ALL EMPIRE MOURNS ITS DEAD KING

Editorial

THE KING'S FUNERAL

Joining with the people of all the Empire we bow our heads in mourning today as the last rites are being performed for the late King George V. In spirit we are with those who take part in the solemn burial service in London. We hear the sweet voices of the choir boys as they sadly sing the mournful chants over their King who is dead. We watch the procession as it passes through the streets to the music of muffled drums. We also pause for two minutes of silence with the workmen throughout England and Scotland and part of Ireland as they pause in their labors and remember that their King is now being buried. They do not make it a holiday celebration but continue their work as usual at the request of their new King.

So in this striking manner we are reminded that the old order is passing and a new taking its place. King George the Fifth was representative of the life at the beginning of the century. King Edward VIII represents the middle of the century and will make many changes in the habits and customs of the monarchy. We are reminded that deaths and births are a sign of progress. While we mourn the passing of a great King, we do so with the full knowledge that he had fulfilled his usefulness and, in the ripeness of time, has been gathered to his fathers.

It was in keeping with a customary ceremony.

King Edward VIII wore the uniform of a colonel of the Welsh Guards, the Duke of York and the Duke of Kent wore naval uniforms and the Duke of Gloucester was in the uniform of the King's Hussars.

COLD, WET IN LONDON

But Loyal Britons Were Not Deterred in Paying Tribute at Funeral of King George

LONDON, Jan. 28.—It was a cold and rainy day in London at the start today of the funeral of the late King George V. This, however, did not deter loyal Britons from gathering in mighty multitudes to witness the proceedings in connection with the last rites for their beloved monarch. Throughout the night thousands stood in the wet and bleak streets so that they might be assured of holding points of vantage when the procession passed. Before the rites ended, the wind changed to southwest and misty rays of sunshine glinted through the clouds on to the spires and minarets of the city.

NO MORE REPRIEVE

For Hauptmann Unless Attorney General Wilentz Agrees, Says Governor of New Jersey

TRENTON, N.J., Jan. 28.—Governor Harold Hoffman announced last night that he would ask the state legislature to probe the case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of the kidnap-murder of Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr., if it was considered that later developments might justify an inquiry. Apart from this, however, the governor, who recently granted a 30-day reprieve for Hauptmann, who was to have been executed ten days ago, indicated that he intended to take no further single-handed action in the case. He would not grant a further reprieve, he said, unless Attorney General David Wilentz, who opposed the last one, agrees. Nor does he intend to call the State Board of Pardons together again in connection with the case.

Impressive Service In Local Theatre Marks Tribute of This City

Solemnity and Reverence Mark Occasion With Large Congregation in Attendance—Naval and Militia Units Parade

With due reverence and solemnity, Prince Rupert, in a spirit of loyalty to the crown and affection for the dead monarch, paid tribute to the late King George V on his funeral day today with a memorial service in the Capitol Theatre this morning for adults which is being followed by a service especially for children this afternoon. The morning service, exclusively for adults, was attended by a congregation which crowded the theatre. It was arranged by the Prince Rupert Ministerial Association at the request of City Commissioner W. J. Alder.

Prominent among those in attendance were units from the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve and the First North B. C. Regiment, both of which paraded to the theatre. They were seated in the front centre of the theatre and immediately to the rear of them were members of the Canadian Legion and Woman's Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion who had also paraded.

The local naval and military units also paid their respects to the dead monarch by having guards posted with reversed arms both in the foyer of the theatre and at the tops of each aisle.

The service was opened with an introduction by City Commissioner W. J. Alder followed by the invocation by Rev. C. D. Clarke, pastor of First United Church, who was chairman.

After the singing of the hymn "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," Rev. W. D. Grant Hollingworth, pastor of First Presbyterian

Two Hundred and Thirty Dead in States From Cold; Below Zero Even in South

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—It was estimated last night that 230 persons had died as a result of the intense cold wave which has been general in the United States during the past week except for Florida and Southern California. Last night the cold was continuing with little sign of let-up.

With transportation facilities interfered with in many parts of the country, numerous communities report fuel supplies running low while in some localities food shortage is looming.

Many roads are blocked and throughout the country sub-zero temperatures prevail. Even the south is experiencing the coldest weather it has known in many years. Memphis, Tenn., reported three below zero yesterday and Lexington, Ky., fifteen below.

Owing to ice blockades, no water passed over Niagara Falls yesterday.

BODY OF GEORGE V ENTOMBED BENEATH ANCIENT CHAPEL AT WINDSOR—QUIET RITES AT ST. GEORGE'S FOLLOW DISPLAY OF PAGENTRY AT WESTMINSTER.

LONDON, Jan. 28: (CP)—The late King George made his last journey through London today and went to his last resting place in the royal tomb beneath ancient St. George's Chapel at Windsor Castle. The funeral procession began promptly as the melodious Big Ben chimed 9:45 a.m. (1:45 a.m. Pacific Standard Time).

