First Picture of World's Grain Exhibition and Conference Building at Regina

This reproduction of an architect's drawing represents the magnificent building now being specially erected on the fair grounds at Regina for the purpose of housing the educational, competitive and commercial exhibits of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in that city from July 25th to August 6th, 1932. It will cost approximately $200,000 and as soon as completed will be placed in charge of the National Committee of the World's Grain Show, who, under the direction of J. O. Turcotte, Dominion Exhibition Commissioner, will immediately commence and carry out the work of interior decoration appropriate for the big event of that year. The building is beautifully situated south of the automobile building. The main portion is 640 feet long and 120 feet wide. Each of the wings are also 120 feet wide and extend 300 feet from either side of the main unit, all providing a floor space of approximately 150,000 square feet. It is a substantially built permanent structure with stucco finish, allowing for ceiling space of 18 and 22 feet. Mr. Turcotte is well known in many countries, where he has had charge of similar work for the Dominion Government, and Canadians and others may feel assured that the work when completed will be not only suitable and appropriate for the occasion, but well worthy of the objects to be attained by this great undertaking.

LECTURES CONCLUDE

Appreciation Shown For Course Given by Dr. Smitheringale

Saturday afternoon's mining lecture by Dr. W. V. Smitheringale was on comparison and identification of ores of the same or different metals.

Under gold ore occurrence and comparison came native gold, pyrite and telluride, also chalcopyrite, arsenopyrite, stibnite, sphalerite and pyrrhotite. Attention was paid to the fact that tellurides are sometimes mistaken for sulphides, also that comparison of silver ores calls for consideration of some of the just cited gold ores.

Thus under silver ore comparison were considered such minerals as sphalerite, pyrite, chalcopyrite, chalcocite, galena, stibnite, gamesonite, arsenopyrite, smaltite, Chloranthite, pyrrhotite, molybdenite, graphite, calcocite (copper glance) argenticite (silver glance).

Comparisons were drawn among the minerals known as calcite, siderite, fluorite, barite.

From these considerations the speaker turned to the matter of opening up a property for examination by the professional mining engineer. Attention was drawn to the danger of overestimating the grade of ore in any vein or zone without intention to do so on the part of the field man. It is practically essential that channel sampling be done. By this is meant, in the case of a vein, the taking of samples by a continuous chipping or powdering from a channel along the entire side well of a trunk or cross-cut tunnel on the vein and in the case of an extensive zone as nearly as possible a similar method. Such a sample will include intervening waste and is the only safe standard of judgment. It would, no doubt, be necessary to repeat this channel sampling at different or even many points along such vein or zone. There can be no escape from the plain facts, and these must be gotten at, not by the prospector then by exploring companies.

Evening Lecture

In the evening Dr. Smitheringale, in a way, reviewed the subject of metal or mineral occurrences dwelling perhaps more especially on magmatic segregations, the intrusion of dykes particularly the pregmatitic variety which is the frequent repository for rare metals. He spoke of and again described the occurrence of contact metamorphic deposits, fissure deposits, referring also to the Zonit theory of deposition.

Question were again invited. Some related to bismuth ores, some to quartz veins and some to manner of basic or volcanic upheavals.

Dr. Mandy, who was again present in answering some of the questions and, in concluding his remarks reviewed the success of the series of lectures and moved a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Smitheringale.

Mr. Tickles expressed a hope that such work among fieldmen continue, that the government be asked to assist in further organization, declaring that such activity is good for the country.

Frank Cole expressed the appreciation of those present for the

RUSHBROOK IS SPEAKER

Addressed Women's Canadian Club at Tea Saturday Afternoon on Primitive Indian Women

"The Primitive Indian Woman of Northern British Columbia" was an interesting subject for discussion by Canon W. F. Rushbrook in addressing the Women's Canadian Club at Tea on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. D. McD. Hunter, president of the club, was in the chair and there was a large gathering of ladies.

