'SHOULD HAVE KEPT ESQUIMALT' SAYS BERESFORD

ITALY'S FLEET IS READY TO FIGHT AT TRIPOLI

Announcement of War is Expected Before Nightfall---Italian Squadron in War Formation is in Tripoli Harbor and Troops and Stores Are Being Embarked at Italian Ports--- Turkish Troops Fear Immediate Attack

(Canadian Press Despatch)
 Tripoli, Sept. 28.—Europe is now on the brink of war. Within a few hours from now it is believed that Italy and Turkey will have opened hostilities. Italy is prepared and is awaiting the word.

Ready for War
 The first Italian squadron is now in the harbor of Tripoli with steam up. The squadron is composed of four Dreadnoughts, three cruisers and a flotilla of torpedo boats. They are anchored in line, with decks cleared and burkers and magazines filled. The order to open hostilities is expected before night.

Will Convey Troops
 At Larento, the second Italian squadron is waiting for orders. It will probably receive instructions to convey troop and supply ships to Tripoli. No troops have yet been planted here, but the Italian land forces are ready for embarkation and the reserves have been called out to take the field.

Attack is Feared
 The Turkish troops here fear an attack at any moment, as a despatch from Milan has been received stating that all the railroads leading to ports are crowded with military trains loaded with war supplies. The troops are already at the ports waiting to embark.

Tripoli from which the above despatch comes from is the capital of the country of that name. It is a city of 70,000 inhabitants. The dominion of Tripoli covers an extent of 350,000 square miles, with a coast line extending on the Mediterranean from Morocco to Egypt, and a total population of 700,000.

Tripoli ranks as a viceroy of the Ottoman Empire, but with her coast line adjacent to Italy, the latter country feels a necessity to take a hand in sharing the administration of Tripoli.

The question has been under diplomatic negotiations for a long time. Italy's final offer was to set up an administration for Tripoli jointly with Turkey. This offer was refused by Turkey at the behest of the Young Turks party.

IN HIS FIRST SPEECH BORDEN PRAISES LAURIER

The New Premier Pays Graceful and Generous Compliment to the Old Premier in a Speech Before the Canadian Club of Ottawa---Earl Grey Will Have to Prolong his Departure a Week in Order to Swear in the New Ministers

(Canadian Press Despatch)
 Ottawa, Sept. 28.—Hon. R. L. Borden last night made his first public speech since being elected to the leadership of the Government of Canada. Very fittingly it was a splendid eulogy of the work of Sir Wilfrid Laurier during the years he had served the country.

Mr. Borden dwelt with emphasis on the splendid vigor and fine spirit shown by Sir Wilfrid in the campaign just ended. The cordial personal tribute from the lips of his successor, were apparently esteemed by Sir Wilfrid who was present.

An Historic Dinner
 The occasion for the fitting exchange of compliments took place at the banquet tendered by the Canadian Club of Ottawa to His Excellency Earl Grey who is due to leave Canada for England on October 6th. Both Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden spoke to the toast of Canada, Sir Wilfrid paying a high tribute to the excellent qualities displayed by the departing Governor-General during his term of office.

Will Postpone Departure
 Earlier in the day, Sir Wilfrid Laurier paid an official visit to Earl Grey to ask him to postpone his departure from Ottawa until October 12th. He explained that it had been found impossible to complete the work of closing the books of the various departments in time to enable the Cabinet to resign their portfolios before His Excellency's departure.

Must Appoint Ministers
 As the new Ministers cannot be appointed until the old ones resign, and as the new Ministers must be sworn in by the Governor-General it will be necessary for the Governor-General to stay.

A Cabinet Council was held during the afternoon. The work of closing up the late Government's work is being rushed in the Government offices.

BAYLEY VERSUS NELSON STILL A FUTURE EVENT

Nelson Failed to Make Exact Weight Last Night and Bout Fell Through—Tommy Maher Made a Game Substitute For a Few Rounds

Because of an unforeseen hitch in the arrangements at the last moment the great boxing contest last night between Joe Bayley of Victoria, and Oscar Nelson of Vancouver, was not pulled off. Joe Bayley showed up and displayed magnificent possibilities in four rounds with Tommy Maher of Kitsumkulm, who offered to try and face him for ten rounds, but the bout ended disastrously for Tommy who went to sleep comfortably under a slight peacemaker, the first blow in the fourth round delivered by Joe with the right. Tommy was rather out of condition or he would certainly have lasted longer.

Tommy Maher's offer to face Bayley was a popular effort to make up to the crowd for the no-appearance of Nelson who it seems had scaled two pounds over-weight at six p.m. after Bayley had waited an hour for him to appear at the scales. There is a $100 forfeit clause applicable to this situation under the recognized rules. Bayley was prepared to take $50 and go on with the contest. The sum was not at once forthcoming, and when it had been arranged for Nelson to appear he had apparently decided not to proceed. Disappointment was expressed but the crowd agreed by acclamation to witness instead the ten-round bout offered between Joe Bayley and Tommy Maher.