The new King Edward VIII, his three brothers and other royal and diplomatic mourners fell in line on foot behind the coffin which was drawn to Paddington Station from Westminster Hall to be placed on a train for Windsor.

Queen Mary, heavily veiled, and other women of the royal party rode in carriages immediately behind King Edward and others were walking.

The funeral gun carriage was transported by 150 sailors pulling on ropes in front and fifty holding drag lines behind.

All London was a highway of mourning. Millions lined the streets, some having slept on the sidewalks all night with newspapers as blankets. Park chairs went for sixpence while protected window seats commanded $50.

On arriving at Windsor station the funeral cortege proceeded to St. George's Chapel where the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Archbishop of York and Bishop of Winchester, conducted the rites.

The coffin was then lowered into the tomb section below the historic chapel.

The route of the funeral procession was draped in purple and black in striking contrast to the starting point of the ceremonies at Westminster Hall where kings, princes, admirals, field marshals and other dignitaries mustered in glittering array such as London has seldom seen.

The Queen Mother appeared to bear up bravely but King Edward was seen to bite his lips several times in an effort to keep back tears as he followed his father's coffin.

King Host At State Dinner

Air of Solemnity and Sorrow Pervaded Affair Held Last Night At Buckingham Palace

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Six Kings, two Queens and three Crown Princes attended the state dinner entered last night at Buckingham Palace by King Edward VIII to visiting royalty for the funeral to-day of the late King George V. Diplomats of many countries attended the reception which followed.

There were no toasts and no ceremonies, an atmosphere of solemnity and mourning pervading the affair.

Tried before W. E. Collison on Friday, T. Torkelson and S. Schegold were each fined $20 or 14 days' imprisonment, for cutting trees on the Metlakatla Indian Reserve without authority from the Superintendent General of Indian Affairs.

RADIO DID ITS PART

Many Prince Rupert Listeners Heard King's Funeral Rites In Early Hours of Morning

By means of the radio, many Prince Rupert citizens were enabled this morning to listen to the funeral rites in London of the late King George V. American as well as Canadian stations carried the special broadcast which came by short wave from London to the Canadian Broadcasting Commission at Ottawa and was transmitted from there to all parts of this continent.

The broadcast started about 1:15 a.m. when the procession started from Westminster, where the remains of the monarch had been lying in state. British announcers described the solemn march. Between 5 and 6:30 a.m. Pacific Standard Time the actual funeral service was heard from St. George's Chapel, Windsor, where interment was made.

Even on the air the rites were deeply impressive. Dignitaries of the church were heard, great bands played, cathedral bells tolled, guns boomed and the mournful rites could be almost visualized.

Church, read from Scripture Psalm No. 144 and Revelations Chapter 21. The Prince Rupert Philharmonic Society, under the direction of Dr. H. N. Brocklesby, participated in the service by singing "Call to Remembrance."

There were prayers by Very Rev. James B. Gibson, dean of St. Andrew's Cathedral, followed by the singing of the hymn "Lead Kindly Light."

The address was given by Rev. Dr. F. W. Dafeo, pastor of First Church, after which there was the hymn "For All The Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

The benediction was pronounced by Pastor E. J. North of the Pentecostal Assembly and the proceedings closed with the singing of "God save the King."

Charles P. Balagno was pianist.

The Address

In giving the address, Dr. Dafeo spoke as follows:

"There is a shadow upon our land today. There is deep sorrow in our hearts. A great silence has fallen upon our Empire. It is the silence of grief. Today the thoughts of the entire British Commonwealth are turned to the tomb where rests the form of our late beloved sovereign, King George V, who for the past twenty-five years has guided the affairs of the Empire."

The grief is much wider than our Empire. All humanity mourns with us in the loss of a wise strong, sympathetic ruler, who during his reign has proven himself a worthy successor to his eminently wise and tactful father, Edward VII, who won for himself a title worthy to be coveted by the greatest of the earth, "Edward the Peace Maker."

"I should like first to refer to the late King's devotion to his home and his family. A loving husband, and a kindly sympathetic father, he brought the disposition that is lovely in private life into the service and conduct of the affairs of the commonwealth. Not only in the virtue of his office but in the virtue of his person was he a great and good king."

"It is a little more than a month since his voice was heard around the world bringing the season's greetings to all his people. His words addressed to the large family, his loyal subjects, were full of encouragement and human sympathy. It is as members of that great family, the Commonwealth of Nations, that we mourn for him today.

"A statesman whose office was always used for peace and the highest interests of his people, a foe to injustice and oppression, he was the friend of the common people."

"When at his coronation, the Archbishop presented King George, the undoubted King of his realm to the people, little did he, or the King himself, know how stern was the path of duty that lay before him. When the great shout of the multitude in the abbey went up in response and the blare of the trumpets resounded through the lofty arches to show that he was the accepted sovereign, could he have foreseen the anxieties that went before him, think you that he would have faltered? We have many records to prove that he would not. He was ever ready to follow the path of duty. There have never been greater difficulties to contend with in the history of the world than since he came to the throne and there have never been greater triumphs of material progress."