Giving a resume of the life of the primitive native woman, Canon Rushbrook described her attitude toward her housework. Just as the early Canadian woman had made her family self-dependent some eighty years ago or so, manufacturing her own linen and wool and providing all the needs of the family, so did the native woman make her family independent, supplying all its requirements. Canon Rushbrook described in some detail the domestic and household arts of the native woman and the aboriginal family life all of which proved most interesting to his hearers.

While he might have other wives, the one wife of an aboriginal Indian who could under no circumstances be divorced was the one chosen for him between the parents of the contracting couple, the Canon stated. He told of the domestic life of the natives, how children were prepared for and cared for after arrival, and of some of the foods.

The life of the Indian boy was a carefree one but the life of the girl was one of work until, on reaching maturity, she was taken carefully into seclusion, for a period after which she returned to the village, then being open for overtures of matrimony. After marriage, it was the custom for the couple to live in the village of the bride. The father had nothing to do with the management of home or family, this being the mother's prerogative.

Canon Rushbrook described in some detail a number of the peculiar native foods such as seaweed, which entered into practically all their fare, herring spawn, oolachan grease and berries and dried salmon and halibut. Native medicines also came in for attention by the speaker. As for medical attendance, the Indian depended entirely upon personal and it was here that the medicine man had his powers.

In conclusion, the speaker declared that much of the glamor of the past had gone as far as the Indian woman was concerned but still there was to be found grace and dignity among them. If she was treated as a woman, she might yet be found to be the equal or the superior of many of today's white women. Her great self-dependence was to be much admired. If many Indian women had now fallen upon evil days, it was largely the fault of the white man.

At the conclusion of his address, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Canon Rushbrook on motion of Mrs. J. H. Thompson and Mrs. T. H. Johnson. There were vocal solos by Mrs. Ernest Anderson with Mrs. E. J. Smith accompanying. Miss E. G. Lenox presided at the piano for the singing of "O Canada" and "God Save the King." Tea was served.

care being given by the Department of Mines.

Dr. Mandy's resolution was seconded and a hearty response was shown by the meeting.

EAST SEES PROGRESS IN RUPERT

Special Number of Daily News Brings Forth Interesting Article in Sherbrook Paper

One of the most interesting bits of publicity as a result of the recent special number of the Daily News in connection with the power opening was a display article in the Sherbrook, Que., Record under the heading "Prince Rupert Comes Back to Sanity," and with the sub-head, "Decides to attract rather than repel the men who know how to build a city and its industries."

Prince Rupert people will be surprised at some of the statements in the article which follows:

Editor Harry Pullen, of the Prince Rupert Daily News, sends to the Record a special edition of his paper in which he tells of the new era of prosperity about to come to the British Columbia terminal city.

The whole city turned out to witness and to welcome the advent of the new Northern British Columbia Power Company's $2,000,000 plant, the first unit in a 32,000 horse power development at Falls River, not far from the city.

"It is not difficult to understand what this means to Prince Rupert," says Editor Pullen. "It places the city on the front line of development and indicates that some of the greatest financiers in Canada are pinning their faith here. The city under these new conditions is bound to grow rapidly!"

The power plant installed is pronounced to be sufficiently large to supply the city and district as they are today, with power enough in that already developed to last until Prince Rupert has attained the dignity of a large manufacturing city and a seaport trading with all the countries of the world. "There is no limit to the possibilities!" asserts the editor.

Prince Rupert is a city just 20 years old, and it has had its comings and goings. Not long since the people decided that their public utility planned, owned and operated by the city council, was the cause of their failure to attract industries where they had great possibilities to show, and where they had immediate accessories for pulp mills, flour mills, shingle mills, smelters, steel works, canning factories, knitting and woollen mills—with a vast market in the Orient awaiting exporters. The city had been plunged into debt and into error by its early pioneers, everyone of whom was a potential mayor or active politician, and who signed for the control of a political public utility machine. They had for 16 years operated their civic power and light plant at a book profit, but at an actual cash loss. When accountants could no longer certify to profits, the city decided that it would secure the co-operation of some real masters of electrical production. They approached many, but strange to say, they decided to sell their own plant to the lowest bidder, rather than to the highest.

