ALBERTA HELIUM

Much Valuable Gas Being Wasted—Extracted Unprofitable

CALGARY, June 8: (CP)—Thousands of cubic feet of helium gas, suitable for dirigibles such as Germany's giant Hindenburg, destroyed at Lakehurst, N. J., recently, are lost daily in waste gas flares which consume more than 200,000,000 cubic feet of gas in Turner Valley oil fields.

Since gas was discovered here, there have been proposals from time to time to erect a plant to extract the helium, and since the destruction of the Hindenburg the subject has been again to the fore.

A Dominion government report a few years ago disclosed that helium content of Turner Valley gas was only three-tenths of one percent, and experts say that one percent content is necessary for economical extraction.

In 1911 Prof. J. C. McLennan of Toronto, erected an experimental plant in Calgary and some helium, reported 98 percent pure, was extracted from Bow Island gas. The plant was closed during the war and production of helium was never realized on a commercial scale.

It is believed some of the new wells now drilling may uncover gas flows richer in helium so that an extraction plant would prove commercially feasible.

In the course of their trip Mr. Graham and Mr. Brown will fly north from Fort St. James into Harrison Creek.

Imperial Conference Hears Proposal From Australia to Ban War

Would Provide For Conciliation and Arbitration of All Disputes in Western Ocean—Would Mean Long Negotiation

LONDON, June 8: (CP)—Peace of the Pacific occupied the attention of chief delegates to the Imperial conference today. An Australian proposal for a Pacific pact was particularly under review. The proposal as placed before the delegates is understood to provide for the signature by all powers bordering on the Pacific Ocean of a pact agreeing not to resort to aggression and to employ conciliation and arbitration as a means of settling disputes. In essence the proposal is of form along the lines of the Kellogg-Briand pact with particular application to the Pacific. The pact does not, it is stated, provide mutual guarantees against aggression.

Mrs. John McMillan of Stewart Passes Away in Prince Rupert General Hospital

After an illness of several months, Mrs. Elsie McMillan, wife of John P. McMillan, Canadian customs officer at Stewart, passed away at 4 o'clock this morning in the Prince Rupert General Hospital. The husband himself has been a patient for some time in the hospital.

The late Mrs. McMillan had been ailing since last fall when she went to Vancouver for surgical treatment. Returning north, she failed to show any permanent improvement and last March entered hospital here and had been a patient in the institution since that time.

Born in England about forty-five years ago, Mrs. McMillan was married in Prince Rupert about twelve years ago. She lived at Arandale on the Naas River for a time before proceeding with her husband to Stewart. In addition to the widower, deceased leaves to mourn her loss a daughter, Irene, aged eleven, and a son, Angus, eight.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon from the chapel of the B. C. Undertakers with Rev. Dr. J. W. Stevenson, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Musical Test

Those who arrange for the annual visit of the examiner for the Toronto Chamber of Commerce are doing an excellent service to the community. In the first place they enable the music students to take the same tests that are given in the larger centres and when working for passes or for honors they know they are on exactly the same footing and have just the same opportunities to obtain a recognized standing as the students elsewhere.

In addition to the examination privileges the annual visits give opportunities for music lovers and especially for students to hear one of the outstanding musicians of the day. This year the visitor is to be Frank Blachford of the Toronto Conservatory, an outstanding violinist. He is a gold medalist, a prize winner at Leipzig and a musical conductor of some note. The recital which is being given here is to help defray the cost of the students' examinations.

Friendliness to Tourists

Some people have complained that in Vancouver the residents are not at all friendly to tourists from the United States. In Prince Rupert we have heard of no such complaint but possibly it might be in order to mention that nothing is to be gained by being unfriendly and on the other hand friendliness is always remembered.

How many of us can recall when visiting in a strange place how we have been enthused by a little kindly act on the part of a perfect stranger? By these little acts of courtesy we make the visits pleasant and really benefit ourselves as much as we benefit the visitors.

Misunderstanding

Much of the unpleasantness of life is caused by misunderstandings. One person thinks another did something wrong or unethical whereas it may not have been the work of that person or it may have had a totally different application. If we could learn to trust each other more or possibly to thresh out our difficulties at the time instead of harboring them and letting them annoy us, we would all be better off.

Bernice Palmer says . . .

Election news has made me reminiscent. Goodness, to think that I have come to that period in life when I speak of "when I was a child." But there you are! Most of the old gang has scattered to the four corners of the world. Some have died and a few have remained behind. Quite a number of yesterday's children have moved to California, perhaps because it is closer, and we pass the Daily News along. In the early days in Prince Rupert, elections were taken very seriously and feelings ran high. Even the kids entered into the spirit of the event and organized their own rival parties while politics raged hot. Isobel Kelly (she was "Isa" then) headed one contingent, and "Happy" Ritchie the other. Meetings were held at recess at school and on the tennis court or under the fire escape, and one year, a parade was staged. That was the crowning piece. With banners waving and paper head bands we marched up and down the town from Orme's drug store to Emad's confection shop, both sides singing the same song only with the names changed. 'Member, it ran like this:

"Vote, boys, vote for Duff Pattullo (or Sam Newton, whichever managed to yell loudest)
"Kick Sam Newton out the door
"For Pattullo is the man,
"And we want him if we can,
"We don't want Newton any more."

