FRIDAY, Nov. 10

THE PROVINCE AS A LAND SPECULATOR

The announcement that the public sale of lots in Section Two does not include those held and owned by the provincial government has raised quite a storm of indignant protest from the people of Prince Rupert. It is protested against as a piece of the most unjust discrimination against development of this northern part of the province in favor of the southern and more developed sections and as a glaring inconsistency of the government's policy, the primary object of which has been announced as the encouragement of the development of our natural resources.

The people of Prince Rupert are indignant that the government lots in Section Two are not to be offered for sale with those of the railway. They can see the object. The province is in the real estate business merely as a speculator. At the first sale of city lots the lots of the province and those of the city were advertised to be sold without reserve. Those of the railway were so sold; those of the province were not. Lots were reserved by the latter for "public purposes. The city wanted one of these reserved parcels of land recently for a city hall, five lots near Market Place. The province offered them to the city for this public purpose at a so-called "reduced price" for such a purpose, namely $25,000. This was above the price price of the ordinary speculators.

The provincial government is feared in Prince Rupert as one of the most unscrupulous of real estate speculators. Any other speculator buying and holding a lot has to pay city taxes on unimproved property while waiting to reap the "unearned increment," but not so the province. It is now holding from development unimproved lots in the best part of Second avenue and other parts of the city. As the city builds up these lots become more and more of eyesores in comparison with the improvements on either side of them. But of course their value is increasing all the time.

There is an inconsistency in this. The government policy announced for the next meeting of the legislature is to cancel all leases upon which the holder, although he has paid his rentals regularly, has made no improvement or effort at development. This can scarcely b called consistent with its policy in this city of holding lots for merel speculative purposes, thus retarding the growth of this city and robbin the public exchequer of the taxes those lots would bring were the in other hands.

A public meeting on this subject would bring out many other government inconsistencies, probably more glaring, and would prove what sterling friends Premier McBride and his henchmen have failto be in fostering the growth and prosperity of Prince Rupert.

PASSING COMMENT

An army colonel in England has just been adjudged insane because he altered a check for $11, to read $11,000, and tried to pass it.

What would they have called it if he had tried to alter a check for $11,000 into $11

The old saying that misfortunes never come singly is strangely exemplified in the death of Albert Kobus, at Renfrew. He is the fifth of the family to meet a violent death. One was drowned from an ocean boat, a second was crushed beneath a falling arch at Renfrew, a third was drowned in Rainy River, a fourth was killed by an explosion at La Tuque, and the other day the body of Arthur was found, crushed and mangled, on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway. One brother still survives.

Not so ran Mrs. Vansittart's jumble of thoughts. The plans, the schemes, pair. the builded edifice of many years, threatened to fall in ruin about her. In such bitter mood there was no consolation. She sought not to find spiritual succor, but bewailed the catastrophe which had befallen her.

It assuredly contributed to that "affliction which is but for a moment. that Constance should happen just then to run up the stairs towards the hospital. Each flight was so contrived that it curved across two-thirds of the superficial area allotted to the stairway. Anyone ascending made a complete turn to the right-about to reach the door of the room on any given landing and the foot of the ladder to sure the next.

Hence, the girl came unexpectedly face to face with Mrs. Vansittart. The meeting startled her. This pale woman, so thinly clad in the demi-toilette of evening wear on ship-board, should not be standing there.

"Is anything wrong?" she cried raising her lantern just as Enid did when she encountered the sailors. "No, no," said the other, passing a nervous hand over her face. Constance, with alert intelligence, fancied
