ANYOX TRIAL IS PROCEEDING TODAY
DOMINION TO OPERATE BRITISH COLUMBIA RELIEF CAMPS

Cases of Five Miners On Unlawful Assembly Charges Are Going On

Incidents of Morning of February 3 Following Declaring of Strike Against Granby Co. Described by Crown Witnesses Before Assize Court Jury

The trial of Kenneth Montgomery, Matt Jurgeovich, Giovanni Sanvide, Angus McIvor and Joseph Sarich charged with taking part in an unlawful assembly at Anyox on the morning of February 3 commenced this morning at the assize court before Mr. Justice Murphy.

Mr. McGill, in outlining the case, explained that the employees of the Hidden Creek mine were on strike and, early on the morning in question, they set out for the town at Anyox Beach, nearly two miles distant. They were met at a bridge by provincial police officers who tried to dissuade them, urging, instead, that a committee should be sent. Shouts were raised, "We are all a committee" and there was a clash between the men and the police in which several policemen were injured.

General Superintendent Walter B. Maxwell was the first witness heard this morning. He explained the position of the two communities at the mine and the beach at Anyox. The plant there was valued at from twelve to fifteen million dollars. The mine was connected with the town at the beach by a wagon or auto road ten to twelve feet wide with snow-banked on either side. The bridge over Hidden Creek was about twelve feet wide with a footwalk at the side and was about one hundred feet long. Living at the mine were approximately 600 people, the total population of Anyox being about two thousand. Some thousand to eleven hundred were employed by the company.

A strike occurred at the mine February 1 and two days later was set for the other work to close down. (Continued on Page Four)

YANK LEAD IS REDUCED

New York Now Has But Half Game Margin in American League Standing

CLEVELAND, May 8: (Canadian Press)—Cleveland Indians, by winning two out of three week-end games over the New York Yankees here, reduced the Yanks' margin of leadership in the American League to but half a game, incidentally moving into exclusive possession of second place themselves.

The Chicago White Sox, who shared honors in a double-header with the lowly Boston Red Sox yesterday, are now tied for third place with Washington Senators, who divided a double-header with the Detroit Tigers yesterday after having won on Saturday.

In the National League, the New York Giants crept up to within two full games of the idle Pittsburgh Pirates by blanking the Cincinnati Reds in both ends of a double-header at the Polo Grounds in New York yesterday. The Reds, who are placed by experts to finish in the cellar this year, were, as a result, shoved out of fourth place into fifth alongside the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Chicago Cubs who won three week-end games from the Boston Braves move up from the seventh to third notch. The Braves sunk into seventh place. The St. Louis Cardinals, sharing honors with Brooklyn Dodgers in a double-header yesterday, advanced from fifth to fourth place.

Week-end scores were as follows:

Mrs. William Rance and Mrs. Betsy Cameron leave on tonight's train for Montreal where they will embark May 19 on the steamer Algonia to visit their respective homes in England, the former going to Eastbourne in Sussex and the latter to near London.

George W. Cripps, newly appointed provincial assessor here, who has been a patient in the Prince Rupert General Hospital suffering from pneumonia, was able to be removed Saturday from the hospital to his home in the Brookbank Apartments. He is now making rapid recovery. Mrs. Cripps arrived in the city last week from Vancouver.

Dawson Is Acquitted

a half's time.

Another charge of arson against Dawson as an outcome of the burning of his store in Smithers some two years ago will be heard later in the Assize which is engaged today in the hearing of the unlawful assembly case from Anyox in which the accused are Kenneth Montgomery, Giovanni Sanvide, Angus McIvor and Joseph Sarich.

