Scientist Says Dirty Boats, Poorly Cleaned Fish, Lack of Ice Causes For Low Quality

Dr. Robert H. Bedford Counts Bacteria and Gives Some Astounding Figures to Prove His Case Against Fishermen

According to Dr. Robert H. Bedford, scientist of the Biological Board of Canada, who has been investigating the cause of fish deterioration, dirty boats and poor icing are large factors in the deterioration of fish. In his published report on the subject he says:

"The ease with which fish goes"bad, particularly during warm weather, its present low marketable value, and the need for increasing its popularity as a food, bring to the front the necessity of keeping fresh fish really fresh until it reaches the consumer, and make it urgent that the conditions to be met to maintain a first class product be understood by those concerned.

"The first question that naturally arises is what causes fish to go bad and the answer is primarily the destructive work of what are called bacteria. These are too small to be

"The second question is what do they do, and the answer is that they can live on fish just as we can do. A glance into the sub-visible kingdom of bacteria inhabiting a fish that has gone bad would show millions of hungry bacteria ceaselessly breaking down the fish's protective armor, the skin, the invading army then marching onward into the flesh. They are master strategists too, for they work not only from the outside inwards, but also from the

"There are not very many bacteria on fish when they are first taken from the water, the number depending to some extent upon just where they were caught, but the extent to which they become further contaminated depends upon (1) how thoroughly they are cleaned, that is, the blood and slime washed off after gutting them, (2) how clean the hold is where they are stowed, that is, whether it has been disinfected every trip, let us; Engineer to Wed say with such a disinfectant as forture of the hold is sufficiently low to hold in check the growth of bac- temperature 38. teria, which grow so well and quickly at the temperature of the air of the vessel's hold, particularly in Dr. Joseph T. CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Canada is the closest neighbor of the United States and the people of the two countries are so similar that it would be difficult for a visitor to either country to be sure on which side of the boundary he was if he were not told. We are Canadians, the people of the United States call themselves Americans, but all come from the same original stock. In each country there is a predominance of people of British origin with British ideals and a British outlook. There is also a large admixture of other European peoples, all being gradually welded into a new nation, one to the south and the other to the north of an arbitrary dividing

The southern climate of the United States is the more attractive to the ordinary visitor who wishes relaxation but the climate of Canada is the more bracing and tends to make a hardier and more virile race of people.

Between these two peoples there is a tariff and immigration wall that separates them much more completely than does the Atlantic Ocean cut each off from Europe. Canadians cannot buy in the United States because the import duty is high and people south of the line cannot buy in Canada for a similar reason. People in one country eannot migrate to the other except under the strictest supervision. However, they do pay brief visits across the line and this interchange of visits is on the increase.

Today leading citizens on either side of the line are beginning to see the advantage of closer relations with their neighbors. Canada has a large market for many United [States products and the United States could with advantage use Canadian paper, pulp, lumber and fish. We are developing business with countries thousands of miles away and neglecting to trade over the fence with our next door neighbors because they have refused to trade with us.

The logical move is for statesmen from Canada and United States to sit around a table and discuss these matters as friends and neighbors and make permanent ar- sing aspect. It is a demonstration stitutions promoted by greed and were not. Mothers and Daughters of First Presbyterian Church Get Together

Between eighty and ninety persons sat down in the social hall of First Presbyterian Church last night at the annual mother and daughter banquet of the three Presbyterian groups of the Canadian Girls in Training, the affair being highly enjoyable and successful. The chairman was Miss Betty Cameron who presided over tables which were tastefully decorated in the blue and white colors of the C G. I. T. and adorned with potted spring flowers and plants. There were individual place cards for each person.

The proceedings opened with the singing of "God Save the King" and, after full justice had been done to a splendid repast, an interesting toast list was commenced. "Mysterious Rider" is Exciting Action-Romantic Film

Zane Grey's exciting action-romance, "The Mysterious Rider," done into a motion picture by a cast headed by Kent Taylor, Lona Andre, Irving Pichel, Gail Patrick and Warren Hymer, comes this weekend to the Capitol Theatre here.

The film tells the story of a single man's battle against powerful forces which seek to evict half a hundred ranchers and their families from the property which they own and love. The attempt is set under way by a crooked lawyer, who, after discovering that the land occupied by the ranchers is not legally theirs, employs underhand methods in transferring it to a powerful fin-

The latter demands that the ranchers be thrown out of their homes, and when Taylor, their leader, urges them to resist, he lands in jail for his efforts. But he bursts loose, and at risk of his life, exposes the entire swindle, to bring the film to a thrilling climax.
