United States Election

Canadian people are divided in their sympathies with the presidential candidates in the United States election which takes place Tuesday. In this district we should be all for Roosevelt but we are not. There are plenty of Landon sympathizers even here. From a selfish point of view, and politics is mostly selfishness, we stand to gain from the continuation of the Roosevelt administration. It was they who took the cent a pound off the halibut duty and it was they who made it possible for Canadians once more to ship some of their lumber into the United States. Those are the policies that help us in the northern part of British Columbia.

Some Canadian people were Republicans in the United States years ago and they continue to sympathize with that party here. There also are many Canadians of a conservative turn of mind who fear that the radical policies of Roosevelt and his party will spread into Canada and affect the political programs in this country. For that reason they would like to see Roosevelt defeated.

The election in the United States is a very strenuous one. Landon is opposing Roosevelt's policies but is proposing nothing in their place. He seems from his speeches to be against everything but for nothing. One of his supporters in radio addresses is trying to show that the president is a thief and a murderer. He said that in his university days Roosevelt led a Red group and that he is still a Red and that, if re-elected, he will turn the United States into another Russia. Also he hints that the president is allied with a group that caused the death of Huey Long and a long list of prominent men, some of whom died natural deaths. The Republicans are evidently stopping at nothing that they think will defeat their opponent. They are going so far as to cause a revulsion of popular feeling in his favor and helping to elect the man they wish to defeat. The people of English speaking countries like fairness in their politics. A stranger, listening in to the political speeches, would wonder what sort of people these Americans were. People of Italy, Germany and Russia must look across the ocean and say to themselves: "Thank God we do not live in a democracy if those are the sort of men they elect as their leaders."

Drivers of Autos

The average Prince Rupert car owner drives most circumspectly. He realizes that the conditions in this city are such as to make fast driving dangerous. He knows that children play in the streets because there are few playgrounds. Also the streets are narrow and it is not easy to see anyone turning into the streets from residences. There are, however, a few reckless drivers who do not realize these dangers. They step on the gas and in many cases do not even honk their horns.

There have been children killed on the streets as a result of driving of cars and there will be others in a few of the lads who drive too fast are not curbed.

Many children are very daring and it is difficult to avoid accidents, especially when crowds of them are playing together, rushing hither and thither. They have little wholesome fear and it is a wonder that more have not been injured or killed. If there were a bad accident we should all be shocked and steps would be taken to avoid a repetition. It is better to be safe than sorry. A terrible object lesson should not be necessary in order to bring about safer conditions on both sides.

HALIBUT BANKS COMING BACK; CONSERVATION MEASURES BEING ATTENDED WITH GOOD RESULTS.

But by careful collection of all available records, the story has been brought to light. The fact that the fishery for many years lived by constant expansion of the grounds as each new bank in turn declined in yield, and that the total for the coast fell in spite of this expansion, is but part of the story and throws no light on the reason for the decline. To discover this, statistics were collected, from company records, from vessel log books, from government files, and from periodicals, and they were sorted out by regions or areas. These areas were defined by other investigations and, only when they were known, did the cause of the depletion of each bank become plain.

Overbuilding of Fleet

The cause was evident in the overbuilding of the fleet. When this happened, not only was the existing total catch from each area divided among a greater number of boats year by year, but the total catch itself decreased. Three times in the present Area 2, the banks south of Cape Spencer, there have been great increases in the amount of fishing within the area. Each time the result was the same. The increased fishing brought in a greater total catch for a time, then this fell to a new low level, and remained there. It remained there until a new increase in fishing, encouraged by better prices, repeated the story and brought the total yield to a still lower level. The production in Area 2 fell in these three steps from sixty-five million pounds to twenty-two million in 1930. In these plain facts which compared the yield and the amount of fishing for the first time, was to be seen the cause of decline, over-fishing. And the conclusion is certain that by less fishing a greater amount of fish can be obtained for division among the boats, be their number what it may.

At first this was not readily seen. Until it was realized that the different sections of the banks were behaving as separate units, no one thought to separate the records accordingly and a decline in one was obscured by an increase in another. Now that the secret is out, it seems plain enough that there were distinct stocks of halibut, because each area of the coast went its own way regardless of the others. The banks off British Columbia were once far more heavily populated than those in the Gulf of Alaska, and were depleted until they were far more lightly populated, apparently without affecting the abundance of fish either to north or south. The isolated stock to the south, off the Columbia River, remained at a high level until 1915, was abruptly depleted by a very intense fishery over a period of two years, and has never been rebuilt. It was a splendid natural experiment proving the practical independence of stocks.