Argument of Counsel

In his argument before the jury in the Dawson case L. S. McGill, crown prosecutor, touched upon what he termed the "more salient circumstances" as presented in the evidence. He dealt with the removal of goods from the house to the garage and woodshed. "The most striking circumstance" of the case, he contended, was the nature of these goods. The prosecutor stressed the fact that subsequent to 7:45 p.m. the accused had been proved to have been in the immediate vicinity of the house, his wife having been seen standing in the lane back of the house. Movements and remarks of the accused at the time of the fire were described by Mr. McGill as "peculiar." Reference was made to the locking of the house so securely by the accused and the breaking of windows by him during the incipient stages of the fire. Accused had said in his own statement that he had lost the key to the front door of the house although he still had the key to the garage. Had not accused directly benefitted from the fire through the payment of the debt to his sister by the insurance? The crown prosecutor submitted that the only possible conclusion that the jury could arrive at was that the fire could not have been accidental but had been deliberately planned and carried out by none else than the accused.

J. T. Harvey, defence counsel, contended that there was nothing in the circumstances as adduced by the crown to point to the guilt of accused. To the contrary, they clearly suggested that the fire was accidental rather than having been caused by incendiary intent on the part of accused. The removal of the goods from the house, defence counsel submitted, had been satisfactorily explained. What possible reason could accused have had for burning down the house of his parents which was also his own home? It was obvious that the accused's parents had not benefitted from the fire but had rather lost heavily. Was it reasonable, after all, to suggest that accused would burn down the house and put his aged parents out in the cold merely to pay a debt? He asked the jury to consider carefully if there was anything accused had done previous or subsequent to the fire to point to his guilt. As a matter of fact the crown's evidence did not allow any margin of time for accused to get in and set the place on fire. Accused himself had certainly not benefitted having had no interest in either the house or the insurance. There was nothing to show that the fire had been laid but there were plenty of circumstances suggesting that the fire might have been accidental. The circumstances were as consistent with innocence as with guilt and there was nothing to show that accused had committed an offence.

Judge's Charge

His Lordship gave the definition of arson as "wilfully setting fire." It was up to the crown to adduce sufficient evidence to make it necessary for accused to explain the circumstances. The burden of proof rested upon the crown and that proof must be beyond a reasonable doubt. This was a case of circumstantial evidence, no direct evidence having been adduced that accused had set fire to the house. To convict the jury must be satisfied that the evidence was consistent with guilt and inconsistent with any other rational conclusion. If the jury were not so satisfied, it was its duty to acquit. The jurors were the exclusive judges of the facts. It was not necessary for the crown to prove motive but the jury should consider the presence or absence of motive. In reviewing the evidence, His Lordship asked the jury if it were reasonable to infer that accused, being penniless, should burn himself and family out of a free house and home. Assuming accused were guilty, he had certainly shown lack of common sense in covering up his tracks when he could expect that there would be an inquiry. There was no evidence of conspiracy involving accused, his wife and mother and father. There were no signs of incendiaryism such as gasoline or coal oil. Mere opportunity did not prove guilt. Unless the jury could honestly say that the facts of the case were consistent with guilt and inconsistent with anything else, it was its duty to acquit.

The jury retired at 4:45 p.m. and returned to the courtroom with its verdict of acquittal about fifteen minutes later.

Harry D. Johnson, well known locomotive engineer for the Canadian National Railways at Smithers, is here as one of the witnesses at the session of the Supreme Court Assizes, being accompanied by Mrs. Johnson. A former resident of Prince Rupert, Mr. Johnson notes a great improvement in the general appearance of the city since he was last here a few years ago. He formerly ran out of Prince Rupert and recalls that it was twenty-two years ago on May 24 that he first landed in this city.

During the course of the evening Mr. Jolliffe made a report which showed that their efforts to secure funds for a radio to be installed in the hospital had met with success and he wished, on behalf of Mrs. Jolliffe, to thank those who helped in any way to effect such a successful conclusion.

