ABOUT THE "OPTIMIST JOB"

Recently this paper changed its name from the Optimist to the Daily News. Its job department, accordingly changed its name from Optimist Job to News Job department.

Within the last few days, a new concern has started and assumed the name of the Optimist Job. It is not the job department of any newspaper, and its assumption of this misleading title is an obvious attempt to infringe on the goodwill and patronage of the job department of this paper, earned under its former title.

In assuming the discarded name of this paper's job department, the new concern may be within its legal rights. But on the point of honor which lies behind it, the public is entitled to pass its own judgment.

The entire plant and equipment of the job plant of the Optimist is in the News printshops, and is being operated under skilled management. The youthful optimists who have started operations, under the cast-off title, are in no way con nected with the original Optimist job plant.

MUSLIN AND LACE

Hints for Laundering Fragile "Frillies"

For stiffening embroidered muslin collars, blouses trimmed with fine lace, and the like, gum water is to be preferred to starch, as it does not give the fibres of the material the same harsh appearance. To prepare the gum water, Little's NEWS Agency put an ounce of the best gum arabic, broken in small bits, into a pitcher and pour over it a cuper in a warm place and stir the contents frequently with a piece of smooth stick until the gurn is entirely dissolved. Strain through fine muslin and bottle for use. Indeed various versions of the pointed collar may already be seen on smart costumes, the most modest having the appearance of i a sailor collar of moderate dimensions that has been cut away to a sharp point at the back.

Then there is the long, narrow shawl collar, very much wider than formerly at the shoulders, as if | SECOND - AVENUE it had borrowed some of the dimensions of the popular sailor collar model. This collar, made of satin or silk and bound either with braid or a band of cretonne is splendid for wear with serges, tweeds, cashmeres and other fabrics which are developed into smart tailored suits. Silk and satin tailor mades usually have collars of finer fabrics, though as the summer gets nearer upon us the cretonne bindings are seen in greater number and more charming variety than ever.

After all, the fashionable dressmakers are not getting very far away from the idea of banded ALFRED CARSS, trimmings.
