HAZELTON BASEBALL TEAM IS READY FOR RUPERT'S

Officially Declared Champion Ball Team of Northern B.C. For 1911, The Hazelton Tigers Hope to Include a Live Prince Rupert Team in Next Years Schedule—Possible if Rupert Gets Park

Hazelton Tigers, the live baseball team of Prince Rupert's nearest neighboring centre up river, have just finished the season's series of matches with Telkwa and the G. T. P. Engineers, and are now officially declared winners of the Pea-vine League Pennant for the season of 1911. This makes them present champions of Northern B. C.

The standing of the teams at the close of the series was as follows:

	Won	Lost
Hazelton.....	5	2
Telkwa.....	2	2
G. T. P. Engineers.....	0	3

The last game with the Engineers at Hazelton on Labor Day was bitterly contested all the way through, and was won by Hazelton by a batting rally in the eighth inning. Graham Rock, the young Seattle high school athlete who pitched for Hazelton, struck out twenty of the railroaders. Live crowds witnessed the matches all through the series, and betting on favorite teams was brisk. On Labor Day there were 387 paid admissions to the grounds, and this did not include ladies who were exempt from the tag.

The Hazelton Tigers' team line-up includes the following: G. Rock, pitcher, R. Rock third base, Daniels short-stop, Kinney left-field, McDonnel first base, Riley second base, Pat Jennings catcher, Al. Harris right field, Stickney centre field, and "Square Deal" O'Neill, manager. Graham Rock, the star pitcher of the team, will try out with the Seattle team in the N. W. League next spring.

A schedule will be arranged for next season with Telkwa, Larkford, Hazelton, and if possible Prince Rupert. Mr. J. A. Riley, secretary of the Hazelton Athletic Association, is most anxious to include a Prince Rupert representative ball team in that schedule and hopes that his friends amongst the boys down here will keep the idea well in view. With the indoor league so flourishing there is no doubt about the talent, but it is imperative that continuous efforts be made while there is a chance of getting the athletic ground site secured from the city, and preliminary work done to level and prepare it for play early next summer.

The Prince Rupert is on her last run to Stewart for the season, and for the winter the Prince John takes up the Stewart run.

Grand Dance

There will be a Grand Dance in the McIntyre Hall on Friday evening. Dancing from 9 p.m. to 12.30. Music by Gray's Four-piece Orchestra. Admission $1.00. Ladies free.

PRINCE RUPERT PRODUCE TO FEATURE AT FESTIVAL

First "Harvest Home" Ever Held in This City Planned in S.A. Citadel on Monday—Successful Gardens of Prince Rupert Invited to Display Their Returns—Many Contributions Promised

Special efforts are being made by the Salvation Army officials stationed in the Prince Rupert Citadel to get up the first harvest festival ever held in Prince Rupert, and in spite of the ding-dong strife raging in the political arena at the moment it is confidently felt that within the walls of the Citadel on Monday night, 18th inst., there will be a big gathering, and a first harvest festival worthy of Prince Rupert. A feature of the idea is the effort being made by the Army officers working under direction of Captain Kerr, to have the festival represent as far as possible some of the flowers, vegetables, and garden produce grown within the city limits of Prince Rupert, and also some of the fine garden and agricultural produce grown in the districts neighboring, up river, and on Porcher Island for instance.

To display the powers of Prince Rupert to grow fine garden stuff, and beautiful flowers is the aim of the Army officers who will decorate the Citadel with as many samples of the Prince Rupert harvest as can be obtained. Those citizens who have made good as gardeners this season have an opportunity here to let others see what a little skill and trouble can do in Prince Rupert, and it is the aim of the S. A. to have the hall photographed when decorated so that the picture may be sent to headquarters in the East.

"DUFF" PATTULLO SCORES DICK McBRIDE'S PERFDY

British Columbia's Premier Says "We Must Not Have Anything to do With the United States, Even Casually;"—At the Moment he is Handing Vast Timber and Agricultural Lands to American Speculators—Pattullo's Apostrophe to "The Greatest Canadian of Us All"

Although T. D. Pattullo has resigned his seat as alderman and is temporarily absent from Prince Rupert, he can be relied upon to be in the thick of the fight when a political contest is on and he may be expected here at the last grand rally of the Liberal party which will close the campaign. He is now in Victoria but is well acquainted all over the Dominion with the people and the general political trend of many of its constituencies. He has recently written to one of the leading dailies of Canada a brief review of the situation, addressing it to Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself, to whom he is personally well known. As anything Mr. Pattullo may have to say of a public character is of personal interest to the people of Prince Rupert, his communication to the whole Canadian people is given herewith:

