HOT WORDS AT COUNCIL

Mutual Recriminations Heard at Final Regular Meeting Last Night

A most unseemly scene developed at the last regular meeting of the present city council held last night which might be taken by some as an indication that the provincial government acted wisely in ignoring the request of the council that it be allowed to carry on.

The scene, which lasted for the best part of an hour, developed from a motion of Alderman Black in which he moved that, in the future, no agents should handle city rent collections but that payments should be made direct to the city treasurer. This was carried unanimously at the close of the discussion.

In connection with the same, answers were given by the mayor to questions propounded at the last meeting of the council in regard to the activities of M. M. Stephens & Co. Ltd. He stated that the firm had been handling the McIntyre property since 1910 and, when it reverted to the city, he spoke to the city treasurer and was instructed to carry on. Regular statements had been rendered right along.

At the time of reversion, the mayor said, the property had been insured for $10,000 but now it was insured for $8,000, the policies being taken up as they came due. Policies were placed in November to the amount of $2,000, in January, $4,000 and in March, $2,000.

Alderman Black asked who authorized the placing of the insurance and the reply was that insurance was usually paid by the agent for a property. He thought $8,000 too much insurance on a property valued at $4,750.

Alderman Black said he had applied a number of times to the city treasurer and no statement in re-

Constables Roberts and Weir Tell How They Sustained Serious Injuries in Clash Near Mine—Defence Motion For Dismissal Denied

Giving evidence at the Supreme Court Assizes here Monday afternoon in the case in which Kenneth Montgomery, Matt Jurgeovich, Giovanni Sanvido, Angus Melver and Joseph Sarich are charged with unlawful assembly in connection with the miners' strike at Anyox on February 3 last, two provincial police officers, Constables Roberts and Weir, told how an infuriated mob of several hundred miners on the morning in question, after belaying them with heavy instruments and trampling them underfoot, allegedly endeavored without success to throw them bodily over the Hidden Creek bridge a distance of some fifty or sixty feet to the creek bottom below.

Roberts and Weir, told how an infuriated mob of several hundred miners on the morning in question, after belaying them with heavy instruments and trampling them underfoot, allegedly endeavored without success to throw them bodily over the Hidden Creek bridge a distance of some fifty or sixty feet to the creek bottom below. Roberts said that he was actually put over the bridge railing, saving himself only by catching his leg in the rail. Both Roberts and Weir sustained serious cuts and abrasions about the head, face and body. The former required ten stitches, the latter eleven days and under the doctor's care for over six weeks. Weir had to have several stitches also, was eight days in hospital and off duty six weeks. Such epithets were used by the mob during the battle as "Rush Them," "We're going through," "To Hell with the police," "There are 510 of us and some are Russians with blood in their eyes."

Constable William Smith told of firing revolver shots into the air and the ground in the effort to bring the mob to order after members of the police party in his charge had been knocked down and two appeared to be missing. After this Roberts and Weir were able to come forward streaming with blood. Several other officers testified as to the clash which occurred on the Hidden Creek bridge after the strikers had refused to listen to the police request that a small committee instead of the entire mob proceed from the mine to be beaten for picket duty. These men later prevented men who would from going to work at the plant that morning, according to the testimony of the officers. At the conclusion of the crown evidence, Gordon Grant of Vancouver, defence counsel, moved that the charges against the five accused with the exception of Sanvido be dismissed on the grounds that there was no evidence to show that, with the possible exception of

Assizes shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon, Counsel for crown and defence are addressing the jury this afternoon after which Mr. Justice Denis Murphy will deliver his charge. It is expected the jury will retire to consider its verdict by late afternoon.

Police Are Blamed

Angus McIver, Kenneth Montgomery and Matt Jurgevic, three of the accused, denied on the witness stand that they had been in the Hidden Creek bridge at the time of the clash. Giovanni Sanvido, "the man with the beard," and Joseph Sarich, admitted having been there but, with other defence witnesses, declared that there had been no trouble until after police had started to force the crowd back, swinging batons and riding crops and firing their guns.

Angus McIver, one of the accused, told of impressing upon the men that they should be orderly and not cause trouble. He and Montgomery heard the shooting at the bridge but were a quarter of a mile away at the time. When they arrived the only man present was Steve Stenovich, who had his eye knocked out. They hurried along and caught up with the crowd near the bank. Inspector Shirras was talking to the men when they arrived.

