How Ottawa Avoids Seasonal Floods

Ottawa and district have hurried their annual precautions against spring flooding. Prospects of a sudden breakup loomed high last week-end, so blasting operations on the Rideau river channel were rushed. When the ice starts moving, and the water rises, the work is very hazardous. If the water rises rapidly the men are called upon to work at nights and as a precaution wear safety belts to which ropes are attached. Barriers are strung across the river at the head of the falls so that any person carried down stream on ice cakes may have an opportunity to save himself. Boats are also kept on hand for emergencies. As usual, during the blasting operations, many are on the ice with nets to catch any fish stunned by the explosion.

Still Pressing For Redefinition of Jurisdiction and Revenue and Taxation Authority—Insists On Use of National Credit

VICTORIA, March 30: (CP)—Some of the newspapers are going altogether too far, Premier T. D. ### The Letter Box

ARBITRATION BASIS

You suggest arbitration of the dispute between the fishermen and the boat owners over the distribution of the proceeds of the halibut livers. As the fishermen worked up this business when it was worth almost nothing, why not give them the benefit of this year's profits with the understanding that the owners take their fifth share commencing next year? Why not make this a basis for arbitration?

FISHERMEN'S VIEWS

Editor, Daily News:-On account of the unwarranted rumors going around town that the halibut fleet are tied up because the fishermen have refused to accede to the vessel awners demand for a 20% boat share of the livers, and for some unknown reason this also having been published in the local newspapers, owing to this misunderstanding we would like to have a little space in your valuable paper and beg to submit the following for the consideration of the Prince Rupert citizens:

Owing to the low price on halibut for the last few years the American and Canadian fishermen and vessel owners alike entered into a mutual agreement to stay in port for the purpose of trying to negotiate minimum price for fish with the dealers, and these negotiations are still in progress in Seattle, and well 10 are waiting the outcome from these negotiations. #### More Quintuplet Kids

Minnie was just another goat, moving around in the confines of her cramped shed in her own quiet way. Of course, she was expecting a blessed event, but that was not unusual, as her life was bound to be wrapped up in the production of "kids." Then, within half-an-hour, she broke into the news. She had one, then another, and another. They totalled five, sufficient to place her on the goat pedestal for the rapid production of a family.

Shown above is Minnie's family as they appeared shortly after the event took place. Frankie Ross, jr., four-year-old proud owner of Minnie, officiated at the ceremony and with each succeeding birth, his eyes popped with delight.

"Yesterday I had one goat," Frankie explained. "Today I have a whole bunch." And everyone is doing nicely, thank you, despite the lack of a separate hospital. Quarters are even more cramped with Minnie now.
