Eastport Dreams of Quoddy's Dam And Its Resurrection

EASTPORT, Me., Sept. 29: (CP)-Residents of Eastport, just on the American side of the New Brunswick-Maine boundary line, site of the $40,000,000 Passamaquoddy Bay tide harnessing project, await the day of its resurrection predicted by President Roosevelt. Meanwhile the tide sweeps from Cobscook Bay to the Bay of Fundy untamed.

A community of 3,000 persons devoted largely to fishing, Eastport doubled its population during Quoddy's boom days. At one time 5,400 workers were employed on the job. Now, with virtually all the transient construction workers gone, the natives still retain hope. They refer to the situation a merely a "temporary abandonment."

Eventually, said President Roosevelt during a recent visit to his summer place, an adjacent Canadian summer home on Campobello Hitler Getting Reich Young Folk Island, the worth of the project will be "sold to the American people."