Bayley took the ring first, and stripping revealed all the evidences of superb condition. Maher looked a formidable antagonist of an older school. At the rap of the gong the men faced each other and in spite of Joe's pretty style Tommy managed to rush his opponent twice to the ropes, and delivered a tap which laid Joe lightly on the ground.

In the second round Tommy tried a backslap without serious effect once or twice, and in some lively scrapping both men backed alternately to the ropes more than once. Then Joe got in an upper Admiral Lord Charles Beresford Says Esquimalt Should Have Been Retained.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
 Victoria, Sept. 28.—Speaking before the Canadian Club of Victoria today, Lord Charles Beresford condemned the policy of the British naval administration in abandoning Esquimalt as a naval base.

He also criticised the Declaration of London and said that the opening of the Panama Canal would evolve some of the greatest problems that could be conceived which the English speaking nations would find a difficulty in solving.

PRINCE ARTHUR ENGAGED

Will Marry Princess Irene, Daughter of Grand Duchess Xenia-Alexandrevna, and the Niece of Czar Nicholas.

London, Sept. 28.—An interesting report current is that Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of the Duke of Connaught, the newly commissioned governor general of Canada, is engaged to marry Princess Irene, daughter of the Grand Duchess Xenia-Alexandrevna, who is a sister of Emperor Nicholas of Russia. It is stated that the formal announcement of the betrothal will be made before the Connaughts sail for Canada.

LOST THREE OF HER CREW

Disaster Dogged the Wake of the Fishing Schooner Vega on Voyage from Bering Sea.

Seattle, Sept. 28.—Completing one of the slowest voyages recorded in many years between the Bering Sea codfishing banks and Puget Sound, the cod-fishing schooner Vega has reached West Seattle.

On the Vega's northbound voyage from Seattle in the spring, Gus Sundersen, a young sailor, became insane and drove his shipmates into the rigging. He was finally overpowered, put in irons and taken ashore at Unga.

About a month later T. Dougherty, another member of the crew, while sitting on a hatch cover rolling a cigarette, was stricken with heart failure and fell overboard. Soon after the Vega entered Bering Sea Hans Larsen, a young fisherman, was washed overboard in a storm. His body was not recovered.

The schooner was delayed by calm and strong headwinds. Twenty-one days were required to sail from Unimak Pass to Cape Flattery. The Vega brought a catch of 165,000 codfish.

SACRIFICED A THUMB

Brakeman Grinds Off Digit in Switch to Avert Train Wreck.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
 San Bernardino, Cal., Sept. 26.—M. H. Graham, a Santa Fe railroad brakeman, cut off his thumb today to save a train from an open switch. Graham saw that the switch had been thrown the wrong way for his train and when the locomotive reached a point within a short distance of the frog he grasped the lever and threw his weight upon it. One of his thumbs was caught in the mechanism, but Graham still bore down. He turned the switch, but left the thumb crushed beneath the lever.

"NO BOTTLE LICENSE FOR SUTHERLAND," SAYS BOARD

After Twelve Months Effort to Comply With Legal Requirements This Applicant is Turned Down Again on a Technicality and Withdraws in Disgust

At the adjourned meeting of the Licence Commissioners held yesterday the application of Geo. Sutherland for a bottle licence came up again and after some consideration was turned down on the ground that all the signatures necessary for the petition had not been secured, and that some of those which had been secured had not been signed to the actual petition as filed, but had been signed to separate slips containing the terms of the petition, and forwarded to absentee owners by the applicant. After hearing the arguments arrayed by the city solicitor against his application Mr. Sutherland announced that he would absolutely withdraw this application. He had tried for a year to obtain a bottle licence but had been continually turned down. He was tired of trying to bring his application into shape to satisfy the many technical matters brought up by the city solicitor and commissioners.

Absentee Lot Owners

Owing to the number of absentee lot-owners concerned, it had been impossible for him to send the petition filed all over the States and to the Old Country for signatures, but in some cases he had sent a type written copy of the petition on a separate slip to distant lot owners. They had signed the slip, and Mr. Sutherland had simply written their names in the blanks on the document filed. To all intents and purposes, as Mr. Fisher endeavored to impress on the Board, these signatures were as valid as if they had been written on the document, but the city solicitor saw otherwise.

Married or Single?

Another point brought up by the city solicitor against the application of Mr. Sutherland was that the designation of some men as married had been omitted. Mr. Sutherland explained that it was news to him that the men mentioned were married. He had not known this when he sought their signatures. The Board, however, assured him of the fact which they agreed was well known about the city.

A little attention was also paid to technicalities regarding the agreement of advertisement with documents filed, but this point was not dwelt on. Mr. Fisher showed to the satisfaction of the city solicitor that it was general court usage to hold such applications in order provided the terms of the public notice were right which was so in this case.

Adjourned for 40 Minutes
 In order to give Mr. Fisher and the city solicitor an opportunity to consider together the objections raised by Mr. Peters regarding the signatures which he maintained were not numerous enough to cover the ground required by law in this case, an adjournment of about forty minutes was called. At the end of that time Mr. Fisher on behalf of Mr. Sutherland admitted that although every effort had been made to comply with the spirit of the law on the subject two or three necessary names had been omitted, and withdrew the application.