"At a time when the Tory party and the Nationalists of

Quebec are pursuing the despicable tactics of trying to prejudice the Quebec electorate against Laurier by appeals to passion, it strikes one looking at the situation from long range that an especial duty devolves upon Ontario to stand by the man whose whole lifetime of service to his country has been one long preaching of a spirit of tolerance and a better understanding between the two races of Canada, which, for better or for worse, must join hand in hand for the upbuilding of our common country.

"Here in British Columbia we read that Laurier is taken to task in Quebec for starting a navy. Out here his opponents take him to task on the ground that we haven't any navy, while the Tory cohorts, lead by Premier McBride, endeavor to appeal to the large English population by waving the old flag and picturing the establishment of an Imperial capital at Ottawa, going so far as to say that 'we must have nothing to do with the United States, even in the most casual way,' and this at the very moment when the McBride Government has already alienated, not to American settlers, but to American speculators, a vast and tremendous portion of the timber and agricultural lands of the Province.

"DADDY" WEEKS AND HIS WEE STRAWBERRY PATCH

An Object Lesson From Scotland Proving by Actual Facts That Under Reciprocity Skeena Valley Strawberries Must Command the Best Prices in Both Home and Southern Markets

When Mr. L. W. Patmore in his speech on Tuesday night referred to the fact that "Daddy" Weeks of Kitsumkalum would get both the Prince Rupert and the Seattle market for his strawberries, and would not be in the least hurt by the effect of reciprocity in the cheapening for North B. C. Coast consumers, of Washington States vegetable and fruit, Mr. Patmore was convincingly right. The audience appreciated this and applauded. There is an exact parallel to the situation existing over in the Old Country at the present time which is worth looking into.

In the sunny valleys of the Blairgowrie district of Scotland is situated Scotland's strawberry country. Scotch strawberries are as famous in the markets of the old land, as Lakelse and Kitsumkalum strawberries deserve to be on the American continent. Scotch strawberries always fetch higher prices in all markets (even in their home market) than South Country strawberries. Their flavor is so much finer owing to their having grown in the more northerly latitude. They also command better prices, owing to their being grown in the more northerly latitude, they ripen just a week or two later than the English fruit, and are at their best on the market when the English product is getting lush and over-ripe so that it does not stand transportation well. Scottish strawberries get the table market at table prices for all their own season. South country berries get canning prices most of the time, and frequently quantities are dumped on the market at less than cost to save actual waste.

Just as the Blairgowrie Valley strawberries command always the best prices in London and Edinburgh markets in spite of English grown competitors, so will "Daddy" Weeks' Kitsumkalum strawberries, and the Lakelse Valley berries command always the best prices in the Prince Rupert, Vancouver, and Seattle markets under reciprocity (which places B. C. in the same trade relation with America as exists between Scotland and England, at least as regard fruit). Just as the Scotch strawberry commands the best part of the season at the best prices because it is grown in the more northerly latitude, so will "Daddy" Weeks' strawberries command a long market, and high prices. There can be no doubt about it. As Mr. Patmore said: "Daddy" Weeks will get not only his home market, but also the Seattle market, and at better prices even in Rupert, than the Seattle berries can command after transportation. Practical trade tests in the British field proves it.

MAYOR MANSON'S ABSENCE HOLDS UP CITY BUSINESS

Licensing Commissioners Have to Adjourn Till After Sept. 21st Because Their Chairman is Off With His "Heaven-born" Colleague Dr. Clayton, Stumping Comox-Atlin to Bolster up Clements

The licence commissioners met yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Smith and Merryfield attending. There were only two cases before the board, the application of Maurice Bondeaux for the transfer of the Windsor hotel to William H. Wright and George Sutherland's application for a bottle license.

On the motion of Alderman Smith the transfer of the Windsor hotel licence was allowed.

When the matter of the bottle licence came up Alderman Smith did not see how they could proceed with its consideration in the absence of the Mayor and therefore moved an adjournment. He stated that he did not know when the Mayor would return and an adjournment was therefore taken to September 27th.

