PRINCE RUPERT AS GRAIN PORT

Owing to the interest taken by the people of the prairie provinces, the eyes of the world are continually turned to the Hudson Bay Railway and the Port of Churchill. Special privileges have been given grain shippers to induce them to send their grain out through the Hudson Bay and privileges have also been granted to ships carrying grain cargoes from that port. In spite of this, there have been only very small shipments made that way so far.

At Prince Rupert, which is also at the terminus of a Canadian National road, there is also a grain elevator, a ready made harbor not in need of dredging with a perfectly safe entrance. Everything is here ready for business but it is withheld, except in little dribbles. The government does not worry itself and the rest of the province seems perfectly satisfied. Hence we drift along with nothing done to try to stimulate the grain business through this port.

For some time past it was said that, if we had logs to ship to the Orient so that the deckloads might be made up, we could ship part grain cargoes. Now, it seems, we have the logs but they are to be towed to Vancouver to make up cargoes there.

Prince Rupert people seem to have become accustomed to the situation, perfectly satisfied to continue to serve the rest of the country in an inferior position. They have almost forgotten that they have a grain port. This slumberous condition is a happy one but it does not make for improvement. If we had made half the noise they have made over the Hudson Bay route we should have had attention ere this.

FEELING OF CONFIDENCE

Premier Pattullo, who left last night for the east after being delayed here owing to an unfortunate sickness, is saying very little of his plans and prospects in the east. He is, however, extremely confident that he will get results. He evidently feels that Mr. Bennett is at present in a mood to help himself politically and the country at large by accepting the advice of the western premiers.

FABLE IN POLITICS

Being an Account of How the Battle of Blah Was Won

(By Sub Rosa)

I am fortunate in having some old prints among my collection of books. In browsing through one of them the other day I came upon a translation from the Greek of a dream of Duffius Pattulios, one of the trusted generals of Cato, that great old warrior, philosopher and farmer.

Pattulios had just returned home to Trepur after decisively whipping the enemy at the battle of Blah and had strolled over to Cato's farm. It was in the middle of July and the meadows were being cut for hay. They had both made themselves comfortable against the side of a new rick. The lucky had brought some old wine of a vintage about 999 B.C. and Cato was diligently instructing Pattulios in the art of haying. "Mow your hay in the proper season and be cautious that you do not mow it too late. Cut before the seed is ripe." But Pattulios heard not. A loud snort, which Cato had first thought was from his prize bull "Durham," was the only response that came from his trusty general—Pattulios had been overcome by the warm air, the anaesthetic perfume from the new mown hay and the 999 B.C.

Some time later, after Pattulios had recovered from a facial disfigurement which resulted from the sting of a bumble bee while he was asleep, he related to Cato, over the garden wall, the following dream he had had: "I had just been elected a senator for Appian Highway, a district situated among the Heights of Olympus, near the Aleutian Islands in the Bay of Naples. My election was by acclamation because I had agreed to sponsor a bill in the Provincial Legislature which sought to make gossip a crime. One of the provisions of the bill required that the defendant against a charge of slander must show that the reports have been investigated by competent and impartial authorities and proved to be true or else the defendant under oath must reveal the name or the names of those who originated the alleged slander. What do you think of that Cato?"

"Well that seems fair enough. The only possible improvement seems to be along the line of adequate punishment if the defendant be found guilty. Possibly a reversion to the ducking stool for women and the pillory for men, and boiling in oil for both males and female scandal mongers. When it can be proved that their damnable tittle-tattle has wrecked a home, might prove effective." "Yes, I agree with you Cato. Malicious gossip in small towns like Trepur flourishes to an extent not at all appreciated in a large city. In many places, Trepur especially, it is the most popular form of amusement and skull-duggery. When the 'Daughters of This and That' and the 'Brothers of That and This,' at their weekly or monthly meetings, have nothing to discuss further upon the topic of 'for the good of the order,' they naturally discuss the real or fancied shortcomings of their neighbors, in which occasionally a member of the Clericus joins in. As a man of the Gods the wise village dominie never listens to such dirt, for he is ever mindful of that reply 'Neither do I condemn thee.'

Small Town Gossip

"It is easily demonstrable, Pattulios, that a small town gossip ranks lower in decency than a sewer rat that feeds upon offal. It is also true, but not as demonstrably so, that 99.99 percent of gossip is either wholly false or else exaggerated. The remaining 0.01 percent may pertain to matters of no one's business other than those directly concerned. How often do we get the complete stories of both sides to a scandal? And if we do, how often is it any of our business? Count your fingers; you may not get beyond the thumb."

