THE COUNCIL AND THE CONTRACTORS

One experience is not enough for some people. Not content with the lesson they got over the Prudhomme affair over the the danger of playing politics in license administration, the politicians on the city council are evidently intent on letting the citizens in for another unnecessary legal bill, over the deductions from the contractors.

There are well recognised legal objections to the penalty clause in the contracts, upon which the contractors may possibly be advised to rest their case, but outside of all legal technicalities, the sense of fairness which most people possess will enable them to see the impropriety of deducting sums of money from the contractors for delays arising out of a strike brought on by the city council themselves.

The council not only brought about the strike, they denied police protection to those contractors who were willing to go on with their contracts. Their present attempt to bait the contractors, is only a vain effort to atone to the workingmen for the way they lifted up their hopes and then dashed them to the ground.

If the individual members of the council want to play politics they should do so at their own expense. It is the citizens, who in the end will have to pay dearly for the game of baiting the contractors just as they had to pay dearly for the game of fooling the workingmen.

"MAKING A GREAT CANADIAN RAILWAY"

While we have been casting around for a man to write the history of British Columbia, an historian from over the seas has been making a flank attack upon the situation. Mr. F. A. Talbot has not written a history of British Columbia, but he has written a history of the great enterprises that promise to be the most potent factor in the future history of the Province-the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific. His recently published book, "The making of a great Canadian Railway," is so comprehensive and authoritative that it will probably stand alone as the authentic history of the building of the G. T. P.

Mr. Talbot qualified himself well for the task before commencing his book. He was well acquainted with Canada, having previously written his book on "The New Garden of Canada." He travelled over practically every inch of the road from end to end. "The greater part of year 1910," he says, "I spent on the spot, fraternising with the engineers, teamsters, graders, and others engaged upon the work. I travelled from point to point by whatever vehicle was available, from pack horse to Pullman express, from canoe to river steamer, from team McCaffery waggon to construction locomotive. When all other means of transportation failed, I walked. In this way I covered not only the ground where work is completed and in actual progress, but pushed across the gap of 840 miles then remaining to be built through the Rocky Mountains and the Northwestern wilderness, by the only means possible—by pack horse and canoe." Many people in Prince Rupert will remember Mr. Tablot from the occasion of his visit here. Many others will remember the excellent series of articles he contributed to World's Work, as special commissioner for that magazine.

Mr. Talbot's story justly starts with the coming of Charles M. Hays in 1899 from the Wabash Railroad to reorganise the Grand Trunk Lot 8, block 9, section 5, for $1150. Railroad in Canada-of his prompt perception that the line was suffering from lack of feeders, and that the only hope for the profitable reconstruction of the road was to enlarge it into a trans-continental road, opening up new territories and having terminals on both coasts of the Dominion. Then follows the story of the silent planning, the arousing of public interest, the fight for a charter, the pledging of the Liberal Government to the scheme, and its adoption by the Canadian people as a national undertaking.

Afterwards comes the romance of construction, the story of the pioneer surveying parties, of the obstacles they had to meet, and of the glowing reports they brought of the great Peace River country north of Edmonton, in the land of eighty-five day wheat, and of the great clay belt in Northern Ontario. Of the latter territory, as Mr. Talbot says, "more was known about the land lying round the North Pole than of the northern stretches of Ontario and Quebec. The story of the pursuit through the wilderness of that "four-tenths of one per cent grade" is an epic full of great deeds and heroic action.

The story of how our present harbor of Prince Rupert was passed over by the surveyors who pointed out on the chart that a big sunken rock blocked the entrance, of the pertinancity with which Mr. Hays insisted on soundings being taken, with the result that it was discovered that the sunken rock had been placed by the compilers of | Louis the Admiralty chart in the wrong bay-all this is told by Mr. Talbot who grows very enthusiastic in recounting all that Prince Rupert enterprise and determination has done in making a city rise on the banks of Kaien Island.