Owing to the absence of the Mayor from his post of duty as chairman of the licensing commission, the work of the board has been held up until after the termination of the political campaign. It is well known in the city, of course, that the political situation and the urgent need for the bolstering up of Mr. Clements, the Conservative candidate for Comox-Atlin, are responsible for the absence of the Mayor and his henchman Alderman Clayton—that "heaven-born orator" according to Alderman Douglas. Both the "Heaven-born" and the Mayor are busy stumping it as hard as they can to bolster up their candidate, Clements, and meanwhile Prince Rupert citizens with a real regard for the good of their city are realising that a mayor who deserts the bridge of the Prince Rupert civic ship when there is plenty of work to do there, in order to try and bolster into Comox-Atlin a Vancouver man who has persistently knocked Prince Rupert, might, to put it mildly, be improved upon.

THE HISTORY OF RECIPROCITY

In 1878 Sir Charles Tupper, speaking in the House of Commons on the tariff, said:

"I think the hon. gentleman will find that, as far as the agriculturists are concerned, they understand this perfectly well. They would be quite satisfied with a reciprocity treaty that would give them free access to the markets of the United States for their products, but they are not believers in one sided free trade."

This shows fairly the view held by the protectionists who framed the National Policy. It is in line with Sir John Macdonald's National Policy resolution of 1878, in which the hope was expressed that the adoption of a protective tariff by Canada would eventually bring about reciprocity. It is in line with the bill embodying the protectionist tariff of 1879, which contained an offer of reciprocity in natural products with the United States.

As a matter of fact, reciprocity has been until only a few months ago the policy of both parties in this country. Both parties united in the efforts which resulted in securing the old reciprocity treaty of 1854. Both joined in seeking to prevent its abrogation. Alexander Mackenzie's Government sought to make a new treaty in the seventies. The National Policy of Sir John Macdonald, introduced in 1879, contained a statutory offer of reciprocity. In the last appeal made by Sir John Macdonald to the Canadian people in 1891, the desire to obtain a mandate for negotiations with the United States was given as the reason for a premature dissolution of Parliament. The Laurier Government, shortly after obtaining power, tried in vain to secure reciprocity.

We are told by the opponents of the reciprocity now before the people of Canada for their verdict, that the conditions have changed. But the changes that have occurred have made reciprocity not less, but more, to be desired. In 1879, when Sir John made his statutory offer of reciprocity, the population of the United States was 40,000,000. Today the population of that country is over 92,000,000, and the proportion of food consumers has increased more rapidly than population.

We are told by the opponents of the reciprocity that increase of trade with the United States will imperil British connection. But the huge increase in Canada's trade with the United States since 1891 has not imperilled British connection. On the contrary, annexationist sentiment, of which there was some in 1891, has absolutely disappeared. Sir John Macdonald, by taking his stand in 1891 on the policy of the present reciprocity agreement, gave conclusive proof of his belief that the present argument against reciprocity, that it will pull Canada out of the Empire, is simply bosh.

VALUE OF RESOURCES

There appears to be a somewhat prevalent impression that the wealth of natural resources of which Canada is possessed is real wealth and a valuable asset to the nation. This is undoubtedly true, but the form in which the truth finds expression often leads to an erroneous conviction. Natural resources are real wealth only when they are converted into marketable commodity which can in turn be converted into the medium of exchange. A mountain of gold is of no value to anyone until the ores are mined, reduced, refined and made convertible into bills of exchange. The already enormous but ever increasing wheat crop of central Canada is of little use as mere wheat. Excepting for the amount necessary for milling into flour for domestic consumption it is of no value at all unless it can be exported. Forest areas of incalculable density are an asset only because they can be converted into the products of the mills and made useful in the many industrial pursuits of mankind.

Undoubtedly the most prosperous nations are those which possess the greatest natural resources and are most productive in the conversion of these into the finished articles of commerce, but where natural resources and raw material abound to the extent that obtains in Canada the industrial value of raw material is likely to lag behind its export value for many years. Those who possess the raw materials, whether grain, timber, fruit, fish, pulpwood, minerals or crude products of these, are more than likely to realize upon their values long before the industrial development of the country can catch up with the business opportunities afforded by traffic in the raw materials.

It is a mistake to suppose that because raw materials are being exported from the country that the country is being thereby despoiled of its wealth. Where value is obtained for those they are as true an asset and of as much worth to commerce as when manufactured at home. To lock them up until the industrial development of the country can be brought to keep pace with the demand for the finished products is to block the way to prosperity.