Mayor's Regrets
 The Mayor as Chairman of the Licensing Board expressed regret that the technicalities had not been exact. "You can see how we are placed," he said to Mr. Sutherland. "Unless everything is in perfectly legal accord with the Statute we can do nothing. The Board is helpless in the matter."

This ended the sitting, and an adjournment was called until the next regular meeting of the Board on the second Wednesday in December.

FOLEY, WELCH STAFF TO STAY ALL WINTER

There is quite a serious possibility that the office staff and executive outfit of Messrs. Foley, Welch & Stewart, the contractors for the last link of the Grand Trunk Pacific, may remain the Winter in Prince Rupert instead of proceeding up river to New Hazelton as has been planned for the working of the last stretch of the great contract.

The reason for the possible delay in the transfer of the executive staff up river is the phenomenal lowness of the water in the Skeena at present. With the water yesterday afternoon at 2 ft. 10 below zero and at a standstill there seemed small prospect of any heavy freight getting up river. Today telegrams from Hazelton North and South gave reports of a little rain falling, and the river rising slowly. It was raining at North Hazelton, and cloudy at the southern point. Both Mr. Verror Smith and Mr. D. McLeod have remarked that the chances look rather against the transfer of the headquarters this fall.

There would be altogether some twenty-five or thirty members of the staff to transport up river with all their belongings, and the whole office equipment. The migration would employ two steamers and they would be so heavily freighted that unless there is plenty of water it would be risky to attempt the trip. Railway transportation beyond the canyon is delayed until the Kitselas Tunnel is through. Today General Superintendent Mehan reported very good progress with this tunnel, which some sanguine observers have predicted will be through before the snowfall this year.

THE LOVE OF THE FIGHT

Last night two half naked men stood inside a roped ring in a local athletic club for several rounds and pounded each other in the many damaging ways that skilled boxers know. In their own way they enjoyed it. It was the love of the fight.

Around the ring some hundreds of Prince Rupert men gathered, and applauded first one man then the other as each scored a point or landed a blow on his opponent. They paid two and three dollars apiece for the privilege of witnessing the match. It was the love of the fight.

The preachers may talk till doomsday about "degrading spectacles" and "brutal exhibitions." They cannot eradicate the love of the fight that lies very close to the surface of our common humanity.

One of our most gleeful memories centres around a ministerial friend who interposed to stop a street fight, but getting hurt in the peaceful mission, suddenly forgot his sacred calling and turned in to clean up the crowd. A story about a very popular priest now in Prince Rupert—it may not be true, but it sounds like the truth—tells of a rough house at an election meeting in the old Kootenay days. As the excitement grew he leaned over to a friend and whispered, "As a priest I can't very well hit anybody, but I wish someone would hit me."

It has been pointed out by high-browed teachers of psychology again and again, that the phraseology of politics, of business, nay of evangelical religion itself is the language of the battlefield or the prize ring. All life is a fight.

"I've had no education. I've been a cow puncher since I was nine years old, but I've seen a lot of life, and I measure a man by the amount of punishment he can take without giving in. A man can't win at any game that can't fight," was the way another man sized up his philosophy of life a few nights ago, as he exchanged confidences during a long night ride in the teeth of a storm.

Sometimes women realize that the masculine love of a fight has a meaning in the race-development. Helen Macdonald, a clever British lady writer, some time ago told in M. A. P. of flouting the conventions and attending a boxing match in London. Her description is very novel:

"The fight began. They punched each other in the ribs, little punches, and the referee danced after them all the time to see that they punched fair. Just when I was getting interested, they suddenly stopped and retired to opposite corners and sat down on chairs.

"Presently blood came, and as I sat watching it, harassed between feeling very well and feeling that I ought not to do so, I began to understand how little I was realizing that these men were actually suffering physical pain. Nevertheless, it did not worry me a bit. The only thing I found annoying and unpleasant during the match was an ugly trick one man had of jumping in with his mouth open. He looked as though he might bite.

"The man with the open mouth won. It was splendid to see the gameness of the loser. He went right through with it to the bitter end. His courage I could appreciate, even if my ignorance of boxing caused me to miss all the science of the blows.

"In the 'high-end-far-off times,' before we all became so civilized, courage and brute strength in her man made just the difference between life and death to a woman.

"They still count. Primitive instincts are hard to kill. I glanced at the poor physique of some of the sightseers as we left the place when the fight was over, and I thought of the men I had just seen in the ring. I think I understand why the most of them would rather their women didn't attend prize fights."

The men who gathered last night to witness and to take part in the contest of blows were obeying an impulse that antedates history, and that is still a dominant factor in the real work of life. To learn to give blows—above all to learn to take them; to hit straight and learn to take without bitterness or fear the blows that come is to learn the strong man's philosophy of life.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

By Clive Phillips Wolley

(AUTHOR OF GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO, ETC.)

CHAPTER XV.

"Well, I'm blanked! Protheroe! You infernal drunken fool, come back. Come back, I say. You'll drown, sure."

But Protheroe took no notice of Jim's frantic cry. In that hour of waters which were already about his waist, and seemed to be climbing to his ears, he could hear nothing from the shore which he had left, and if he had done so, he had sense enough to know that it would have been more dangerous to try to turn back than to go on.