"Yes, you are right, Cato. No doubt most of us agree that the greatest violation of the decalogue is murder. It is wondered if it really is? Killing a man is often less damaging to him, and far less harmful to his children, than blasting his reputation with malicious lies. The old Aristotelian axiom, dear to the hearts of our childhood, tells us, 'Truth crushed to earth will rise again.' That's silly nonsense insofar as an individual is concerned, for the truth of the old saw remains: 'Give a dog a bad name and hang him.'

"Small town gossip! The Gods save us from it! There's nothing more venomous in all creation—hooded cobras included. More homes are blasted, more careers are wrecked, more characters are soured, and greater familial bitter-nesses are engendered by small town gossip than by any other sin.' Bitter? Yes, but Cato have you ever lived in a small town. Thank the Gods it was only a dream."

"Duffius Pattulios, you had a heavy load to carry. Let's go inside and lighten it with a little 999 B.C."

SMALL BOTTLE CONQUERS MOTHER'S COLD AND BANISHES BABY'S COUGH

Here is just another instance amongst thousands that goes to prove there is "nothing like BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE" for coughs, or colds. But we'll let Mrs. Haden, of Todmorden, tell the story herself.

"Recently, I had such a cold I couldn't speak. I got a small bottle of BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE and in a couple of days my cold had disappeared. My 18 months old baby coughed a great deal at night. I gave him a few drops of BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE on sugar. It stopped his cough entirely and now he sleeps the night through."

That is one great feature of Buckley's—you can give it to a baby with the same perfect safety as you can to a grown-up. If you have a cough, cold, flu or bronchitis, get a bottle of this remarkable remedy today—it acts like a flash—a single sip proves it. Buckley's Mixture is sold everywhere. Refuse substitutes.

Dean Gibson Is Heard at Special Prayer Week Meet

Last night's meeting in connection with the universal Week of Prayer was held in First Presbyterian Church. Rev. W. D. Grant Hollingworth conducted the meeting and Very Rev. James Gibson, dean of St. Andrew's Cathedral, spoke on the subject of "National and International Life."

Dean Gibson reminded his listeners that the nations of the world were being brought closer together. This was anticipated by the prophets of old who looked down through the ages to see the nations of the world living in harmony. This living together would be accomplished by lifting up Jesus. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me." Jesus must be given supreme place in the nation but, before that could be done, He must come first in the life of the individual.

The meeting tonight will be held in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Rev. C. D. Clarke will give the address.

Her Address Interesting

Anglican Young People Heard Mrs. Mandy Last Evening

At the first meeting of the New Year, the members of the Anglican Young People's Association were entertained last evening with a very interesting lecture recital by Mrs. Mandy. Taking "Questions" as the theme, Mrs. Mandy touched on questions of every day life and cleverly illustrated this by using several poems and a story. Mrs. Mandy brought forward her theme in a very charming manner and held the intense interest of all present.

Tonight's train, due from the East at 10 p.m., was reported this morning to be on time.

REPORT OF DELEGATION

Canadian Legion Representatives Interview Pattullo—To Open Building Soon

The regular monthly meeting of the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L. took place last evening with President J. Preece in the chair.

A delegation which met Premier T. D. Pattullo reported that the resolutions presented had been taken under advisement by Mr. Pattullo. These included protests against the composition of the new tribunal and the omission of Col. C. W. Peck, V.C., D.S.O., representing the province of British Columbia, therefrom; the employment in the local Canadian National Railways division of men who had fought against the Allies in the Great War while returned men who had fought for their country were unemployed; the raising of the age of admittance to the elementary schools whereby the children are handicapped in competition with children from other parts of the province, and the imposition of such a fee for pupils over sixteen years as to prevent many from obtaining their fair right of education; and a plea for the employment of local long-shoremen by the Canadian Pacific steamships. Appreciation of the Premier's action in meeting the delegation was expressed.

The secretary reported on his visit as zone representative to Stewart and Anyox. He had given reports of the annual convention and had discussed matters of general interest including measures for the perpetuation of the Canadian Legion and its ideals.

The offer of a memorial slab from the B.C. Undertakers' through F. Morris was accepted and a suitable legend selected for inscription on it. Progress on the new building was reported and it is hoped to have the opening ceremonies within a month. New members admitted included Dr. J. H. Carson, James Clark and J. B. Scott.