Mr. McIver said he was recording secretary of the union. The inspector asked Sarich how long he intended to stay at the Beach and intimated that it was not a lawful picket. Montgomery told the inspector that many of the men were foreigners and, if anything was started, they might not be able to control them as they spoke a number of languages.

Witness said he was arrested by Constable Smith three days after the trouble. He was pointed out by an employee of the company. It was two hours later that he heard what the charges were against him.

Cross-examined, McIver admitted that the miners fetched the helmets from "The Dry." When witnesses said he was in the melee at the bridge it was either a case of mistaken identity or they were liars. He thought it was clear that the police were there to start trouble and break the strike. He did not believe the men had used the weapons produced.

Joe Sarich said he was arrested on the road a week after the clash. Mr. Lindsay was driving three police officers and he said to them: "This is the man I want you to arrest." He had been in hiding part of the time since the event.

Kenneth Montgomery, one of the accused, said he was with McIver and several others. He was a quarter of a mile from the shooting. He was chairman of the grievance committee. He was arrested in the bunkhouse which was surrounded by constables. He was pointed out by Mr. Healey. At first he was being detained for trespass but when seen by the inspector that officer said: "Place that man under arrest." He thought from a quarter to half of the men were wearing safety helmets. He did not know how many carried clubs. He spoke to a large number of men advising them not to go to work.

Lars Larsen and G. Endstrom corroborated former evidence. M. Jergovich, a shift boss at the mine, and another of the accused, said he had been asked by Sarich to go to the Beach and he went alone. He just walked up and down with one or two friends in the crowd. Matt Kondos corroborated.

Walter Vedos told of going to the Beach and being with a lot of men. He went to "stop some scabs that wanted to go to work." He did not speak very good English. Giovanni Sanvido, another accused, through an interpreter, told of being with the crowd on the way to the Beach. He did not see any officer on the ground and did not kick him. He was struck on the head but did not know who by. He was wearing a beard, at the time and also at the preliminary trial. He was the only man at the camp with a beard.

Sigurd Rovik and Nicholas Coley were the last defence witnesses, both giving versions of the Hidden Creek bridge clash. Both charged that the police had been instrumental in starting the hostilities by endeavoring to push the crowd back, applying their batons and whips and firing off their guns. Joe Sarich, they claimed, had endeavored to restore order among the strikers. Neither witness saw any of the strikers attack the police. The intention of the strikers had been to picket at the Beach.

Coley, after collapsing in the witness stand, was removed to the corridor where he was revived by police officers, the court adjourning for luncheon after the incident.

Witness said he was arrested by Constable Smith three days after the trouble. He was pointed out by an employee of the company. It was two hours later that he heard what the charges were against him.

Cross-examined, McIver admitted that the miners fetched the helmets from "The Dry." When witnesses said he was in the melee at the bridge it was either a case of mistaken identity or they were liars. He thought it was clear that the police were there to start trouble and break the strike. He did not believe the men had used the weapons produced.

Sanvido, any of the accused had taken part in the "riotous assembly," Sarich, indeed, having endeavored to prevent trouble while the other accused had been nothing more than present at the time. The presiding judge, Mr. Justice Murphy, holding that this was a matter for the jury to decide, refused to grant the motion.

Joseph Sarich on Stand

Joseph Sarich was then placed on the witness stand and, after reviewing the reasons for the strike being called at Anyox, gave his version of the clash with the police at the Hidden Creek bridge on the morning of February 3, asserting that the men whom he had led in the procession from the mine to the beach at Anyox had kept in order until they were rushed by the police on the narrow bridge where they were permitted no means of orderly retreat. He alleged that several revolver shots had been fired by Constable William Smith while other officers advanced, four deep upon the miners swinging batons and riding crops. As soon as the revolver fire ceased, probably as a result of Smith running out of ammunition, he (Sarich) had been able to restore order among his followers but not until at least one had been seriously injured, this man having had his eye knocked out. Sarich declared that the strikers had been warned by the strike committee against causing damage to company property, struggling with anyone or blocking the right of way. The procession had been intended merely as a gesture of sympathy for intending strikers at the smelter and for purposes of peaceful picketing if necessary. He held that the police had been responsible for starting hostilities.