Jim saw that himself, as the words left his lips, but it is the fashion of human beings in dire straits to cry for the impossible. And Jim was in a worse strait than the doctor. In the swirl at his feet there were two small objects, somewhat darker than the heaving darkness around them. They might well have been pieces of drift wood, being hustled down stream, but to Jim they would be in that dreary future in front of him, the horse he stole and the man he murdered.

And the unsteady lights of the Soda Creek lanterns were dancing along the river's course coming down stream towards him, nearer and nearer, until he could hear the voices of those who carried them in spite of the noise of the waters.

With a curse he swung himself into the saddle, and wrenching the roan's head round viciously, he galloped up stream for fifty yards, over a chaos of slippery boulders.

Then he turned his horse's head towards the river, and drove his spurs home, but though the colt's spirit was broken by bitter hard work, his instinct recoiled from this new peril, and he rose fighting and pawing the air on the very edge of the flood.

It was in vain. The man's blood was up and the ice-coated boulders gave the beast no footing. With a crash the two went into the river, the horse on its side, whilst the man, thrown clear of the saddle, disappeared some feet down stream of him.

Twice the beast was turned over in the flood, and for a few moments the water swept over the man, but before either had been drifted to the level of Protheroe, Jim had regained his horse's head, and twisting the fingers of one hand in the beast's long mane, swam steadily on the down stream side of it.

The colt had his head above water, the man swam superbly, driving against the current with all the energy of young life battling against death, so that before they had half crossed from shore to shore, Combe and his horse were level with Protheroe, and making some sort of a breakthrough for him.

But it was not enough. The doctor was still in the saddle, and Combe could see the pinto's head sinking lower and lower. If the doctor stayed where he was, the horse embarrassed by his weight, must drown, and in spite of his efforts Combe could not make his voice heard in that swirl of waters.

On the bank, the noise was as the indistinct roar of a mob, but in mid-stream each voice became distinct, individual and hostile.

He heard the waves roaring at him, he could feel the undercurrents pulling separately at him, he knew what they wanted, and the fury, and the number of them daunted him.

His only chance was to cling to his horse; his only hope of saving Protheroe seemed to be to let go, and if possible, drag the doctor out of his saddle.

But at the last moment Protheroe seemed to realize what was required of him, and slid out of the saddle, holding on to his horse's mane, and swimming as Jim swam.

By this time both horses had drifted below the level of the ferry, which was now crowding with men, gesticulating and apparently shouting to the two in the water, and some of the more sober among the lantern bearers having got the ferry out towards mid-stream, were endeavoring to let a rope down towards the doctor.

But it was hopeless fishing. The line was not long enough, and the casting of it inaccurate. Neither Jim nor the doctor attempted to avail themselves of it.

Side by side, stunned by the noise around them, they battled with the Fraser, whilst though the farther bank seemed to come no nearer, the red lights of Soda Creek grew more dim and distant, and the figures on the ferry more indistinct.

Luckily for the swimmers there was even less ice in the river than there had been in the morning when Combe crossed it. The frost had not held in the upper country through which flow the tributaries that supply the Fraser with its first run of ice, but there was enough of it to add to their difficulties.

Suddenly the light of Soda Creek went out altogether, and the dancing lanterns of the ferry disappeared, and at the same time a new sound struck upon their ears, a dull, grinding noise, which grew louder and more distinct with every second that passed.

They had drifted past a bend in the river, and at the next, to which they were being hurried, the ice was packing. If they got into that pack before reaching the further shore, it would be the end of them. The horses, spent already, must go under in the churning and grinding ice.

Straining his eyes to the utmost, Combe thought that he could just distinguish the line of the farther bank, it was nearer than the ice pack which he could hear in the dark below him, but was it near enough? They were being carried down stream many yards for every foot which they made in the direction of the shore. It was just one of those positions in which death is made doubly hard by the temptation to struggle against it. Death itself is probably not so very dreadful. Nature is full of bogies to coerce her willful children, and the last bogie of all, used mainly to make us play out our innings to the end, is possibly the most gentle fraud amongst them, but that struggle in the dark against the irresistible waters, with life and safety so near at hand, was bitter to bear, and at the very climax of it Jim's horse gave in and turned its head down stream.

In a moment they were racing towards their death. After all that long and stubborn fight against the stream, with the shore almost within reach, the failure of the roan's courage ruined them. If he had been alone it is possible that Combe would have given in then and drifted down quietly to his death, rather than fight longer against the inevitable, but his sight of the other man still struggling, and obviously spent, roused him to one more effort.

It was useless to shout to the horse, but with his free hand he managed to strike it in the face, and drag his head almost under with the other, until in despair the beast turned up stream again. But it was too late. Jim knew it, for he could hear the ice teeth at his heels, almost at his head, and he only struck out still from a stubborn determination to fight to the last inch. His reward exceeded his hopes. Since he plunged into the Fraser it had seemed to Combe that he and his horse by immense efforts had just managed to remain stationary upon a plane of sliding water which carried them towards the ice pack, but now for the first time the long head which had bored down upon him, pushing him always nearer and nearer to eternity, began to forge ahead. There was no doubt of it.