High Reputation

The lowest bidders have the highest reputation for activity, and for civic and industrial promotion, and it was on this factor and on the character of the men who made the lowest cash offer that the decision was made. These men who profited by their character and proven characteristics were nearly all former residents of Sherbrooke and the Eastern Townships, and it was on the basis of their outstanding success as sound builders of industry that the mayor and aldermen decided to sacrifice a hundred thousand dollars' purchase money to get the right men behind their larger project. So that having a reputation worth while saved the buyers a large amount of real cash. The council judged that superior skill and proven ability was worth the sacrifice.

Since two years, when the purchase was consummated every promise placed on record by H. E. Pawson, of the Montreal Power interests, has been carried out. Mayor Orme, of Prince Rupert, congratulated the company and its officers on its speed and success on the completion of the first new unit of development, when he turned on the water on the second day of this month.

Premier S. F. Tolmie sent his congratulations to the city, as did also the former minister of lands, Hon. T. D. Pattullo, M.L.A., for Prince Rupert. Mr. Pattullo has represented his city in the British Columbia House since 1916, and his prophecy had been that Prince Rupert would begin to move as soon as some big power company took hold of the hydro-power project. Premier Tolmie said: "The opening of the splendid power plant will have a far-reaching effect on the industrial development of the city and the surrounding district."

Col. McMorde, one time mayor, and who first had the courage to prove the fallacy of political ownership, started the revolution and restoration to municipal sanity during his tenure of office, and was among those who joined in the unanimous jubilation at the gathering of the citizens early in the month. He visioned great things for Prince Rupert, and said that within a very few years the northern part of the rich Peace River country would have a direct railway line to Prince Rupert. This would mean a Northern British Columbia terminal for the C. P. R., and other industrial developments were in the offing. Last year over 4000 ships had arrived at and cleared from Prince Rupert harbor. "The prospects of the city have never been brighter," he said.

O. Hanson, the M.P., for Skeena, was a prominent figure at the celebration of the opening of the new era of prosperity, and was optimistic about the fact that Prince Rupert was now on the right electric road to prosperity. The city is the nearest to Japan and China ports, and has at its door the Peace River country which is tempered into tropical growth by the Chinook winds in the winter and by the warm ocean currents of the Pacific which are akin to the Gulf Stream, that makes England, miles north of Canada so much milder than that of middle Canada.

"Production has started and rapid expansion is expected," says Editor Pullen.

Better Era

Everyone anticipates a new and better era with the disappearance of the devastating politically managed utilities which are so demoralizing to the civic structure of any city.

As the Daily News states: "The fashion of yesterday was to decry large corporations and their work. Prince Rupert is happy in having one of the most powerful of these corporations interested in the city. Men of wealth and influence now recognize Prince Rupert as an important point with a great future. We suggest that so far as possible the city shall co-operate with this company in bringing about improved conditions, in generally advancing the business of the port, and in making the city so progressive and important that it will be the wonder of the rest of the country."

This is a somewhat different viewpoint of fifteen years ago when Prince Rupert was in the hands of the saloon keepers, liquor dealers and commission agents whose sole idea was to sell the citizens something and cash the city's checks over the brass rail. A city in its solid growth usually outgrows its socialistic views on capital and enterprise.

Moose Jaw fell in line with Prince Rupert within a year.

Fort William and Port Arthur are yet heavily handicapped by their early adventures in telephony and other enterprises launched on a communistic basis.

The Letter Box

COULD BUILD ROAD NOW.