The laws of industry and commerce compel the manufacture and finishing of raw materials into artificial products as near the base of supplies as nature will permit. The whole system of commercial economy turns on this principle. But to try to force the manufacture of crude materials at home against the laws of economy is a wasteful method and whatever monetary results accrue in one direction do so because of the robbing of Peter to pay Paul.

The whole system of protective tariffs exists because of an effort to force industry and commerce into artificial channels. Though there is no doubt that those immediately concerned in these protected enterprises prosper, it is always at the expense of some section of the community. Thus the farmers of Canada have been paying for many years for the prosperity of the manufacturing industries. Now that they have struggled out of these kindergarten experiences and have become producers themselves to an extent that demands an open market in the commercial channels of the world the Conservative party of Canada insists on shutting the door against them and compelling them to trade at home. They ask for no protection; what they desire is a chance to sell what they produce where they can obtain the most for it, and we believe that Canada is intending to give them their chance. She will be unjust to her best people if she does not and will be guilty of the murder of her own prosperity.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOLING

By Clive Phillips Wolley

(AUTHOR OF GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO, ETC.)

CHAPTER IV.

It was a glorious and memorable day for all of them. Four perfect horsemen in a horseman's country. Such a taste of paradise as, in this weary old world, generally precedes trouble.

"How much of this belongs to the Risky Ranch, Mrs. Rolt?" asked Anstruther.

"All of it as far as you can see."

"None of it," corrected Jim, "except a few meadows and some water front on the Fraser as you can't see."

"How annoying you are, Jim. You know what I mean perfectly well."

"Only you don't say it, and he doesn't know."

"Well, if it isn't yours," persisted the puzzled Anstruther, looking from one to the other, "why should not anyone run their cattle over it?"

"They might if they did not need water or hay. These two Harrison boys are trying it now."

"What Jim means, Mr. Anstruther, is that we have corralled, oh, I beg your pardon, Kitty, secured the exclusive right to all the water and all the hay meadows in the district, and without these the run would not be worth anything. Stock must have water, and in winter must sometimes have hay."

"I see, but how do you keep your cattle. I don't see any fences."

"We don't keep them, they keep themselves, in summer, and in winter—" she broke off abruptly, and pointed to where a number of slow-moving beasts were strung out in line of march towards the river.

"Do you see that band? Those are the first of our beasts coming in. For the next fortnight you will see them wandering in by hundreds. They know the seasons as well or better than we do."

"Do you mean that they have been out all the summer and are coming in now of their own accord?"

"Just that. In all sorts of beautiful little parks islanded in that black timber; in groves shady and deep, where the horses have hardily and they have dreamed away their summer undisturbed and now they are coming home with their calves behind them, our income."

"It seems easy. Where does the work come in?"

Mrs. Rolt turned laughingly in her saddle to Jim.

"Isn't any work, is there, Jim?"

Jim, who was riding in his shirt-sleeves, with his coat in a roll at the back of his saddle, looked meditatively at his own bare corded arms.

"Might be some in the meadows in 'zkeeter time," he suggested.

"Rounding up the strays keeps a man in the saddle quite a while, and there's some don't hanker after too much branding and such like, but it's all in a lifetime. If it is work it is better than any play I ever heard tell of. Guess if I was the boss of the Risky, I wouldn't change places with anyone."

"That is pretty of you, Jim."

He looked at her smiling, no ways abashed.

"I guess the boss agrees with me, and he knows England as well as he knows B.C., and has sampled the best there is to be had pretty nigh all over."

"Yes, but he had his fill of England first, Jim, and he is older."

Her eyes followed the laughing couple which preceded them, as her thoughts followed Combe's, and the pain in his honest grey eyes was reflected in hers. She was sorry for her old friend, and knew that it was useless to explain. The old world had called its own, and both knew that Kitty had listened to its call.

Meanwhile the others had ridden ahead, and were now holding up their hands to keep the stragglers back. They left their horses, and stole quietly on to some tall trees which fringed a small lake, a blue turquoise set in the red gold of the reeds, and islanded amongst the grey green of the sage brush.

For the last fifty yards the boy and girl, they were little more, crept on their hands and knees, and when they raised their heads above the reeds there was a sudden splashing and scurry as a bunch of mallards sprang quacking from the water. In quick succession four reports followed one another, and out of the ducks tumbled back headlong into the lake. For a moment the rest of the birds looked as if they were going straight away, but some foolish prompting of curiosity brought them back, swinging in a circle high overhead.