They had reached the eddy under the shore; the big boulders loomed up, grew clearer, and the roan struck bottom.

At the first touch Combe's knees seemed to give under him. All his strength had gone, and having gone through the deaths he seemed likely enough to drown, in the shallows.

With an immense effort of will that he braced himself sufficiently to stagger out of the eddy. He could have fallen where he landed, but a cry from the doctor found one last reserve of strength left in his companion, and calling upon that "last ounce," Jim blundered down the bank and into the water, falling against a great tooth of rock, which broke the force of the river at the bend.

By what seemed a miracle, the pinto had just made good its footing on the very last point between it and the swirl which led to the ice jam, but the doctor was too spent to profit by his horse's good luck, and though Jim grabbed him as he was swept by, he could do no more.

For what seemed to him five of the longest minutes he had ever known, the water crushed him against that rock tooth, whilst his arm was reeked with the pain of keeping his fingers crooked in that landing of wet clothing, which swayed with the current, but which he had not strength to drag back.

He could hold on to it, he would go with it rather than let go, but he could not find the strength needed to draw it to his own place of safety.

Jim felt his body slipping away from the rock which sheltered him. Gently, insistently, like an angler who puts all the strain he dares upon a lightly-hooked fish, the waters drew him from his hold, and then there came one of those strange chuckling sounds which water makes amongst the boulders.

In his light-headed condition it was to Combe the laugh of a devil who wins, and it touched some spring in his nature, of which for the moment he had lost control, the strength came back to his muscles, and with a last desperate effort he drew Protheroe to him; dragged him somehow to the river's brim, and dropped him there, where the waters lapped over the first boulders of the dry land.

For a long pause there was silence, but for the ravings of the river, bawled of its prey, and the little wind, which whined like a wolf amongst the sage brush along the cliff's edge.

Utterly spent, the two men lay where they had fallen, as did the pinto. Only the roan stood upright, and even his strong knees were bent, his head hung, and his whole body was shaken with shivering fits.

Combe was the first to recover. Dragging himself to his feet, he went over to the doctor's horse.

"You've got to get up, old fellow," he said, "or you'll die on our hands, and we can't spare you yet," but the poor beast lay with head stretched along the ground and took no notice of him. It had made up its mind to die.

"Can you help, Doc?" Jim asked, but the doctor shook his head, and lay still, nor was it until nearly an hour later that Combe contrived to get his companion and the two horses up to the top of the cliffs, upon which he built a roaring fire, not only for the sake of comfort, but as a sign to any whom it might concern that they had survived the river crossing.

"And now, Doc, I guess you might as well get along towards the ferry. There's maybe be someone there still, unless they've all given us up for dead. You will have had about enough for one while, I expect."

"What! Give up the run when I've jumped the big brook? Not much, Jim."

"Then you mean coming on?"

"I started to get there, and I'm going to get there with both feet, my son, as you would say in your picturesque fashion."

Jim pulled at his pipe in silence for some time, then in a shamed way he said: "I owe you an apology, Doctor."

"For abduction? Yes, I believe that there is some trivial penalty attached to that form of amusement."

"No; not a blanked bit for that. You'd have done the same only I didn't know it. It's just for not knowing you; I'm sorry. I ought to have known you were a man."

"I was drunk. Anything is good enough for a drunkard, and I was. There ain't another man in Cariboo would have risked his life as you did, drunk or sober."

The doctor laughed. "You did for one, and that is life anyway. Do you think that the loss of it would be such a terrible calamity? Think of it! No more whiskey—lad whiskey at that; no more graceful badinage with the coy Kate Canyon; no more delicate jests with that fat-headed bar keeper; no more memory perhaps. If I believed that last, Jim, by heaven, I would not forgive you for pulling me out. But let's stop talking and get a move on, or those fools will be over to look for us."

"We shall have to walk, at first at any rate."

"It can't be helped. I suppose that we can get some feed for the horses at Brathwaite's."

"Yes, if we start now we should be there by sun-up, and lighting their pipes, the two led their horses away towards the west."

CHAPTER XVI.

After Jim Combe's departure a strange quiet fell upon the life of the ranch. There were no galloping horses about the corral; there was no noisy cowboy chaff about the barn. The one thing necessary was that Frank Anstruther should be kept quiet. Any movement caused him excruciating pain, and was likely to disarrange the imperfect bandages in which his body was swathed, and though he took his punishment with set lips, never complaining of the pain, he was a bad patient, restless under restraint, and excitable to the last degree.

It was only a long as Kitty was in the room that they could keep him still. As long as she was in his sight he would lie hour after hour without stirring, only the eyes in his white face alive, and those so followed every turn of the girl's pretty head, that they frightened her.

She began to feel that those burning eyes could see through her into her heart, and for that she was by no means ready yet.

There was a picture in it upon which she was trying to pass judgment, a picture of a furious storm in which trees were crashing and roofs hitting and solid substances were being whirled about by some invisible agency, and in the middle of it all a great red roan reared and raged.