Editor Daily News:

How about some action on the proposed Terrace-Prince Rupert Highway? When there are so many men out of work on account of the climate making it impossible to haul logs to mills in the Skeena Valley, something should be done to relieve the distress. The climate which is now causing the standstill is ideal weather for road construction. There already are a few miles started on both ends and the lengthy survey for the road should be complete by now, making it possible for work to commence immediately. Surely the people of the north have listened long enough to the promises of their politicians. How about waking up the interest of the government?

ROD ALEX. MELROSE

Terrace, B.C.

J. J. Little, general manager of the Northern B. C. Power Co., returned to the city on the Cameron last evening from a brief trip to Vancouver and Victoria on company business.

"—with all his worldly goods"

HERE, in this old strong-box, so long guarded and locked, is his "estate" . . . the "worldly goods" which he has bequeathed to her.

One by one her adviser takes out the temptingly engraved certificates and examines them. One by one he lays them down with a sorrowful shake of the head—

Slowly the truth dawns upon her. Those wonderful purchases that were to make them rich . . . independent. These speculations that were to lead them to fortune . . . many of them now are WORTHLESS!

But at the bottom of the box there lies an unpretentious document, which suddenly she recollects. It cannot have depreciated. It must still be safe and sure . . .

She reaches in and draws forth his Life Insurance Policy.

Amid the wreckage of thousands of estates, Life Insurance stands as the final and enduring refuge in time of need.

It is the one investment no man can afford to be without.

High School Downed Native Sons in Close Game Saturday

TERRACE, Feb. 9.—In a regular league game played on Saturday the High School defeated the Native Sons in overtime 17-15. The Dumbells defeated the Dubs in a senior girls contest 13-9, while in intermediate girls' game between the Shooting Stars and the Northern Lights resulted in a win for the former 20-12.

In the Senior game the High School started without their star defence man, Michael, who was out through injuries and Johnstone replaced Bowering at forward. Bowering went on late in the second period. At half time the score was 9-6 for the High School but the Native Sons drew ahead chiefly through S. Smith who bagged a lot of long shots. A last minute rally tied the score 15-15 at full time and Bowering of the school team scored the only basket in the overtime play. For the losers Smith played a good game while Graham was strong at guard. Wallace and McLeod played well throughout for the High School team.

Religious Experiences of Some Poets, as Shown in Their Poetry

(By Rev. T. H. Wright, B.A.)

In religious experience there is an awareness of the All-Sustaining Presence. There is also a consciousness of need. This need is for something outside of ourselves. There is an ideal element for which we seek and it requires the ideal.

Only when beneficial results are obtained and our lives are adjusted to the art of true living, do we in reality find God. This leads us to think profoundly on the nature of life and to consider the various forms of art in this respect, and this spiritual idea enables us to take a more comprehensive survey of man's life work.

After such a survey we are able to see beauty and spiritual meaning in ordinary life. Our minds then become centered on the great issues of life with all its mysteries, its infinite significance and responsibility.

All nature is viewed from a new horizon. We see God, the Infinite Father, manifesting His love to us in all His works. The flowers, trees, mountains, rivers, the rising and the setting sun are fraught with a new meaning and spiritual interest, and we exclaim:

"All Thy work shall praise Thy name,
"In earth and sky and sea."

A search for evidence, reveals striking examples of religious experience among the modern poets who lived out of doors in close touch with nature and God.

This religious feeling is vividly portrayed in Wordsworth from Tintern Abbey:

"For I have learned to look on nature, not as in the hour of thoughtless youth; but hearing oftentimes the still, sad music of humanity, nor harsh nor grating though of ample power to chasten and subdue. And I have felt a presence that disturbs me with the joy of elevated thoughts; a sense sublime of something far more deeply interfused whose dwelling is the light of setting suns, and the round ocean and the living air, and the blue sky, and in the mind of man, a motion and a spirit that impels all thinking things, all objects of all thought, and rolls through all things. Therefore am I still a lover of the meadows and the woods and mountains, and of all that we behold from this green earth; of all the mighty world of eye and ear—both what they half create and what perceive, well pleased to recognize in nature and the language of the sense, the anchor of my purest thought, the nurse, the guide, the guardian of my heart, and soul of all my moral being."

