world at the equator three times? Imagine getting caught in a traffic jam like that!

Or if 26 cars were placed abreast fender to fender and bumper to bumper, they would form a solid mass clear across the United States from Atlantic City to the Golden Gate. That might be pretty good advertising for the Golden Gate World's Fair but a bit hard on any buildings that might stand between. However, a clever salesman like that probably had it all figured out. He also told me that if it was decided to stage a review (he must have got that idea from Mussolini) it would only take 34 years, 24 hours a day, for these cars to pass a given stand. Now just imagine standing, or even sitting for that matter, 34 years to choose a car. You'd think they would change the model in that time.

And there was also the matter of old tires. He waxed quite eloquent on that subject. It seems that each car has four wheels and each wheel requires a tire-to say nothing to spare. Now just suppose all these cars travelling all these years had to be re-tired, and every-! one put his tires, all five of them. on the same heap, it would form a hollow column reaching 14,205 miles into the ozone. A veritable tower of Babel! Maybe he had something there. But when he decided to push this tower over after going to all
