has been recently stationed at Kitwancool. The village is said to be looking forward to a visit at a not far distant date from Rt. Rev. G. A. Rix, Bishop of Caledonia. Bishop Rix had planned being there ere this had not an accident befallen him.

Kitwancool was once a much larger and more powerful village than it is today, it is evident. There are eight great houses still to be seen in the old village. These structures used to house fifty families each. It would take two men to span the pillars which supported the great roofs and around which the huge walls were built. The timbers were apparently split with enormous adzes. One would wonder how they could be welded. There are on stores at Kitwancool. Its only commercial enterprise is a pool room in the basement of Richard Douse's fine big house. All the trading is done at Kitwancool. Fish and game abound in the neighborhood and the people of Kitwancool are either hunters or trappers. Not until recent years have the natives even attempted agriculture, although their land is extremely fertile already having attracted quite a number of settlers to pre-empt nearby. While the people hunt and trap in summer and fall, the winter is spent mostly in feasting and such idle pursuits. The residents of Kitwancool, except for occasional patrols by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and regular visits by the Indian Agent, have been left alone to a large extent by the authorities. There is no school there although some of the native children have been sent to Kitwancool school. A school has been promised this year for Kitwancool itself. Taking it on the whole, the Kitwancools seem to be a strapping, robust type physically.

Some day, it is predicted, Kitwancool will become a very popular tourist resort. Game and fish abound and there are to be found there some of the most wonderful examples of native carving available today. There are also an abundance of curios. In the mountains nearby are to be found petrified clam, cockle and abalone shells.

Withal, Kitwancool is a beautiful place from the standpoint of scenery. Beside the village lies an enchanting lake surrounded by meadows of colorful wild flowers and abounding in fish.

It is truly a wonderful valley and an interesting village indeed.

Dizzy Headaches and Fainting Spells

Mrs. Lloyd Babcock, Hartington, Ont., writes:—"Some time ago I was all run down in health. I had dizzy headaches, and suffered a great deal with fainting spells. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters and after taking two bottles I felt like a new person.
"My husband was troubled with indigestion, after meals, and could get nothing to do him any good until he took B.B.B."

Hospital Light Costs Discussed

President G. P. Tinker and Frank Dibb reported at last night's meeting of the hospital board that a conference had been held with J. J. Little, manager of the Northern B. C. Power Co., with regard to charges for hospital lighting and that, while Mr. Little would permit of no reduction in rates, he made certain suggestions which might tend to more efficiency. One suggestion which had been effected was to remove one of two meters in the Nurses' Home, leaving only one, which it was estimated would mean a saving of $40 or $50 per month.