"Stand still, Miss Clifford," they heard the Englishman say, "now let them have it," and again there were four flashes, but even to the onlookers it was almost impossible to distinguish more than two reports.

Again two birds came down, not all aslant on struggling wings, but with their heads under them, dead in mid air, killed instantly, as if by lightning.

"That's a fine performance, Miss Clifford. Very few girls at home could beat that," they heard Anstruther say. "You were too quick for me."

"What! didn't you shoot?"

"No," he lied gallantly. "See, my gun is loaded still, and he threw open the breech, showing the two cartridges which had slipped in with the rapidity of an old hand almost as he spoke."

"Then I killed those two myself."

"Unless they died for love of you."

"And who killed the others?"

"I suppose that you did."

"Oh, nonsense; I'm not going to believe that."

"Well, we'll take one each then if I can get them. Give me your hand, please, for a moment," and under the transparent pretext of wanting support whilst he balanced himself upon a partially submerged pine pole, Anstruther managed to retrieve his game.

Perhaps he held the little warm hand a trifle longer and pressed it a trifle harder than the circumstances warranted, but the girl's rosy face registered no serious protest.

"He's a very fluent liar," muttered Mrs. Rolt half to herself as they rode up.

"Bags his game very neatly," answered Jim.

"And she's a little fool," said the lady viciously, but Anstruther neither heard the criticism nor the praise any more than did Kitty.

In their veins the young blood was beating so that their ears were deafened to everything except the measure of one old song, which once truly learned becomes the music of a lifetime.

For them the scent of the sage brush, the hurry and roar of rising wings, and the blue of lonely upland lakes, would be as the keys of paradise as long as they both should live, bringing back dreams with which duck-shooting should have little enough to do.

Unfortunately that song is a duet, and gives pleasure to two only, so that though the pools seemed innumerable, and the glory of the day unstinted, an end came to Jim's loquacity. He was all eyes, but his tongue had failed him.

Suddenly as Jim and the boss's wife followed soberly behind the younger couple, they were now skirting the timber when the two in front had pulled up, and were waiting for Mrs. Rolt to join them. When they came alongside Anstruther asked:

"Did you hear that owl, Combe? Isn't it early in the day for him to be calling? There do you hear him? He must be quite close to us."

"That ain't no owl."

"What is it, then?"

"A Chilcoot telling his pals that there are white men coming. You'll see the smoke of their camp as soon as this lumber opens up again. I guess I'll ride on ahead," and so saying he put his horse into a gallop.

"Why is he in such a hurry?"

"I expect he wants to get a glimpse of their camp before they have had time to cache anything," replied Mrs. Rolt. "Jim is looking for things not mentioned in the game list."

But when the three reached the Indian camp they found Jim Combe sitting loosely in his saddle, the bridle thrown carelessly on his horse's neck, talking with the utmost good temper to a grey-haired old mummy, as if he were enjoying a gossip in his native tongue.

"Says that the tribe is hungry, that the wolves have grown numerous, and the deer all gone back away off," said he as the others came up, mimicking the old woman's manner. "Seems like it doesn't fit," and he pointed to a great square stack of fresh hides.

"There's another stack just back of that, under those trees. They must have killed forty or fifty deer. How many sons have you been hunting?" he asked, turning again to the squaw.

"Ten sons," showing the number on her bent claw.

"And how many men stop here?"

"My son, his fader, and two more."

"Who is your son? What you call him?"

"Kineeshaw," whined the old hag in a curious sing-song.

"Oh! Cultus Jack, eh?"

"Nawitka, white man's name Cultus Jack."

"Then his father is Kheleowna. You Kheleowna's wife, Emma?"

"Nawitka, me Emma."

"You don't mean to say that awful old woman is the chief's wife," whispered Mrs. Rolt.

"Yes. She's the princess. Nice princess, isn't she? Well, we're going to camp here, Emma."

Anstruther smiled at Kitty. Combe's seemed a somewhat informal manner of addressing a princess.

"Not much wood," grumbled the crone.

"Oh, the wood's all right. It's a warm night and we shan't want much."

"Water very bad, makes men sick."

"That is why you have camped by it. All right, old Loveliness. I'm on to your curve. Doesn't seem to hanker much after our society, does she, Mrs. Rolt?" he said laughingly, as he took the horses, and led them away.