After Sarich had completed giving evidence, which was largely unshaken under cross-examination by L. S. McGill, defence counsel the trial was adjourned from Monday evening to this morning, the five men continuing on bail.

Afternoon Session

First witness at the afternoon session of the trial yesterday was Constable T. D. Brunton who described the meeting of the procession (after the Hidden Creek bridge incident) with Inspector John Shirras, Staff Sergeant Alex. McNeill and other officers near the messhouse at Anyox beach. There were only nine police officers who were powerless against a mob of 510 men. Witness told of picking up weapons near the Hidden Creek bridge. Brunton admitted, under cross-examination, that Sarich had said to Inspector Shirras that there would be no trouble unless the police made it. Jurgevic had said that there were "510 men and a number of Russians with blood in their eyes. Shirras had expressed the opinion to Sarich, that a picket of such size was unlawful. However, there was no trouble at the beach after the procession had been allowed to proceed. Brunton identified all five accused as having been present at this time, Sanvido, who wore a goatee beard then, now being clean shaven. The crowd, witness would say, was a disorderly one, being out of control and blocking the road.

Constable Harold Raybone told of meeting the procession, at the head of which was Constable Smith and other officers, below the Hidden Creek bridge. The crowd, witness declared, was out of control and had stopped men from going to work. Many of those in the procession had on miners' helmets and several had weapons.

Constable Andrew Grant was with Raybone when the procession, with Smith and other officers at its head, was met. The crowd was very unruly.

Police Version of Clash

Constable William Smith described the clash on the Hidden Creek bridge. With six other officers, he was engaged in patrolling the Hidden Creek bridge. At 6:15 a.m. a large crowd of men, probably 60 or 65 at first, came down from the mine. Witness spoke to Sarich, inquiring where they were going. Sarich replied they intended to picket near the smelter. Witness suggested that a committee of six be appointed whereupon Sarich turned to his followers and spoke to them in a foreign language, the marchers then shouting: "We are all a committee. We are all going through." Smith again suggested a committee of nine after which further cries went up of "We are all going through." "To Hell with the police." "Kill Him." "To Hell with the police." Then the men (strikers) started to attack and tried to drag witness down. Witness saw Constables McIndoo and Weir coming up from the rear, the former got through but Weir fell. Witness also saw Greenhalgh kicked and dragged down. After a scuffle, Weir emerged from the crowd streaming with blood and practically unrecognizable. Constable Roberts soon after emerged, also streaming with blood. With Greenhalgh down and Weir missing, witness had pulled his revolver and fired one shot into the air and another into the floor of the bridge. The crowd was unruly and he could see clubs swinging in the air. After order had been restored, witness, seeing that it was impossible to stop the men, allowed them to proceed, he and the other officers leading them back to the beach. Sanvido, with a beard, was among the men at the bridge. Weir and Roberts were sent to the hospital for attention.

Under cross-examination, Smith said that his instructions had been to stop a large number of men from going through. Witness did not see the other officers use any weapons on the crowd although he had heard that one of the miners had had his eye knocked out.

After the crowd had shouted "Let's rush them. To Hell with the police," Constable Greenhalgh testified that the officers pushed to about the centre of the bridge where he was borne down and stamped upon, there being shouts from the crowd of "Kill the son of a b---." After the revolver shots, witness was able to get up and shoulder his way through. One of the crowd had shouted, "I have a rifle and can shoot too." Orders were given to allow the men to proceed.

Constable R. C. Gilker told of being forced to his knees when the men rushed the officers. He received a blow on the back and had two ribs fractured.

Constable Scott gave corroborative evidence regarding the clash at the bridge as did Game Warden Ed. Martin acting as a special constable. The men in the crowd were undoubtedly angry. Constable William Harrison, stationed at another post nearby, told of the passage of the procession.

Constables Roberts and Weir described the attempts which were made to throw them over the bridge and of the injuries they received in being knocked down and trampled upon. They were the last sworn witnesses.

Defence Motion Denied

After defence counsel's motion for dismissal of the charges against all but Sanvido had been denied by His Lordship, Sarich was called to the stand. He told of the grievances such as wage cuts, living conditions and working conditions which had resulted in the strike being called and gave his account of the clash as summarized above.