Halibut Differences

At the same time that these general evidences of separate stocks of halibut were being gradually discovered by a slow process of collecting and analyzing a vast mass of statistical evidence, a more direct attack was being made on the problem by other scientific methods. It was first found that halibut from different regions differed in such things as the length of the head, characters that could not be abruptly changed as the fish happen to change its place of living. Also, the rate of growth was found to differ greatly. Yet these differences did not hold for all individuals, however clear they were on the average, and it was conceivable that a certain number of individuals might drift from one area to another.

A more direct method was accordingly used. Numbered metal tags were placed on live fish which were liberated. A record was kept of the fish and its place of liberation. A reward was paid for its recovery, when information accompanied the tag. Of 6078 halibut freed in Area 2, some 2380 have been recaptured and of these only two were found in Area 3. Of 6891 halibut freed in Area 3, some 1132 have been recaptured, but only 59 in Area 2 over a period of eight years. Examining the results for age of the returned fish, the time they have been out, the amount of fishing necessary to capture them, and other factors, the migration between the areas of fish less than spawning age is almost nil, and of mature fish a fraction of a percent per year. Although the occasional migrant gives the speculative fisherman something to talk about, it is totally negligible from the standpoint of maintaining the supply in either area when compared to the number of young which even a sadly depleted stock of spawners can produce.

Do Not Drift

These experiments had to do only with the fish of marketable size. It remained necessary to prove that halibut did not drift from one area to another as eggs or as minute floating young. In the place at my command for this article I cannot go deeply into the fascinating story written by the commission scientists, of how the halibut egg is laid in slowly moving deep water, how the young fish floats upright like other fishes for four or five months, and how it then comes to swim on its left side while one eye migrates to lie beside its fellow on the upper, right side. At that time the young halibut rises into the surface water and drifts inshore, to settle down on the banks it makes its home until it migrates for spawning. That occurs usually at an age of twelve years.

Once this life history was known, it was possible to trace the migration, or rather drift, of the young by means of net hauls. Hauls were made over much of the North Pacific, at different times and places, and studies of the currents show plainly that the chances of young from one area replenishing banks in another are small indeed.

Distinct Areas

These are important conclusions, that the stocks in different areas are distinct, and behave differently, that each must produce its own spawn, and that the amount of fishing determines the annual yield. It is important to note that these conclusions are based on a number of lines of evidence corroborating each other and confirming the observation that the areas have from the beginning shown that they are distinct because their behavior was different as fishing depleted them.

The conclusion that less fishing would give a greater annual yield was so contrary to what had been generally thought that before relying on it, the commission sought to find out just why it was true. The staff set to work to reconstruct as nearly as possible what happened to a halibut each year of its life from the time it came of commercial size until it met death. By the use of marks on the ear bones the age was determined. By the use of tagging experiments some estimate was reached as to the rate at which halibut were captured. On some banks they were found to be disappearing at a rate of sixty percent each year of their age, on others less, and that few reached the maximum ages of thirty-five or forty years. It was already known to what extent they migrated.

It was found that it was profitable to leave halibut on the banks a longer time because they were gaining more by growth than they were losing by death from natural causes; that if they were left longer on the banks the accumulated stock on the banks was larger at any one time and that what the fisherman lost in less fishing was gained in a larger catch per day or per set of a piece of gear; and that the longer time on the banks not only allowed for more growth but that the fish were able to reach spawning size in greater numbers. Greater growth and a greater production of eggs were to be had without decreasing the total annual poundage used by the fleet. It is, however, difficult to compress within a few lines what it has taken years of careful work to discover. Suffice it to say that the details are on record, and that put into practice by the commission the conclusions reached have proved correct. The banks are being restocked without decreasing the annual catch, a most surprising accomplishment in view of the first belief that a radical restric-

Restoring Of Yield

The commission, under its powers, leaves with the fleet and trade the disposal of an annual catch which is substantially greater already than it would have been had the decline gone unchecked; a catch which has a higher percentage of first class fish and which can be taken with less effort, so that trips are no longer made at a loss. And it expects that, as the amount of spawn increases, the young produced will justify a greater annual catch, until a substantial fraction of the former great yield of the depleted banks is restored. The economic problems which the fleet has always faced it must leave to others.