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell has a selection from the Mexican Poets. I have selected one entitled "My Fountain," which is as follows:

Hard by the cottage, innocent and free,
Where rocked my cradle—near that hidden cot,

Trees

(By Bliss Carmen)

In the Garden of Eden, planted by God,

There were goodly trees in the springing sod—

Trees of beauty and height and grace,

To stand in splendor before His face.

Apple and hickory, ash and pear,
Oak and beech and the tulip rare;

The trembling aspen, the noble pine,

The sweeping elm by the river line;

Trees for the birds to build and sing,

And the lilac tree for a joy in the spring;

Trees to turn at the frosty call
And carpet the ground for their Lord's footfall;

Trees for fruitage and fire and shade,

Trees for the cunning builder's trade;

Wood for the bow, the spear and the flail,

The keel and the mast of the daring sail;

He made them of every grain and girth

For the use of man in the Garden of Earth.

Then lest the soul should not lift her eyes

From the gifts of the Giver of Paradise,

On the crown of a hill for all to see,
God planted a scarlet maple tree.

Religious inspiration through nature is given when Bliss Carmen saw that trees were planted by God

"Trees of beauty and height and grace" to stand in splendor before His face. We have in this poetry simplicity and the truth of nature.

There is a naturalism which we admire in the above lines.

To the Waterfowl (William Cullen Bryant)

He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,

In the long way that I must tread alone,
Will lead my steps aright.

Here again we have a great lesson of faith in divine guidance and protection given the waterfowl and the confidence that man will not be forsaken or overlooked. All the necessary grace and guidance will be given to those who follow earnestly and seriously the light given them "from zone to zone" on life's long way.

The Rainy Day

(Henry W. Longfellow)

The following reminds us of similar experiences in the fall of the year in British Columbia:

The day is cold, and dark, and dreary;

It rains, and the wind is never weary;

The vine still clings to the moldering wall,

But at every gust the dead leaves fall,

And the day is dark and dreary.

My life is cold, and dark, and dreary;

It rains, and the wind is never weary;

My thoughts still cling to the moldering past,

But the hopes of youth fall thick in the blast,

And the days are dark and dreary.

Be still, sad heart! and cease repining;

Behind the clouds is the sun still shining;

Thy fate is the common fate of all,
Into each life some rain must fall.

Some days must be dark and dreary.

In the lessons from the dark day, Longfellow believed that "behind the clouds is the sun still shining."

The Dandelion

(James Russell Lowell)

One can almost feel for himself the experience of Lowell in spring-time:

How like a prodigal doth Nature seem,

When then, for all thy gold, so common art!

Then teachest me to dream

More sacredly of every human heart,
Since each reflects in joy its scanty gleam

Of heaven, and could some wonderous secret show,

Did we but pay the love we owe,
And with a child's undoubting wisdom look

On all these living pages of God's book.

While the popularity of Lowell has not been as great as that of Whitier, Longfellow or Holmes, yet his poetry expresses deeper thought and finer culture. As an anti-slavery poet he was second only to Whitier.

He was a keen observer and had a suggestive imagination and later in life aimed to make nature the representative and minister of his feelings and desires. While in England as minister he was lionized as no other minister at that time had been, and was in great demand as a public lecturer and speaker. Oliver Wendell Holmes thus writes of his popularity with the "British Cousins."

"By what enchantment, what alluring arts,

"Our truthful James led captive British hearts—

"Like honest Yankees we can simply guess,

"But that he did it, all must needs confess."

In his description of Nature his imagination manifests its greatest range of subtlety and power. We might also mention the beautiful story of "The Holy Grail," the search for the cup which held the