Returning in a little while, his axe chopped out the roots at which Anstruther had been vainly tugging, cut down a dozen trees and stripped them whilst he whistled, so that the beds were heaped high with sweet-smelling hemlock; the fly was tightened and set firmly between its guy, and the fire made to leap and glow like a merry heart in the gloom.

It is not a bad thing for other people to have one man amongst them who knows how to help himself.

And now as the afternoon waned, an Indian appeared dragging the first deer into camp.

In the course of the next hour he and four others returned at one time, bringing with them seven deer in all, enough meat to last them with ordinary care for a month or six weeks.

"I wonder if it is too dark to take a photograph," asked Anstruther, who had grown tired of doing nothing.

"Just think what a ripping picture all those solemn-looking beggars would make, squatting by the fire, with the princess grubbing in the ashes."

"It's much too dark, and, besides, I don't think that they would like it," replied Mrs. Rolt.

"Like it. I can't hurt them. They ought to feel flattered that any one cares to preserve their awful faces," and so saying, he strolled nonchalantly over to the neighboring camp.

"I wish he would not do it," muttered Mrs. Rolt, undecidedly.

"Oh, what nonsense, Mary," replied the girl, "you really are too absurd about those Indians. I've photographed ed them before and they did not mind a bit, but he will come back if you call him."

Unfortunately, Mrs. Rolt wavered and neglected her opportunity.

With perfect assurance Anstruther strolled up to the four sullen figures who glowered at him as he came, but did not move a muscle.

"Nice evening," he said. "Isn't it. I don't happen to speak your lingo but hope I see you well. Ever had your pictures taken?"

Still the four remained motionless.

"Not in a conversational mood, eh? Well, perhaps that is better. Mustn't talk whilst the operation is being performed. Put your head a little on one side, sir. No savvy, eh? Well, think of 'er, old chappie," and he pointed to Emma with a grin, and kneeling down adjusted his camera, aiming it right into the faces of the silent group.

"As he did so Emma disappeared into the tent."

"Whoop! Gons to ground," he shouted with a laugh, and the four, rising with a growl, turned their backs upon him.

For a moment he was nonplussed, but the devil of island insolence had possession of him, and he knew that Kitty was watching him. Still on his knees he reached for a long stick from the fire, and bending forward, tossed it so the hot end of it fell upon the nearest Indian's bare foot.

Quick as thought the Chilcoot turned, and for a moment the women drew their breath and feared for what was to come, but the camera clicked and the fire still divided the aggressor from his victim.

"Got you, my beauty," said the unconscious artist, "with quite your most engaging smile on," and utterly careless of the dumb wrath in the man's eyes, he put his camera into its case, and walked back, laughing, to his friends.

Mrs. Rolt and Jim, who had returned too late to interfere, did not join in his laugh, but the sullen faces of the outraged four, and the sight of Emma, the beautiful, peeping out to see if all was safe again, were too much for Kitty, who laughed till the tears ran down her cheeks.

"Oh, surely, Mrs. Rolt," protested Anstruther, between his peals of laughter, "there is nothing to look so serious about. One would think that you had been photographed. I didn't hurt the sulky brutes, and if they didn't like being photographed, what matter. You aren't afraid of Indians in this country, are you?"

"No, but we don't want enemies. At any rate, for goodness' sake, stop laughing. You can see how they hate it."

It is a curious trait of the Indians, at any rate of the Far West, that they themselves seldom or never laugh, whilst the merest hint that you are laughing even in the mildest way at them, puts their backs up immediately.

Like the vast plains and dumb forests through which they roam, they are by nature sombre, and a laugh is as much of an outrage to them as a shrill's song would be to the forest silence.

THE COSY CORNER

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

SATIN TOILETTE

Late bulletins from across the water predict fuller skirts for fall wear, but all of the midsummer models still retain the narrow lines, many of them slashed at the side or side-front, giving opportunity for a display of chic footwear. The model today shows this idea carried out in dark blue satin, with trimming bands of Arabian lace. The short coat has a rever collar of lace, and a gold cord confines the fullness.

Princess Style

The princess style of lingerie gown, or rather the one piece, as it is called when skirt and waist are joined, is the smartest this season and in the finest of these gowns the joining is so perfectly finished that it is difficult to discover it.

Always Fashionable

In midsummer, the lingerie gown is always fashionable, and this season the demand for fine lace and embroidery is greater than ever before. Embroidered linens, batistes and even embroidered leees are combined, and so cleverly that the result is charming beyond description.

