A LABOR DAY SERMON

Having an aim in life is a great thing but if the aim is a low one it cannot inspire to great heights. Any ideal which leads only to personal comfort is a low one. To get rich so as to be in a position to enjoy a life of ease is anything but a high ideal and cannot inspire to great and lofty deeds. Neither is it a high ideal to live this life with the idea of a life of ease and comfort in the life to come. Such an ideal cannot lead to great achievement.

Today as never before real leaders are needed with high ideals who will with good judgment crystallize modern thought.