HOEDOWN SUCCESS

Crowd of Four Hundred Thronged Moose Hall Last Night At Popular Event

The Gyro Club's fall hoedown dance last night in the Moose Hall was, as is usual with those affairs, a complete success. Some four hundred persons were present. There were Hallowe'en features including caps, balloons and favors. Decorations on which a good deal of hard work was put in by some of the Gyros were appropriate to the season and very attractive. With fine music by Charlie Balagno's Orchestra, dancing kept up until almost 3 a.m. and, even then, the big crowd was loath to leave.

One of the features of the evening was a half hour of fine popular concert music during the refreshment period by the Capitoliens Orchestra under direction of Dr. H. N. Brocklesby. This evoked great applause.

Miss Helen Smith and Arthur Sutton won costume prizes, judges being Mrs. Neal Carter and D. G. Borland.

Some carnival features were also operated and helped to swell the fund for the Gyro's community service work.

Dr. R. G. Large, president of the club, was convener and master of ceremonies.

Charades Enjoyed At High School

Literary and Dramatic Society Holds Its Weekly Meeting

The High School Literary and Dramatic Society's program on Friday consisted of the playing of the old party game "Charades" by two teams. Each selected two three-syllable words and acted out each syllable, then the entire word. The names chosen were in-fan-cy, ant-arc-tic, hand-ker-chief, and auto-mob-ile. Perhaps they were acted out too well for the majority of the audience guessed the words without a great deal of difficulty. Between scenes Misses Jean McLean and Ruth Nelson entertained with a piano duet and Lois Judge with several pieces of popular music.

ETIQUETTE IN HOTELS

Present-Day Hotel Rules Tame Compared With This

Timely Recipes

CRAB SALAD

Nearly everybody likes crab salad. There are different ways of making it, some simple, some more elaborate. Here is one simple and easy recipe: Take a cup of diced crab—whether canned or fresh—boiled crab—a cup of chopped celery and a finely chopped hard-boiled egg. Mix them together with mayonnaise or cream dressing when all the materials have been thoroughly chilled, and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with a spoonful of dressing on each leaf.

MACLEOD, Alta., Oct. 31: (CP)—Rules which govern decorum at present-day modern hotels make for tame reading when compared with regulations enforced at the old Macleod hotel here 54 years ago. A list dated September 1, 1882 set forth the following:

Spiked boots and spurs must be removed at night on retiring.

Dogs are not allowed in the bunks but may sleep underneath.

Candies, hot water and other luxuries charged extra, also towels and soap. Towels changed weekly. Insect powder for sale at the bar.

Special rates to "Gospel grinders" and the "gambling refresh."

Private entrance for ladies by ladder in the rear.

Baths furnished free, down by the river, but bathers must furnish their own soap and towels.

No kicking regarding the quality or quantity of meals will be allowed. Those who do not like the provender will get out or be put out.

Only regularly registered guests will be allowed the privilege of sleeping on the barroom floor.

Guests without baggage must sleep in the vacant lot and board elsewhere until their baggage arrives.

Guests are forbidden to strike matches or spit on the ceiling or to sleep in bed with their boots on.

To attract attention of waiters or bell boys shoot a hole through the door panel. Two shots for ice water, three for a deck of cards and so on.

All guests are requested to rise at 6 a.m. This is imperative as sheets are needed for table cloths.

A straight charge of $25 was made for board and $40 for board and lodging. An additional charge of $10 was made for a wooden bench to sleep on and $20 for a bed.

CONVICT'S FORTUNE

Salesman Guilty of Fraud Finds He has Interested in Big Estate

LONDON, Oct. 31. (CP)—An interest in a $330,000 estate is held by a 29-year-old salesman who after years of semi-poverty, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment for fraudulent conversion in connection with sales of vacuum cleaners and radios. He is Keith George Burrows and learned of his good fortune only a few days before his trial at the Old Bailey.

His counsel told a moving story of the man's early life and his efforts to remain in employment to provide for the upkeep of his wife and child.

"He is an illegitimate son who never saw his father and who does not remember his mother," said Graham Brooks. "At the age of 18 months he was taken by his mother to an institution and was afterwards handed over to another woman. This woman kept him in such a state that the authorities placed him with a Mrs. Burfield, who became his foster-mother. She was a woman in poor circumstances but always did what she could for him."

"He has now been informed that his father died 20 years ago leaving $330,000. He was told that the money was left to him, but solicitors have made inquiries and it would appear that no money was left to him directly, but there is a revisionary interest that will bring him substantial security."