Dress Wraps

Royal blue, cerise, empire green, are used to trim the lightweight wraps. Satin is unfined in many new models, and light weight clothes are shown in white and colors, trimmed with buttons and braid. Of course they are not warm, but they protect the evening dresses from the dampness and from the dust that would ruin them. Their very beauty is an excuse for being.

The Kitchen Floor

A bare floor kitchen is liked by some because it can be scrubbed hard with soap and water. If a teaspoonful of kerosene is added to the pail of water the scrubbing will be more quickly done. Where the water is hard it should be softened with borax or ammonia.

Hammer Hint

When wishing to drive a nail through hardwood, first push it through a cake of hard soap; it will then go through easily and will not split the wood. When using a hammer, grasp the handle near the end, and not in the centre, as is the way of most women.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Dampness will soon tarnish brass articles, but if they are kept in a dry and cool place they will remain untarnished for a long time.

A flannel dipped in spirits of turpentine will be found very useful in cleaning the porcelain tub or sink. Kerosene will answer almost as well.

Wet shoes should be stuffed with paper before they are put away. The paper will absorb the moisture and keep the shoes from becoming hard.

When packing, tie in bottle corks well, and put the bottles in the middle of the trunk. If packed solidly in this way they will carry around the world.

Brass polished only with rottenstone and oil will have a deep, rich yellow tone, while the acid polishes leave it whiter and more brilliant.

Cold water with but little soap should be used for washing colored silks. If the color runs, vinegar should be stirred into the water until the color sets.

When coal is needed on the fire it the sick room, it should be brought into the room in paper bags, which should be laid gently on the fire to prevent noise.

A teaspoonful of glycerine added to a gill of glue makes a cement that is a great convenience in the kitchen, and is especially good for fastening leather, paper or wood to metal.

A dry rubber "sponge" is excellent for cleaning wooden materials. They should be laid flat and the sponge swept over them briskly, care being taken to rub the wrong side of the nap.

Dampers should be placed in all pipes leading from heaters and kept closed in summer, as air from the furnace should not be allowed to flow into the house when the fire is out.

NEWS FROM PORCHER ISLAND

A meeting was held in the Goose Bay schoolhouse, September 2nd, for the purpose of forming a Porcher Island Liberal Association and one of the chief points of the coming election was gone into, that of reciprocity and how it will affect the Porcher Island truck farmer.

It was resolved that reciprocity will do a lot of good to the Porcher Island settlers as they buy more than they sell at present and have the advantage over all other garden produce shipped to Prince Rupert while other greenstuffs are on the way two days. Porcher Islanders can pick their produce and have it on the market in three hours.

One disappointment was recorded. That in the last mail Porcher Island gardeners were informed that in future no more produce was to be bought at the islands by the G. T. P. boats. Chief stewards must deal only at Prince Rupert, Victoria or Vancouver.

As the settlers can pick their stuff and be around to load it on the boat while the crew are unloading the mail in about one hour, and as Porcher Island is the only place in British Columbia where there is absolute Asiatic exclusion it surely stands to reason that where garden truck is grown by white men and voters they ought to be given some encouragement. It is not that the ranchers want more for their produce, but just to get the same as Vancouver or Victoria prices will be satisfactory to them.

By the look of things quite a large acreage will be put into garden truck next year. Mr. George Farrant has five acres fenced.

Sam Holland is building a 18 x 20 log house. Neighbors would be surprised to hear that Sam will join the benedicts soon as he was saying he was tired talking to the dog or cat. Archie Brevan is busy burning and clearing and expects to put about an acre into garden.

Miss Pearson, the new school teacher, arrived by last mail boat and has taken up her duties. One advantage the children have is that they have the best playground in Northern B. C., just Porcher Island in fact.

There is an opening for a missionary of some kind. Settlers have had calls from the mission boat about a year ago which used to call once a month and hold meetings but for some reason this has been discontinued. Missionaries are sent to China, Japan, India, etc., why not send one to Porcher Island as there are quite a lot of children here and people who cannot attend church in Prince Rupert.

Reciprocity is the one and only issue in this election campaign. And reciprocity is a straight business issue and must be discussed as such.

RENEWING THE OLD ST. JOHN

Plans Prepared for Modern Adaptation of One of Prince Rupert's Pioneer Hotel Buildings to Cater for New Class of Trade.