"Them's baby tricks," she quoted under her breath, and a proud smile spread over her face as she thought of the man who drove the great red devil into the heart of the storm to do her bidding.

"I wish that I could have seen Jim start."

The voice came from the bed, and Kitty flushed guiltily as she turned towards the speaker. He did then read her very thoughts.

"Why do you say that?"

"It must have been such a grand match between Jim and the stallion. I don't think Jim has his equal as a horseman."

"That is what they say about here, but I don't suppose that he would be any good in your country."

"Why my country and not yours?" and then with a generous impulse, "Jim would be good anywhere. The better the class the more he would shine in it. Sitting a fence isn't as hard as sitting a buck jumper. Seemingly it is not worth anything compared to doing," and he pushed irritably at the bedclothes which encompassed him.

"Suffering is harder than either," said a quiet voice at his elbow. "Kitty, make Mr. Anstruther take this, and don't let him worry about Jim. Jim is quite able to take care of himself."

ITEMS OF SPORT

George Hackenschmidt has posted $5000 at Chicago for a private return match with Frank Gotch.

Hack's offer was carried to Gotch and accepted, with the provision that the match be held within two months. This was not accepted by Hackenschmidt, saying that his injured knee would not permit his return to the ring in that time.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 25.—The trotter of the grand circuit caravan which occupies the centre of the spot light at the present time is the homely chestnut gelding R. T. C., a graduate from breaking sod on a neastern farm to the position of the most talked about trotter on the big ring. He won two $10,000 stakes within the space of one week, one at Kalamazoo and one at the Grand Rapids track, in addition to a purse race at Indianapolis.

Calgary, Sept. 20.—"We don't want bathing suits, do we girls," chirped the leader of a bevy of pretty chorus damsels from Calgary. They were up at the sulphur basin at Banff, and the attendant at the baths was performing the customary duty of handing out the bathing suits.

"Oh, pshaw, no. There's nobody but us here," was the unanimous verdict. "I never did like being hampered by a bathing suit," explained the leader. "It makes me feel so heavy." So they all disrobed and plunged in, and sported around displaying forms that would have turned some of the famous sculptors' models green with envy. They didn't object to being watched by the attendant either.

Yesterday the members of city engineering department extended a welcome to their cement tester whose services will be much appreciated. The employment of a cement tester has been found necessary since the dispute in council recently over cement quality.

THE COSY CORNER

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

BELTS THIS FALL

Prevailing Fashion Will Continue
Belts of suede and patent leather will continue in fashion for fall wear. Without doubt they are the most serviceable, wear better and look better for a longer time than any other kind. The shops are now showing beautiful new styles, with all sorts of fancy buckles—some of them set with mock jewels, inlaid with enamel or carved in intricate designs.

The belts themselves are in the most part plain; but for the woman who desires a fancy touch to her costume at the waist line there is a wide selection of fancy models. A black patent leather belt will show a lining and binding of white or some vivid-colored satin. Persian designs are inset in the center and sides of the belts, showing a lining of multi-colored silk. Straps and crossbars of shiny kid are used for ornamentation also. Some of the belts are made of soft leather that is very pliable and, when placed taut about the waist, wrinkles slightly. Other wide belts take the form of a girdle and are fastened with long metal buckles covered with patent leather.

Practically the same styles are carried out in the belts of suede. These, however, often show designs of metal nail-heads all the way around. A very attractive belt is of golden brown suede, which slips through several oblong slides that are connected at each end with fine chains and are set with imitation topaz in silver filigree. White suede is, of course, the proper belt to wear with white gowns, especially with the white serge skirts and lingerie blouses. These can be easily cleaned and promise to be very popular during the early fall with serge suits.

Belts of embroidered linen matching the linen suit are splendid for everyday wear, and with white linen frocks one should have a belt of linen embroidered either in white mercerized thread, a conventional design or a floral wreath in colored floss.

Some women prefer an elastic belt. They cling to the figure and are sure to set properly. These can be bought in all colors, either plain or fancy. Those trimmed with jet or steel beads are often very attractive. For lingerie dresses, the belt or girdle of softly folded stain is charming. It is best to select a delicate shade matching the ribbons or embroidery used on the gown. Satin, mousseline, and even chiffon are used for girdles on evening gowns when the broad band of embroidery about the raised waist line is omitted.

WILLOW PATTERN STORY

Everybody Has Heard It But Don't Remember It
The scenes on the old willow china pattern illustrate a Chinese love story and are quaintly explained in the little poem:
Two pigeons flying high,
Chinese vessel sailing by;
Weeping willow hanging o'er,
Bridge with three mer—if not four;
Chinese temple there it stands,
Seems to cover all the land.
Apple trees with apples on,
A pretty fence to end my song.

The legend of the old willow pattern tells of the beautiful daughter of a Chinese Mandarin, who, refusing a wealthy suitor favored by her father, elopes with this secretary. The lovers are pursued, the figures on the bridge in the pattern, representing the escape. They succeeded in reaching a distant island, where they lived happily for years, until the disappointed suitor found them out and burned their home. The doves in the pattern represent the upward flight of their twin souls.

