MATTERN RELIEF PLANE LANDS AT

WILLIAM ALEXANDER AND THREE COMPANIONS BOUND FROM EDMONTON TO FAIRBANKS NON-STOP PASSED OVER PRINCE RUPERT THIS AFTERNOON.

A large wheel-equipped monoplane circled several times over Prince Rupert about 2 o'clock this afternoon looking for a landing field and, after remaining a few minutes hereabouts, continued its flight in an easterly direction. It was believed to be the Mattern relief plane.

The plane finally dropped a note on Third Avenue immediately in front of the Daily News office reading: "Going to Exstew on the Skeena River to land." The note, which was weighted, attached to a light paper and bore no signature, was immediately turned over to the provincial police. The plane turned inland soon after dropping the note. Joe Ratchford actually picked the note up.

The plane dropped a second note in the Gurvich backyard stating that it was going back up the Skeena River to look for a landing.

Government Telegraphs reported that the plane, before coming on here, had circled over Terrace as if looking for a landing.

The machine was later definitely identified as the Mattern relief plane.

The plane was evidently in some sort of difficulty. Exstew is a station on the Canadian National Railways below Terrace about 70 miles east of here.

William Alexander and three companions, enroute from Indian, is apparently on the road New York to Nome with an airplane which will engage in to recovery following one of the a search for James Mattern, who has been missing for rarest operations in the history of three weeks now on a hop from Khabaravosk, Siberia, to Nome, Alaska, in the course of a projected flight around the world, were flying through this district this morning

Planning to fly nonstop to Fairbanks, the relief plane left Edmonton early this morning and at 10:24 a.m. was reported by VERY BUSY Canadian National Telegraph to have passed over Smithers, Canadian Press reporting that it had passed over Hazelton at 10:55 a.m. From Fairbanks, the New York visitor, there is little evidence of plane was expected to jump to Nome tomorrow and, from there, was to commence an aerial search of coastline and islands of Western Alaska and Behring Sea for trace. of Mattern.

The Government Telegraph operator at Terrace reported at 4 o'clock this aftenoon that he believed the Alexander plane had come down on a field some dista ance from the town of Terrace. He was investigating.

NO TIME LIKE PRESENT

Once the painters and decorators get busy in Prince Rupert there will be a lot to do and it will be difficult to get them when they are needed. By September there will be considerable money moving around and undoubtedly a good deal of it will be expended in improving the homes, inside and out.

In view of the possibilities it might be a good plan for owners of property who can afford it to get their work done now, before the rush begins.

COPPER GOING UP

Only a few months ago it looked as if it would be a long time before copper advanced in price. Statistics were the largest pineapple importers, quoted to show that there was plenty of it in the world and the supply still exceeded the demand. Smelters would have to shut down soon and more thousands of men be thrown out of work.

Today we see copper advancing in price and the copper mines and smelters are busy. At Anyox already there has been an increase in wages and if the prices goes higher there will soon be another. The market is receptive and with more building and construction and repair work going on, the demand for the product is steadily increasing.

OTHER COMMODITIES

What is true of copper will be true of other commodities. Everything is beginning to advance in price and the wise people are buying now instead of waiting until they find they have to pay more.

Among the businesses that are improving is life insurance. In May of this year there was a drop of only one per cent in the gross amount of new insurance over the pre- land and son, Port Essington; Roy Famous North Beach on Graham vious May. In the past, the large demand for better quality pineapple has been supplied by packers outside Empire countries. Under certain British preferences pineapple from foreign countries has been made subject to a higher scale of tariff which now makes it possible for Empire pineapple to enter the Canadian market on a very advantageous basis to the Canadian consumer. Birks-Crawford Ltd., of Vancouver, who have been one of were among the first to realize the possibilities of a more intense development of a British Empire product and immediately entered into negotiations with leading growers and packers to supply a high quality product to replace that which was previously supplied by foreign shippers.