The hat bands were my masterpiece. Wreathed in holly leaves, because I could make those best, the words "Vote for Patullo" in red letters met the eye. I was very proud of those signs, though a little embarrassed when Mr. Newcombe (another old timer) told me my sentiment might be good but the spelling was awful. Then when it came to the actual night of the election, Coco McMullin, Helen Wallace, Rhona Saunders and myself, would manage to wangle an invitation to spend the night the guests of Dorothy Tremayne, where, hanging out the window or sitting on a perilously sloping roof, we would watch the election returns. Sometimes Crip (Crippen's Boneless Herring, now lying in Flanders Field) would bring us the latest news, or we would phone Chief Vickers. Most of the boys at school were for Mr. Pattullo—Doris was an awfully pretty girl. But there never was any hard feeling among the youngsters though keen competition. We were out for the thrill. We left the more-serious side for our parents. Nor did it matter, after it was all over, who won. As we grew older, some of us continued to be interested in elections and, with the fervor of the adolescent, were determined to make the world safe for democracy and use our vote where it would do the country the most good. With this idea in view, we attended all the campaign meetings, wavering from one party to the other—they were both convinced the winner was running the nation to perdition. It was very confusing. And then, when I reached my 21 birthday, Mr. Pattullo happened to be in town. He was now "the Honorable" and, like many of the other youngsters around, I felt I had also helped personally to put him there with my childish campaigning. And, when he sent me a gorgeous large box of chocolates in honor of my reaching my majority, well my happiness was complete. I still have the top of that box. It is in an old scrapbook beside me now. The fact that he chose a box with a most sophisticated lady on it made me feel even more grown up. Probably it was the only choice he had but it did not strike me that way then.

Somehow, elections have never lost their thrill for me even though they have become more serious. In those days, though, elections were so picturesque. Prince Rupert was in the board walk stage and in some places the sidewalks were so high from the muskeg beneath, propped up on sticks, that they had a rail on each side. Cars were few and Dr. Tremayne's was still a novelty—so even those who celebrated their candidate's success too much were safe. It was the casual tourist who got the biggest thrill going over those "bridges." And most of the townsfolk would be on hand to greet Captain Barney

For just a little while the domination of Edmonton Grads over women's basketball was snapped four years ago last night. Percy Page's team hasn't lost a series since.

CATTLE INDUSTRY

DARWIN, Aust., June 8: (CP)—Establishment of a port and meal packing plant on the Gulf of Carpentaria to aid in the development of the cattle country in Barkly Tablelands has been announced as the objective of the new administrator of the Northern Territory of Australia, C. L. A. Abbott.

Johnson as he brought his ship in on time. That was his boast—he was never late—or to waver to genial Skipper Roberson.

You know, these days it isn't everyone who is privileged to be an "old timer" or a "pioneer," and, it isn't until after we have settled down in the big towns that we realize this. That in Prince Rupert we were a part of the very heart and soul of the town. That our parents had helped build the place and by their very faith in the little tent city of long ago, we were its "native sons and daughters." We belonged. Here, those of us who have left are just a part of the bustling many. Our business is our own our loves and lives concern no one. Perhaps a paragraph from a letter from Sidney Bazzett, commenting on this column, will be appropriate here:

"I should think that Prince Rupert people would be interested in former Rupertites. I know that those who have come away from there still think of the friends we have left behind, of old associates, and that, regardless of the uncalled-for attitude of the weatherman, we think only of the good times we had, and of those who have remained behind." And so you see, I am not the only one who likes to turn the pages back! So,

ECHOES OF THE GREAT WAR

"I was in the cavalry, and whenever they brought in crippled horses they were shot."

"And here's the cook's recipe for stew: one horse, 4 onions, 1 bag potatoes, 1 bag carrots."

"Those Seaforth Highlanders were terrors on wheels when it came to hand to hand fighting. They fought with picks, shovels, iron bars, or whatever they could lay their hands on. Those boys were called 'Ladies from Hell!'"

"Ever see a real Scotch kilt? Well, they aren't made of this plaid material you get for about $2 per yard—not by a long shot! There are twelve yards of material in a kilt, believe it or not, and the plaid is so heavy that the strongest wind can't blow it out of place."

"I was a nurse-in-training in England during the great war. We lived through the terrors of bombing raids, and nursing men nearly blown to pieces; but we had our fun, too."

"We weren't supposed to bring food to our rooms from the shops. I had some currant tarts, and shoved them under my bed-spread when we heard matron coming. And one of the other girls came along and sat down on them. You should have seen the back of her uniform!"