Counsel also told the court that Burfield was suffering from Addison's disease (anaemia and dyspepsia, accompanied by a peculiar bronzing of the skin).

Police state he was bound over in 1933 for theft and sentenced to three months' hard labor for theft in 1934.

Tries Washington On Modern Things

Views of First United States President Brought Out by Impersonator

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 31. (CP)—Mrs. Lawrence H. Hart serves as 20th century stooge to her husband, the only known full-time impersonator of George Washington. The two appear before schools, clubs and patriotic organizations, Mr. Hart, resident in Washington wig, waistcoat, buff and black velvet suit, his wife in modern dress, representing a reporter interviewing Washington on questions of the moment.

Mr. Hart, who has memorized much of the enormous library output of the first president, is able to reply in Washington's own words. As Washington expressed himself about such varied subjects as aviation, slavery, price-fixing and crop rotation, the interview often takes quite a modern turn. Washington was so far seeing that much of what he has said applies to the present.

The Harts have taken an apartment in an old house in Cambridge, having 200 engagements to fill in this vicinity.

George Washington's impersonator is not particularly self-conscious, his wife says, and takes with equanimity the goggle-eyed amazement of people who encounter him getting out of elevators or taxis. "He makes gorgeous Colonial bows and kisses ladies' finger-tips," declared Mrs. Hart, appreciatively.

Lonely Bosnian Bachelor Likes Brunettes—Gets Many Replies

BELGRADE, Oct. 31. (CP)—A rich Bosnian bachelor has just proposed to half a million Yugoslav brunettes. He took a tenth of a page in two Belgrade daily newspapers to do so.

So far there have been hundreds of replies within a few days to the "agony" appeal of the rich bachelor, who wants to meet, for the purposes of marriage "a girl with an immaculate past."

The bachelor—a millionaire in the local Yugoslav currency—declares his intentions as strictly honorable.

"I am 43 years old," states his advertisement, "and I am neither handsome nor ugly. I have five million dinars in cash (about $100,000) an income of $20 a day in addition, and I have led up to date a secluded life.

"I wish to meet for marriage purposes a Serbian girl up to 25 years old. She should be a brunette, pretty, honest, good-tempered and with an immaculate past in every respect. Poverty and a moderate education are no obstacles.

"Desirable are girls of medium height—minimum five feet four inches—not over-developed and not too slim."

Halibut Fishing Season Drawing To Close—Hunting Season Now At Its Height

With the vessels of the Puget Sound fleet running straight through to Seattle with their final catches of the season prior to the closing down of fishing on Tuesday next, landings of American halibut at the port of Prince Rupert during the past week dropped off almost to the vanishing point. Only two American vessels were in with the negligible total of 24,000 pounds which brought the season's total of American landings at Prince Rupert up to 5,333,500 pounds as compared with 5,776,300 pounds at a corresponding date last year. Canadian landings for the week amounted to 194,000 pounds, bringing the total for the season up to 5,788,100 pounds in comparison with 5,074,350 pounds last year. The grand total of landings by both American and Canadian fleets at Prince Rupert stands at 11,321,600 pounds in comparison with 10,850,000 pounds last year. Prices for Canadian fish during the week ranged from a low of 7.6c and 6.5c, paid the Oslo for 12,000 pounds, to 9.7c and 6c received by the Capella for 11,000 pounds. One of the two American vessels landing during the week was the Augusta which was paid 10.7c and 7c for 11,000 pounds and the other was the Yukon which received 8.6c and 7.5c for 13,000 pounds.

With the deer and bird hunting season both in and ideal weather prevailing, the shooting season is now at its full height in these parts. This week-end has drawn out a number of parties. One which left at midnight last night for Kwinmass on the Marjorie consisted of Dr. H. L. Alexander, C. E. Starr, C. C. Mills and L. H. Haworth. Another leaving early this morning on the Neiris for Porcher Island included Dr. R. G. Large, Dr. Neal Carter, Pete Sunderland and J. O. Williamson. Both these parties are due home tomorrow evening.

Another hunting party leaves on Monday for Campania Island and other bird hunting haunts down the coast and will be absent for a week. This party is going on the Armour Salvage Co.'s service boat Pachena and will consist of J. H. Pillsbury, formerly of this city and now a member of the Workmen's Compensation Board; Dr. Bastin of Vancouver, W. H. Tobey, W. O. Fulton, George Bryant, B. J. Bacon and Capt. W. P. Armour.
