THE SCAVENGING MONOPOLY

Tonight the city council will meet in session. One of the items of the business will be the final disposition of Alderman Hilditch's by-law to create a scavenging monopoly. The by-law has passed three readings, and will come up for ratification-or rejection.

The old method of collecting and disposing of garbage by licensed tering the room and had after- horrible, all that was monstrous throw this substance into the scavenging firms was not a satisfactory one. No one is anxious to have it continued. It was a crude and costly way, and only utilised in emergency until the city could formulate a better plan. Nothing herein said is to be construed as an argument for reviving the old system of collection by private scavenging firms. As a system, it was almost as obnoxious as the creation of the scavenging monopoly, thrown open the window. That the threshold, whose very shadow sides, in peaceful Cornwall, visifor while theoretically in competition with each other, scavengers, like competing railroads, soon learn the value of making a gentleman's agreement to maintain rates and get all they can out of the public.

The creation of the scavenging monopoly under a private contractor, is all the more suspicious, because the council do not believe in the private contract system. Alderman Hilditch himself, led the council's cry for a public works department.

Yet on the question of city scavenging—a work which owing room—in the one case a fire, in I tried to scream, and was vaguely to its relation to public health and comfort should above all others the other a lamp. Already complaints are coming in from citizens of alleged highhanded treatment from the scavengers. Several people in small shacks have been told that the charge will be 50 cents a visit. The schedule states that the total cost of garbage and night soil collection is to one would expect that the effects reason had returned, and we were summer. be 50 cents per month.

Does this mean that the contractors will only call once a month at shacks and cabins?

If so, the council had better vote $50,000 for a new typhoid wing sult seems to indicate that it to mark the livest wire up there.