"One of my first cases was a strapping big fellow about six feet tall—malaria. He died one night with a very high temperature and I helped matron carry him out of the hospital on a stretcher. It was snowing and quite cold as we made our way across to the morgue. Suddenly I dropped my end of the stretcher and screamed and started to run. For the corpse in front of me had slowly risen to a sitting position. Matron curtly ordered me to come back and asked me what the trouble was. I told her the corpse was alive. It was sitting up! 'Nonsense!' she said, as she opened the morgue door. As she turned around to the dead man, she took one look at him and passed out in a dead faint. The body temperature had been so great that the cold had caused it to contract. Therefore the dead man was sitting up."

"Another pathetic case was a young boy who had both his hands shot off, besides internal injuries. I wrote his fiancée, telling her what had happened. And she sent back the diamond he had given her—for she was going to marry another. That news would have killed him. So I put the ring away and made up a nice letter, which I read to him, and he was glad she still cared. Of course she never wrote again. I knew his injuries were fatal. His days were numbered. He might as well die happy. So I made up more letters—from her—and read them to him. Just before he died, he asked for all her letters and I slipped them under his bandaged stumps. He passed on to the Great Beyond, with a smile on his lips."

"The 'officer of the day' was a grouch. He made his rounds of the army camp and landed in the kitchen, where he inspected and tasted the food. He tasted a spoonful of some soupy liquid and roared. 'Cook! do you call this soup? It tastes just exactly like dishwater.'"

"To which the complacent cook replied, 'It is dishwater, sir.'"

Does Highland Fling at 72

Old Lady Tells Secret of Her Vigor

The writer of the following letter once suffered from rheumatism, headaches, and depression. Then one day a vigorous old lady told her the secret of good health. And now that former sufferer writes to tell others how she obtained relief through Kruschen:—

"Kruschen was recommended to me by an old lady of seventy-two who can dance the Highland Fling—thanks to Kruschen, which she has used for thirty years. She told me to take Kruschen Salts to try and relieve a dull heavy headache from which I suffered nearly every morning on waking. I was also troubled with rheumatism in both shoulders. Kruschen turned the trick. The headache disappeared and so did the rheumatism. I have continued taking Kruschen and intend to keep it up."—(Mrs.) F. B. W.

Kruschen is a combination of mineral salts which assist in stimulating your liver, kidneys and digestive tract to healthy, regular activity. They ensure internal cleanliness, and thus help to keep the blood-stream pure.

Christian Youth Society Picnic

Very Enjoyable Beach Party Was Staged Last Evening

Members of the Christian Youth Society and their friends held an enjoyable beach party last night at McNichol Creek. While some were swimming at the Salt Lake, the rest built a huge bon-fire on the beach. It was around this fire that the entire group gathered later in the evening, for the toasting of marshmallows and to enjoy coffee and doughnuts.

Owing to the fine weather, the play, "The Temporary Wife," which was to have been presented last night was postponed until June 21. This meeting will be in the nature of a Shakespearean garden party at the home of Miss Elsie Davis.

Tonight's train, due from the east at 10:20, was reported this morning to be on time.

G. R. Clark, secretary of the canned salmon section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, sails this afternoon by the Catala on his return to Vancouver after having been here to attend a conference of salmon canning executives yesterday.

Great Britain and France Evacuate Civilians From Bilbao

A view of the harbor and city of Bilbao, Spain, now withstanding a withering attack by insurgent forces. According to latest reports, hundreds of civilians have been killed by insurgent shells, and both Great Britain and France are helping to evacuate an estimated 200,000 persons from the war-torn city. Evacuation of the refugees is being carried out by merchant vessels which are protected by Spanish loyalist ships to the three-mile limit. British naval forces escort the merchant ships on the high seas. General Francisco Franco has advised the British government he would not promise to respect foreign ships in Spanish waters that were taking part in the evacuation.

BABY IS HONORED

Presentation of Coronation Cup To Georgina Elizabeth Brooksbank

A pleasant aftermath of the recent Coronation celebration took place last night at the home of Arthur Brooksbank when the presentation was made to tiny Georgina Elizabeth Brooksbank, Prince Rupert's coronation baby, of a beautifully engraved sterling silver cup. The cup was in recognition of the co-incidence of the baby's birth on the day of the coronation and was the gift of the local coronation celebration committee.

The presentation was made by W. M. Brown, chairman of the celebration committee, who spoke suitably, referring to the great pleasure it afforded him to tender the memento. The cup was received, on behalf of the baby, by the mother, Mrs. William Brooksbank, and the father made a brief response, giving assurance that the gift was one which would be cherished in perpetuity. Appropriate toasts were honored.

Those present were Georgina Elizabeth Brooksbank, Mr. and Mrs. William Brooksbank, the parents; Mrs. A. T. Parkin, the maternal grandmother; Arthur Brooksbank, the grandfather; Miss Lucille Brooksbank; W. M. Brown, George Cripps, J. A. Frew, D. G. Borland, F. A. MacCallum, Dr. L. W. Kergin and G. A. Hunter.

J. C. Brady, district engineer for the provincial department of public works, left on last evening's train for a trip to the Vanderhoof district on official duties.