Mining, fruit raising and sightseeing, will be the three principal sources of Skeena River traffic thinks Mr. Talbot, who declares that large numbers of travellers will make the combined river and rail journey from Prince Rupert to Kitselas Canyon to admire this magnificent spectacle of mountain and waterfall just as they now penetrate the Grand Canyon of Arizona or ascend the mountain railways of Mr. Talbot's book, like the subject is a large one, and has been adequately presented by the publishers, Messrs. Seeley, Service and Company of London. Forty-three splendid illustrations from photographs taken by the author illumine the pages of this handsome and excellent volume, which has more than ordinary interest to we who tivity of a squirrel. live in Prince Rupert.

Lying in the bottom of the boat wrapped in a blanket which unavailing struggles had rumpled into a roll beneath the arms, was an infan whose precise age it was impossible to estimate forthwith owing to the emaciated condition of its body.

With the rocking of the boat, the foul bilge-water washed around the child's limbs and back. Instinct alone had saved it from drowning. Perhaps. during the first hours of vigor after abandonment the little one might have rolled over in infantile search for food and human attendance, but the rush of salt water into eyes and mouth must have driven the tiny sufferer to seek instantly the only position in which life was possible.

Jim was the father of three lusty youngsters who were snugly in bed in Penzance, and the sight of this forlorn little sea-waif made his eyes misty.

He reached down, unpinned the blanket, which was secured with brooch, and lifted the infant out of its unpleasing environment. It was piteous to see the way in which the shrunken hands at once strove to clasp his wrists, though they were all too feeble to achieve more than a gentle clutch which relaxed almost as roon as the effort was made.

Brand needed no second bidding. He did not wish to collapse utterly, and the soft breeze, rendered chilly by his wet gasments, had revived nim somewhat.

The resourceful sailor did not attempt the foolish process of pouring even the smallest quantity of milk inhandkerchief, steeped a twisted corner in the milk, and placed it between the parched, salt-blackened lips.

This rough expedient for a feedingbottle served admirably. The child's eagerness to gulp in the life-giving finid was only matched by the tender care of the sailor in his efforts to appease its ravenous hunger.

He was so intent on this urgent task for a little while he paid no heed to Brand. Jones, forty feet overhead, took the keenest interest in the baby's nurture.

"Mind you don't le' it suck the handkerchief into its little throat," he cried. "Not too much, Jim. It's on'y bayonets. Of course you would like a young 'un. FIRST: "CATCH YOUR PRINTER"

DIRECTIONS FOR COOKING A HARE: FIRST:-"CATCH YOUR HARE"

To produce good printing you must "first catch your good printer. . . You can't get good printing from a poor printer, even if he work with never so good an equipment. If he lacks the "knack," the trained taste, the single-minded fondness for his work which real printers have, he will do poor printing for you. If he has all of these, and in addition to them adequate modern equipment, your printing will have distinction, salesmanship, the lure of type-beauty.

As this office produces good printing you may infer the presence of a good printer-who is "catchable."

KING AND KOH-I-NOOR

New Crown for Durbar is Ordered and Will Cost Fabulous

It is understood on high authority that orders have been given for the preparation of a special crown for the king when he attends the Delhi durbar, and that the value is estimated to be about $325,000. The design was prepared by the leading firm of London jewelers, who at present have the execution of the order in

Whether the king will decide to wear the Koh-i-Noor in his crown at Delhi remains to be seen All India knows the legend, "He who holds the Koh-i-Noor holds India." Since the annexation of the Punjaub the Koh-i-Noor has been one of the chief jewels of the English crown, but Queen Victoria never visited India, and King Edward's coronation durbar was held by Lord Curzon. India has thus never yet beheld the Koh-i-Noor on the head of an English

At the coronation the great Indian diamond was the chief | jewel in the crown of the queen, the great Star of Africa being the central ornament of the king's crown. It has been reported that the queen would also wear the Koh-i-Noor at the durbar, but nothing definite is known on this point.
