With Five Hundred of Her Crew on Board, Magnificent War Vessel Suffers the Fate Passing through the Grand Can- rigan went on to Sealey spending of the Maine-France is Horror Stricken at the News-At First a German Plot Suspected, but Suspicions are Without Ground-Great Loss to France

Canadian Press Despatch)

Toulon, September 25.—All France is in mourning today for the loss of the French cruiser Liberte, and her crew of five hundred men, who were done to death when the war vessel blew up at her moorings in the harbor of Toulon at half past three this morning

Owing to the condition of European politics, on receipt of the horrifying news, it was at first thought that the act was perpetrated by the Germans, and presaged a state of war. This wild rumor was speedily laid, however. There is no doubt that the vessel perished as the result of a fire which started near her magazine.

The Liberte was one of the finest of the French war vessels, and had only been in commission three years. She was built in 1907 at a cost of seven million dollars. She had ten twelve inch guns, as well as a battery of seven inch guns. Her displacement was 14,900 tons. She was of a type by herself, and her loss at the present time is a serious one to the French Republic.

The Liberte carried a crew of 793 men, but happily for many of them they were enjoying shore leave at the time of the disaster. As it is, nothing now remains of this fine vessel but a mass of tangled steel at the bottom of the harbor.

As soon as the fire was discovered, sailors from other vessels in the fleet were despatched to help fight the flames. Many of these have perished with their comrades on the Liberte.

The fire came with such suddenness that scores of the sailors on the Liberte are said to have perished in their berths. Others who tried to jump overboard were blown into atoms. The bursting shells filled with poisonous fumes filled the alley ways blinding and suffocating the crew in their efforts to seek escape, and turning the vessel into a veritable inferno.

MR. BORDEN'S TASK

Today Hon. Mr. Borden, the potential Premier of Canada, is in Ottawa for the purpose of selecting men to aid him in his great task wanted him to do, so he swung himself than that of this saloon no man of carrying on the government of Canada. A great task it undoubtedly will be. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's was a great task to hold the two races of Canada together, and arouse a temporarily united people to enthu; fore he saw them, and was uncertain apparent apology for any man's com- that had no apparent effect upon the siasm for the Imperial ideal. Mr Borden's will be greater.

Let it be admitted frankly, so that if he succeeds his credit may be the greater, that Hon. Mr. Borden has a more difficult task than had Sir Wilfrid. He inherits a condition of prosperity, which to a political leader on trial is a handieap. The two races of Canada have come to the parting of the ways helped thither by Mr. Borden's own party. He can hardly acknowledge the support of his Nationalist allies in Quebec without offending his Orange supporters in Ontario or vice versa. To either alter or accept Canada's present naval policy portends trouble. Above all is he handicapped at this period of prosperity by his pledges to tax imports still more highly, while his known personal leanings toward reciprocity can hardly hope to find expression or acceptance after his leadership of the anti-reciprocity campaign.

Mr. Borden has before him a course beset with difficulties, which should procure for him the sympathy of men of all parties during the time that it remains the will of the Canadian people that he should be their leader. Towards this end, Mr. Borden's unsullied reputation and exemplary personal character will go a long way to win the confidence and sympathy, if not the support, of all parties. It must be a matter for congratulations among all Liberals to know that as cliffs too weirdly colored with mineral the country had to have a Conservative government, that its leader is a gentleman deserving of the honor, and in his personal life fully struck it, the river was certainly not worthy to be its first citizen.

Who will be the men he will select to be associated with him on had already felt the first touch of the Executive Council? That is the impatient enquiry in every mind. That is the first of the great tasks to confront Mr. Borden. Like the other tasks previously enumerated it will be fraught with risks. For many of the "eligibles," the question in the premier's mind may well of it. be, "Will they be more dangerous in or out?"

Hon. George E. Foster, for instance despite his personal unpopularity, is still the ablest financial head in the Conservative ranks. Once his colleagues laid a pit for him to fall into in the hope of getting rid of him. Mr. Foster fell into the pit all right, but he got out of it and seems to have lived down the past. Mr. Foster is clearly Cabinet timber. The portfolio of Finance which he held for a brief time under Sir Mackenzie Bowell seems likely to pass into his custody again.

Henri Bourassa too, is entitled to Cabinet rank. The leader twenty-one Nationalist votes in the House, and the party's greates orator cannot be left out in the cold without risk of forfeiting hissupport.

Clifford Sifton is another who must be reckoned with. He has great genius for organisation. He was a tower of strength in the late campaign. Every place he spoke at returned majorities. He is amb tious too. Many of his oldest friends are convinced that personal ambition lay at the root of his recent change of political faith. Wil he be safer inside or outside the Cabinet fold?

And among the other doubtfuls must be reckoned our own provincial Premier. The usually well informed Ottawa Journal suggests | Creek 'stead of Sody." that he will be offered the portfolio for the Interior. Mr. McBride was supposed to be playing for higher stakes. His refusal to enter the Creek, but of course there was whiscampaign has certainly cost him his charges for the Federal Premiership, and it seems doubtful whether Mr. Borden after fifteen trying doctor? and difficult years of opposition leadership, would now in the moment of success, take chances on admitting to the Cabinet one who might to-day neither. He's away up to Snow

Then there is the other question, as to whether Mr. McBride in spite of his desire to enter the larger field of Federal politics, would not prefer to be a Provincial Premier than a Federal Minister.

at any time become a rival for the party leadership.

Mr. Borden's task at Ottawa this evening in selecting his ministers tion committee to old man Hayes' will not be an easy, one.

BE FAIR, GENTLEMEN!

In the good-humored fun making of the Conservative parade on Saturday night, there was one little bit of unkindness that would have been better left out. It was the banner inscribed:

"Hush, little Manson, don't you cry

You'll be happy by and by." Although he failed to deliver the Skeena district, and failed badly, rying his liquor." Mr. Manson did his best for his Conservative friends. He even deserted his Mayoral duties, and tied up the work of the License Board while he was out campaigning. It seems rather mean for his friends to rub his defeat in so.

Outside of that, the fun in the parade was real good, and in the best of spirits.

CHAPTER XII.

A Backwoods Funeral

On a steep bluff, through the heavy brush of which a narrow trail been roughly cut, Jim found a party of about a dozen men, half of whom wore black coats. They were almost the only black coats in Caribou, and had been collected with infininte trouble to give tone to the proceedings. There was also one top hat . That belonged to the doctor, and was worn by him. The bottle, too large for a medicine bottle, which protruded from his column of Saturday's instalment coat pocket, belonged to the party.