One of the opineer hostilities of Prince Rupert, the St. John Hotel is to undergo transformation shortly. Plans have been prepared to turn the hotel into a thoroughly up-to-date building to cater for the best class of business. The proprietor, Mr. J. S. Bonneau, will expend a considerable amount of money on the work, and when complete the St. John Hotel, though one of the first buildings of its kind to go up in Prince Rupert off the reserve, will rank with the newest hotel buildings, not however on such a large scale as those in the central business section.

The building consists of two storeys and basement, and is a substantial one capable of considerable adaptation to the new class of business. A handsome new decorated front is planned for, and the building throughout will be painted freshly, decorated, and plastered. Besides this there will be an entire re-equipment of the hotel fittings, and an installation of modern plumbing, hot and cold water and all modern conveniences. W. S. Barker is architect for the alterations.

Situated as it is on First avenue near Second street the hotel is likely to meet with the ready patronage as the boat wharf and railway depot are within a stone's throw of the building. First avenue is being rapidly graded, and this part of the town, owing to the forthcoming G. T. P. improvements on the reserve will be much enhanced by next summer.

MOUNT ETNA'S THREATS

Peasants Fear a Repetition of Massena Disaster

(Canadian Press Despatch)
Catania, Sept. 13.—The crest of Mount Etna presents a terrifying spectacle. Heavy smoke lies over it, and frequent brilliant flashes of flame are accompanied by a rumbling like heavy artillery fire. Peasants are fleeing, fearing a repetition of the Massena disaster. A stream of lava 2000 feet wide and four feet deep is pouring down the slope.

Cabinet Meeting Considers Proposals of Germany

(Canadian Press Despatch)
Paris, Sept. 13.—A momentous meeting of the Cabinet was held this afternoon, to consider France's reply to Germany's counter proposals on the Moroccan negotiations. It lasted three hours. Nothing has been made public that transpired. It is said however that the nation will not recede.

DUFF PATTULLO SCORES McBRIDE

"Sir Wilfrid, I believe, once said that when history came to be written he hoped that his name would always live in connection with the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. I believe that there is another regard in which Laurier will live longer in the history of his country; I refer to the spirit of tolerance to which I have already adverted.

"Whatever may have been the great gulf dividing the two political parties at Ottawa, however bitter and acrimonious might be discussions, whatever the racial and religious cries formulated and promulgated for purposes of political advantage, over and above all there has always risen the outstanding figure of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, urgent and serene in its plea for a greater national unity and a greater national development.

"Here's to you, Sir Wilfrid Laurier; of blood, French; of loyalty, British; of ideal, Canadian; you're the greatest Canadian of us all. May God prosper you and long preserve you to further the service of your country."

NAVIGATION OF SHIP OF STATE

Cy Peck's Felicitous Comparison of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the Skilful Navigator of the Dangerous Rapids of the Skeena.

C. W. Peck has returned from a speaking tour with Duncan Ross up the Skeena, and a quotation from one of the clever speeches he made during the trip seems worthy of reproduction. He was speaking to the voters of Hazelton, and in the course of the address said:

"I believe a trip up the Skeena river is one of the most thrilling and interesting that may be enjoyed in the whole run of world travel. It never fails to impress me—this death struggle, as it were, with the swift running current.

"I was extremely interested yesterday when our steamer encountered the Devil's Elbow. It seemed to me about the limit of perilous navigation. One false move, should any of the gear break, and the steamer is at once dashed to what may be utter destruction.

"But one sees no excitement or worry upon the faces of the passengers. Everyone seems calm and easy in his mind. Why so? Because they know that up in the wheel house, though they may not see him, stands good Captain Shannon, with his hand on the steering lever like a man of iron.

"Everyone knows that he is the master of the situation; they have confidence in his seamanship; they know that he will bring the ship safely through these terrible waters.

"Ladies and Gentlemen,—Our Canadian ship of state has come to the very Devil's Elbow in her passage up the waters of history. She is at a point where she may be in danger of being swept back by a tide of racial prejudice, narrow sectionalism, fake loyalty agitation, class rule and the influence of privileged interests.

"But though our good ship shudders and strains in this whirlpool of infamous political tactics, we fear no danger. We have every confidence. We trust that our old, grey-headed, French Canadian captain, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose hand is on the steering lever, will land us safely.

"We have learned to know that hand; we know that it is firm and strong. We know that he will