DEEP BREATHING EXERCISES

Practised Steadily Bring Health Without Fail
Stand erect with back to a door or wall with heels together and touching the floor. Let hands hang loosely at sides. Take a deep breath while counting six, now exhale while counting the same number; repeat six times. Raise the arms slowly above the head while taking a deep breath, counting six, lower them while exhaling, repeating six times. This and similar exercises practised in an airy room, morning and evening, while free from binding or cumbersome clothing, will prove most beneficial.

A Good Way to Cook Beef Liver

Grind 1 1/2 pounds of raw liver and a sprig of celery with an onion through the "machine." Turn into a bowl and work into it 2 stale soaked rolls and 1-2 cupful of dried bread. Season to your liking with salt and pepper. Have ready enough deep fat, hissing hot, to float doughnuts. Into this drop the mixture in large spoonfuls. When these are done on one side, turn and brown on the other.

You should have at hand 2 cupfuls of potato balls cut with a gouge from parboiled potatoes. The water in which they are parboiled should be salted. Put these into a casserole with a large piece of butter, a minced onion and a large tomato, peeled and sliced. Brown in the oven. When the liver balls are done, put them into the casserole with the fat in which the liver was cooked. Rub smooth 1 1/2 tablespoonfuls of flour in a little water and stir into the contents of the casserole with 2 cupfuls of hot water. Lastly, add a quart of boiled green peas and simmer all together for about ten minutes.

Coffee Cake

It may be called either bread or cake, yet it is neither—exactly. Under any name it is delicious. Beat to a cream an even cup of sugar with a generous half cupful of lard and butter in equal parts. Stir in 1 well-beaten egg; add 2 cupfuls of milk that has been boiled and cooled and a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in half a cupful of warm water. Add 5 cupfuls of flour sifted twice with a scant teaspoonful of salt. Beat all into a smooth, soft dough. Let rise overnight, mixing this "sponge" before bedtime. In the morning beat it hard for two minutes. Grease deep jelly-cake tins or pieplates; spread the batter evenly in them and let them rise until very light. Then spread with melted butter and strew the surface with a mixture of 3 tablespoonfuls of flour creamed with a bit of butter the size of an egg. Lastly, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake in a moderately hot oven.

Have fresh "coffee cakes" for luncheon and you will be more than delighted. With the accompaniment of clear strong, hot black coffee, it should satisfy the most fastidious John.

MISS HAZEL LANGENOUR

Miss Hazel Langenour, a pretty nineteen-year-old girl, swam the Golden Gate Channel at San Francisco recently. She is the first of her sex to succeed in getting across. Miss Langenour made the perilous trip in one hour and twenty-eight minutes.

The ladies will find some very interesting values in hats at Mrs. Demers. 20 per cent reduction on all trimmed hats for the balance of this week.

NELSON AND BAYLEY WILL MEET IN THE RING TONIGHT

So as to Decide Bets and Keep Faith With the Public They Make New Articles—Public Will be Admitted Free

Oscar Nelson will face Joe Bayley tonight. Last night's fiasco was the result of a misunderstanding between one of the principals and one of the organisers, which has now been satisfactorily settled. No admission whatever will be charged for tonight's contest. The bout has been arranged for simply to set the contestants and the club right with the public after last night's difficulty.

Although assured that the spectators last night took their disappointment like good sports, and were as lenient as possible with the management, the organisers desire to emphasise that tonight's exhibition is absolutely free. Those who paid their money will of course be there, and the one man who got his money back is also very cordially invited. Frank T. Bowness will see to it that he has a good seat, as good as the best. All the organisers and the club feel that in a city where legitimate athletic amusement is scarce during the long evenings everything possible should be done to encourage an exhibition of this kind, and so are anxious to overcome the effect of last night's unfortunate hitch. Following are the conditions of tonight's contest:

Prince Rupert, B. C., Sept. 28.

Articles of Agreement Between

Oscar Nelson and Joe Bayley.

No. 1.—The contestants Oscar Nelson and Joe Bayley agree to box fifteen rounds for a decision before the Kaien Island Club at 9.30 p.m. September 28, 1911—No admission to be charged, the loser to receive any voluntary contributions made by the audience.

No. 2.—Nelson Dunn to referee the contest, and six ounce gloves to be used.

No. 3.—Straight Marquis of Queensberry Rules to govern the contest. Contestants may hit while one arm is free, but must break at order of the referee.

No. 4.—Either contestant not being in the ring before 9.45 p.m. September 28, shall forfeit fifty dollars to his opponent, which fifty dollars shall be deducted from the amount of the wager put up by backers.

No. 5.—Vernor W. Casely wagers three hundred dollars that Oscar Nelson wins the contest on the decision of the referee. W. H. Wright wagers contra that Joe Bayley wins the contest on the decision of the referee.

No. 6.—Soft bandages may be used by both contestants.

No. 7.—Contest to be at catch weights. F. T. Bowness to be stake holder.

(Signed) OSCAR NELSON, JOE BAYLEY.

GOOD 4 ROUND PRELIMINARY

Before Last Night's Match Between Joe Bayley and Tommy Maher Two Amateurs Gave Excellent Exhibition.

