A RAW DEAL FOR THE STATION GANGS

The excellently written letter from a citizen station gang man printed in full in this column relieves the News of much of its responsibility to point out to the public the amazing nature of the raw deal handed to those citizen workmen who tendered for the Woodworth Lake clearing.

The News submits that the council's conduct in regard to the tenders is without precedent, and challenges the council to cite an into the boat and kept her aliveinstance where, after tenders have all been opened and read in public, a city engineer has been then invited to put in a tender. The council's matters." action eliminates every atom of fairness from the procedure, and makes a mockery of the hardships, expense and inconvenience which the workingmen went to in order to figure on the jobs.

As one man scathingly put it: "They sent enough of us up there to figure on the job, to have cleared the land while we were there. Now it appears that our work was all in vain. There was no intention to award it to the lowest bidder."

If the city engineer's department is to be put in possession of the men's figures before being asked to tender it makes a mockery of the whole business.

PASSING COMMENT

In undertaking the erection of an $18,000 church building, the Methodists of Prince Rupert display their faith in the future of Prince Rupert as well as their faith in Methodism.

An investigation shows that Mr. Borden's Cabinet does not contain a Presbyterian representative. Neither has it a farmer. Martin Burrell who grows fruit, calls himself a horticulturalist. With the Presbyterians and the farmers, left out, how can Mr. Borden look on his Cabinet as representative of Canada.

Letters to the Editor ----A STATION MAN'S PROTEST AGAINST A RAW DEAL

Dear Sir,-As one of a gang of twelve men who bid on the clearing of Woodworth Lake, I wish the people of Prince Rupert to understand the kind of a deal the council gave us, and the public as well.

The city council invited us to look the work over and many of us made the hard trip to Woodworth Lake, sleeping out in the open over night and came back and put in our tenders on this work, believing the council intended to let the work to the lowest bidder.

We have no fault to find if Shreiber & Co., or anyone else, underbid was fluttering from the lighthouse "Oh, I see," piped Jones. His en and stood upright. us, but, from their procedure at the meeting at which they opened the bids, we are very well satisfied that they did not intend to let zance. The morning would be well "That's O.K. for the "T," remarked the work to station men or anyone else in order to cover up their tracks. They have been willing to sacrifice the station man element and the contracting public by inviting them to look over this work, organize gangs, figure upon it, and submit tenders. There were many of us who bid on this work. It took more than half an hour to open and head towards a bunk. "I gev' her a Enid. Elaine died young, the victim read all the tenders, during which time the City Engineer and Alderman Hilditch sat at the council table. When the last tender was finally opened and read, an inquiry was made of the City Engineer as to where his tender was. He did not reply, but looked in the direction is, snug as a cat.' of Alderman Hilditch, who rose to his feet with the amazing explanation that they had forgotten to bid. We ask if it is possible for a man to listen to the reading of thirty-five competitive bids and not realize until the last bid was read that he had intended to bid but had forgotten? And, mind you, Colonel Davis did not commit himself to the statement that he had forgetten. If he forgot, we believe he was

After this they passed a resolution asking the Engineer to submit a tender as to what the city can do this for in days' labor on Tuesday next. We believe that they fully intended to do this on days' labor all the time and that they were afraid to bid themselves until they knew our figures and that the whole thing is a farce and the whole proposition of bidding was a put up job on the public and at our expense. There was absolute harmony among them all which is unusual

Is baseball uncertain? Ofttimes this old question has and American leagues club.

HHHH Leaving the Giants and Athletics out of it, for the reason that almost every expert in the country decided the series to be a toss-up, with very little advantage to either side, as the games up to date have proved, the uncertainty comes, with both feet, in the case of the Cleveland Naps, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

Probably the biggest surprise was the four straight defeats handed the Cubs by Duffy's delegation. The Cubs finished second in the National league chase, after putting up a tough fight for the pennant until almost the last week of the season. The Sox, on the other hand, ended in fourth position, a fraction of a point better than the Boston Red Sox. during the season the Sox were "in and outers," one day being sixth and the next third, but never showing anything which would warrant their giving a tough battle to a team second in the Lynch league. Now they surprise every one, including their own supporters, by beating the Cubs in easy fashion.

To balance this, Cincinnati, who finished a poor sixth in the National league, plays Cleveland for the Ohio championship and defeats in six despite the fact that the Naps rushed under the wire third in their league.

H H H Last but not least is the case en more more than the case en more of the two St. Louis teams' city series. The Cardinal's finished fifth in the National race and the Browns sometimes called the worst team in the American league proved by the fact that they finished last by many games win four out of the six games played Roving Rajah's club their showing, like their scores, has been much better than the National leaguers.

To prove it, how does this sound?

> The Sox toyed with the Chicago Cubs in the four games of the city series. During the 1911 season the Sox lost the majority of their scheduled contests to Cleveland, who proved poor opposition to any other articles distinctive of well. Thrilling Drama to be Staged Tonight.

"La Belle Russe," the offering of the May Roberts Company tonight, will demonstrate even more fully the prowess of this excellent company.

The plot of "La Belle Russe" is woven around the story of twin sisters who lead very different lives, one being the unfortunate wife of a younger son and the other an adventuress of the worst type who tries to usurp her sister's place on discovering the husband has for years lost track of his wife in London. The ruse of "La Belle Russe" nearly succeeds for she is on the point of remarriage with Sir Philip Calthorpe who believes that she is his lost wife but she is foiled by her abandoned husband. The play is full of intense situations and reminds one of Belasco's best work.

IN MERRIEST MASQUERADE

McIntyre Hall Last Night was a Lively Scene with Music and Motley.

In the McIntyre Hall last night the first masquerade ball of the season was held as a Thanksgiving Night celebration. The masquerade was a great success about forty merry couples being present in costume. Quaint and curious motley was worn by the men and the ladies appeared in some very dainty disguises. Prizes were offered for the most effective cottumes, the winners being:

Lady's Prize-A silver chatelaine, won by Mrs, Casely for her clever coon costume in company with Mrs. Shoemaker as her coon partner.

Miss Bella Falconer scored over the mere males present by carrying off the gentlemen's prize of a handsome umbrella. Her costume, Appearing at the Empress theatre that of a charming young prince fit for the pages of the most clared a winner from the word go. Judges in the competition were Mr. Gottstein, Mr. Barker and Mrs. Frizzell. Round the last named centres an amusing incident showing the perfection of the disguises last night. Mr. named as judge.