The War

"The saddest, the most disastrous war that has ever divided the nations was to come upon his country within four years. After that every marvel that science could produce was to link these nations together—great ships for lengthy travel, fleetest of airplanes to fly from one end of the globe to the other, speech and response made clear by wireless and telephones to the uttermost ends of the earth and sea—together with the wonders of electrical power of which our forefathers did not even dream."

"His was without doubt the most difficult quarter of a century any monarch of Britain has ever faced. Well did Stanley Baldwin in his Empire broadcast say: 'There was no respite during his twenty-five years' of reign. The whole world seemed in a state of commotion, and there never seemed to come a period when he could look ahead for two or three years and feel that all was at peace, and nothing would cause his people trouble.' The late King played his part gallantly to the end. Speaking to a representative of the American government recently he remarked: 'I reign, but I do not rule' yet, when occasion arose for wise and sympathetic counsel, no man in all the Empire was so well fitted to give that counsel."

"With a well nigh perfect knowledge of international affairs, tactful, diplomatic and gracious, he was a positive factor in shaping public measures, as well as public opinion. In affairs of national administration he stood above his peers. At home he was a king among statesmen and abroad he was truly a statesman among kings. A good public speaker, speaking four languages fluently, he was always at ease among leaders of other nations. A father to his people, an honor to the British Throne, a credit to his ancestry, an example to his son upon whose shoulders the affairs of our commonwealth have come, he was imperial in his sweep of thought and his justice was always seasoned with mercy. During his reign India has been given almost complete autonomy, Egypt and Palestine wise and constructive administration."

Laudable Qualities

"These and many other laudable qualities in the life and character of our late King serve to draw conclusions of his sterling worth as a ruler and a man among men. Living as he did in the fierce light that beat upon his throne, he won the unstinted approval and admiration not only of his own people but of all nations as Britain's kings have always done because they are in a class by themselves under divine appointment."

"Just before the passing of the King he called his secretary to his side and asked: 'How is the Empire?' The secretary replied, 'Sir, all is well with the Empire.' The King smiled and lapsed into unconsciousness, passing into the great light that shines upon the eternal throne. He laid down his crown at the feet of the King of Kings, into whose hand he had committed the keeping of his soul."

"In loving submission to the eternal sovereign, whose will is always best, we bow this morning, knowing that the separation is not for long and death holds no terrors since Christ has changed the aspect of death. In His resurrection He brought life and immortality to light, conquering sin and death. This is the message of the Cross."

"We unite our prayers today for the sorrowing ones, the Queen Mother and the members of the royal house of Windsor, and for the King who has just assumed the administration of the Empire, that he may be given wisdom and divine guidance in this most critical period, which beyond all doubt is the opening of that new age when righteousness and peace shall be the lot of God's people. God Save the King."

The Commissioner

In his brief introductory remarks, Commissioner Alder thanked the citizens generally, the clergy and the theatre management for having made the meeting possible. He referred to the fact that Prince Rupert had been incorporated the same year as the late King George ascended to the throne. There had been many troublous years since then of war, industrial troubles and depression. Monarchies and governments had risen and fallen but the position of King George had ever been secure. He had been a guide to all his people. His watchword had been service. The sympathy of all would go out to the Queen and members of the Royal Family.

WOLVES AT LIGHTHOUSE

Wm. Wallace of Adenbrooke Lays Two Of Brutes Low With Deadly Aim

One evening at sunset recently William Wallace, lighthouse keeper at Adenbrooke Island, just north of Queen Charlotte Sound, went up into the tower to light up for the night and, hearing the chickens making a commotion, looked out to see right in the clearing around the lighthouse a number of wolves.

He rushed down and went with a rifle, shooting two large females right on the trail leading to the back door. The animals had come up to within twenty feet of him when he fired.

The rest of the pack scattered but, when night fell, they came back and howled around the lighthouse the entire night. During the day they were heard howling a little distance back in the bush.

MILL MEANS GREAT DEAL

Work at Esperanza Gives Alice Arm New Lease of Life—Repairs to Dolly Varden Railway Vital

The opening two weeks ago of the mill on the well known Esperanza mining property is giving a new lease of life to the mining camp of Alice Arm, said T. W. Falconer, pioneer merchant of that camp, who was here this morning aboard the Catala going through to Vancouver for a three weeks' trip. There are twenty-five men employed on the property at present. The recent sudden drop in price of silver was not a very propitious event as far as Esperanza is concerned but the management is confident of ultimate success.

For several months Mr. Falconer has been "high grading" on the famous Dolly Varden mine in a small way with two men working. He is quite satisfied with results. The floods of last fall which did extensive damage to the Dolly Varden Railway, artery of transportation for the Kitsault mining area, constituted a blow to mining activity but it is hoped that early action will be taken in the matter of repairs which, it is realized, will be a costly job. Repair work, it is thought, may involve the putting in of some tunnels at partic-