To while away the time of waiting for the main contest last night at the Kaien Island Club a live four-round contest was put up by two local amateurs whose names were not announced. Both young men displayed any amount of pluck, and the match was a popular event. It resulted in a win for the slimmer of the two contestants, the stout boxer calling himself "The Great Unknown" showing poorer staying power. The slim boy's reach too, gave him an advantage which after the second round ensured him the victory.

A NEW RADIUM HOSPITAL

Not a Drop of Medicine is in a London Institution

London, Sept. 28.—A hospital containing not a single dose of medicine nor a surgeon's knife—a veritable hospital of magic—has been opened in London.

The new Radium Institute—the second radium institute in the world—owes its existence to the suggestions of the late King Edward.

Apart from the necessary apparatus, the sole "stock in trade" of this new, handsome building, opposite the Queen's Hall, consists of a few blackish specks of a mysterious substance which could easily be placed on a watch glass. Mr. A. E. Hayward Pinch, F. R. C. S., is the medical superintendent.

On each side of a long corridor are waiting rooms, where patients are inspected before the application of radium.

Poor patients, who pay nothing—they cannot be treated without a certificate from their medical adviser—and paying patients have separate apartments, but the rich and poor receive exactly the same attention. On the first and second floors are the rooms where radium is supplied.

To estimate the total value of the radium in the institute is practically impossible, said the medical superintendent. It has been estimated at between $250,000 and $300,000 by other authorities.

THE OIL IS OZZING UP

Prospects are Good that Graham Island will Have Large Oil Industry.

Charlotte City, Sept. 26.—Reports from the west side of the Island from the oil territory are very encouraging. The plant of the B. C. Oilfields at Tiahn Harbor is boring through shale at the rate of thirty feet a day and expect soon to reach oil.

Messrs. Patterson and McPhail who are boring for the Otard Bay Company are down between three and four hundred feet and it is reported that the oil is oozing up through the bore already. So confident are they that oil is near that they have returned home for a brief rest after their several months of labor, and are coming back to stay with the boring until a gusher is struck.

A competent man, who is interested in the Utah and other oil fields, accompanied the party to the fields recently and asserted the indications are ideal. He made the assertion that no other locality shows better surface indications and the plant now operating will, most assuredly, "strike oil" when down from one to two thousand feet.

SUCCESSFUL SALMON SEASON

New Canneries Contemplated for Next Year in North

The fishing season of 1911 is rapidly drawing to a close. As far as Ketchikan is concerned, it has been probably the most successful in history, and that is saying a great deal. Without a single exception every cannery tributary to this town has exceeded its pack, and every indication points to good prices for the product, says the "Ketchikan Miner." The season of 1912, promises even better, as more canneries are bound to be erected before its opening. C. A. Burkhardt, who has done so well at Yes Bay and Chomley this year, is already laying plans for a third cannery, this one to be erected on Moira Sound.

Twenty per cent is a big reduction, but that is what Mrs. Demers is offering to the ladies on all trimmed hats for the balance of this week.

CURE CORBA'S BITE
Poison Counteracted by Serum Prepared by Pasteur Institute.

Paris, Sept. 28.—M. Dastre has reported interesting results of experiments in overcoming the bites of poisonous serpents. In a paper read before the Academy of Sciences he says that the serum prepared by the Pasteur Institute of Lille has been effective in counteracting the poisonous bites of three kinds of deadly serpents, including the corba. This serum will save human life if injected into the body in a quantity fifteen to twenty times as great as the venom which has been received from the cobra.

HEAP MIGHTY BIG HUNTER

Andrew Spalding Brings in a Fine Bag of Five Deer, Four Bucks and a Doe, from Pitt Island.

A party of Indian guns hunting on Pitt Island for a week today brought in the spoils of the chase for sale in Prince Rupert. Andrew Spalding represents the mighty hunters, and the bag consists of five deer, four bucks and a doe. These were speedily sold in the city. Spalding is a fisherman as well as a hunter and makes a fairly good thing of both occupations.

CHINESE CASE IS DISMISSED
Case Against Kwong for Running House Dismissed. Other Charges will be Pressed at the End of the Week.

This morning Magistrate Cars handed down decision in the Chinese gambling case to the effect that one of the accused named Kwong cannot be held responsible for running the house, and this charge against him was accordingly dismissed. The other cases stand adjourned until Saturday when several charges of gambling will be pressed, one against Kwong included. The charges against King T. I. will be pursued to the limit.

NAVIGATION OF NAAS RIVER
Capt. Babington in the Cloyah is Out on a Bold Attempt to Make Ayansh a Point Higher Than Any yet Reached by Deep Draught Boat.

Since the successful trip of the launch Wolverine with heavy freight in charge of Captain H. Robinson to the highest point of the Naas River ever reached by freight launch, Captain Babington is now making another effort to prove that a deep draught boat can successfully navigate the Naas River Canyon and so reach the territory now developing beyond that point. This territory is a fine agricultural district, and facilities for freighting in supplies by river will help materially in its development. The launch Cloyah, one of the most efficient on the waterfront, is being used by Captain Babington for this trip.