At 6 o'clock last evening, the court rose until this morning at 10:30 when Angus McIver, another of the accused, went on the stand in his own defence.

The jury hearing the case consists of Frank Dibb, foreman, S. A. Bird, G. A. Edgcombe, C. E. McKeown, Dugald McLean, W. D. Vance, Hubert Ward, Robert Gordon, B. J. Bacon, J. B. Azar, John McLeod and Robert Lahiff. Louis Mazzei is acting as interpreter for Sanvido who is an Italian.

He has been drawing city relief and the new position is estimated to be worth about $50 a month or more.

WHIFFLETS From the Waterfront

The Armour Salvage Co.'s big power tug Salvage Princess yesterday afternoon, came off the pontoons at the local dry dock where she has been for the past two or three weeks receiving annual overhaul and having repairs made to her shaft with which trouble developed recently. The Princess is now in shipshape to take care of all the activities the season has to offer in the way of work and service.

The Armour Salvage Co.'s derriek now, which had an arduous job recently in connection with the salvaging of the wrecked halibut boat Livingstone II on the west coast of Dundas Island, also came off the pontoons yesterday after having had her bottom painted and repaired.

Dismantling of the vessel including the removal of her Fairbanks-Morse diesel engine having been completed, the hull of the Livingstone II was also removed from the pontoons yesterday. The derriek, which is lashed alongside a scow at present, is to be beached meantime and repairs may be made to the hull next winter.

gard to the property was forthcoming. The mayor had no authority to put insurance on the property.

"Yes and you sitting there drawing your pay yet knew nothing about it," said the mayor in a loud and challenging voice.

Alderman Rochester read a statement showing that certain rents had been collected and insurance policies paid and that the city now owed M. M. Stephens & Co. Ltd. a balance of $18.60.

The question of certain rents alleged to have been paid was discussed and Alderman Pillsbury said he had visited the firm in question and had been told that amounts totaling two hundred dollars had been paid after October 1. He thought Alderman Black was correct and that no payment should be made without authority of the finance committee.

Falsehood Alleged

When Alderman Black repeated, as he did many times, that no statement had been issued in regard to the McIntyre Block transactions, the mayor retorted: "That is a falsehood."

"I want to tell you that no statement was ever before the finance committee. You have been drawing a salary out of the city," said the alderman.

Mayor Stephens expressed the opinion there was no reason why any alderman should "grovel in the gutter." No one could show that payments had been made that were not accounted for. The reply was that, if the statement had been in the hands of the treasurer, they would not have been calling names at each other. It should have been in the hands of the city.

Alderman Casey suggested that, as the council was going out of business and that contradictory statements had been made, they should get the real facts and hold a meeting Saturday night to wind up. This would safeguard both the mayor and others. They should go out with a clear sheet.

Alderman Rudderham thought that, when properties reverted to the city, they should be handled by the city. He thought it was a technical error in putting on insurance without permission.

The mayor did not agree that it was an error.

Alderman Wesch made a slashing attack on the method of doing city business. He said the city treasurer should have notified the committee. Business of the city was conducted "in the rottenest way." Almost everybody under the Housing Scheme was behind with payments. The treasurer was not attending to this city business. The matter had been drifting for years and the whole thing was ridiculous.

Mayor Stephens said he thought the McIntyre Building was the only one in which rents had been collected for the city. It was true that there had been a lot of neglect. Soldiers' property had been sublet and rents collected and the city knew nothing of it. There should be a statement in regard to it on the minutes of the city.

Things Very Lax

Alderman Rochester said he thought things very lax. They had not been given a fair show since they had charge of things in the city. The B. C. Undertakers property reverted last fall and they did not know anything about it until recently. If rents were to be paid direct to the city they would not be much better off unless they checked up.

After the vote had been taken it was decided that the mayor and Alderman Pillsbury should go together to the firm that claimed to have paid the suggested unaccounted for rents and the mayor said he was going to ask Alderman Pillsbury to be just as frank about correcting as he was about making it should the statement prove incorrect.

It was then decided to hold a final special meeting Saturday night at which a statement of soldier housing and other financial business would be presented to the council and left on record.