"HALF NAKED TRUTH" HERE

Modern Ballyhoo Dramatized in Picture Featuring Lee Tracy and Lupe Velez

A lively comedy-drama that exposes the ballyhoo racket and which is alive with personality, "The Half Naked Truth," paralleling some of the real-life exploits of the late Harry Reichenbach, who is conceded to have been the most spectacular press agent Broadway has ever known, comes to the Capitol Theatre here as the first of the week feature offering. Lee Tracy takes the part of the press agent while Lupe Velez plays opposite him as the dancing girl who became famous through high pressure publicity. Between the two an interesting romance develops.

Supporting Tracy and Miss Velez in "The Half Naked Truth" are such popular screen actors as Eugene Pallette, Frank Morgan, Shirley Chambers, Mary Mason and Robert McKenzie.

On the morning of the third he drove up the road toward the smelter when he met two crowds of excited men Sanvide being among them. Some of them wore miners' helmets but the only weapon he noticed was a piece of hose pipe sticking out of a man's coat. In the crowd one man looked at him and remarked, "This is the finish now."

Cross-examined by Gordon Grant, Mr. Maxwell admitted that many of the employees had been with the company for years. It was usually an orderly town. The men had made complaints and asked for redress which had been refused. He did not know the strike was coming. It was not called until January 29. The list of grievances was presented January 30. He knew Sarich and McIvor and that they were prominent on the strike committee. The company had asked the men for time to close down the smelter and this was granted.

The company officials had asked that special maintenance work be allowed to proceed. He thought police were necessary. He had heard that an outside agitator had been in town trying to organize a union. He knew the company had a list of names of men considered "undesirable" and included in the list was McIvor and he believed Sarich. The company was trying to keep running with the money available. They had told the men they were operating at a loss and the need of taking a reduction. They were taking a chance on selling the copper. At the time it was costing more to produce than it was worth. He thought intimidation was the purpose of the men coming down from the mine.

Other Witnesses

Ralph Lucius Healy, in charge of the Hidden Creek mine, identified the five accused as workmen under him. He saw a crowd of between four and five hundred men going down the road toward the beach on the morning of February 3. It was dark but he could see the procession by means of the electric lights on the road.

Roland Gale, who worked at the toolroom, being in charge of the tools for the plant, was stopped, he said, by a mob of men while near the messroom enroute to work. They were very hostile and one spat in his face. Witness, becoming afraid, turned around and went home. Gale said that he was called a "scab." He could identify none of the five men. Under cross-examination, Gale said that he had a "pretty good job" although there were "better jobs." He admitted that he was ambitious and wished to please his employers. No one struck him.

Charles John Doherty, a foreman, found the road near the messroom completely blocked with a crowd of 400 to 500 men as he came from work. He identified Sarich and Jurzevich as being in the crowd which appeared to be hostile. The men had articles in their hands, one having what appeared to be a piece of hose. Sarich told witness it was no use trying to get through the crowd. He saw no one hurt or struck.

Richard Deeth, repair gang foreman, told of first being allowed to pass through the crowd and later

Rev. William McKennie, United Church clergyman at Queen Charlotte City, was brought to the city by a Royal Canadian Air Force seaplane on Saturday to see Prince Rupert General Hospital in operation. The plane arrived at 11 a.m. from the Islands and on its return there it is one of two planes which are based at Queen Charlotte engaged in mapping work.

being stopped and told not to speak. The men were cursing and swearing and many of them talking in foreign tongue.

James B. Murdoch and John Jeffrey told of seeing from their boat the procession of men from the mine moving toward the beach. They were carrying articles in their hands, Murdoch seeing that one of these was a piece of iron about 18 inches long. The men were in work clothes mostly and many of them were wearing helmets.

At 1 o'clock, the trial was adjourned until 2:15 p.m., the trial continuing on bail.

The jury consists of Claude Edgum, G. A. Edgumbe, C. E. McKeown, Dugald McLean, Walter Vance, Frank Diob, Hubert White, B. J. Bacon, Robert Gordon, J. P. Agar, John McLeod and Robert Laffitt. Robert Gordon was chosen foreman.
