OTTAWA, Feb. 20: (CP)—The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation motion of non-confidence in the Mackenzie King government on the defence issue was defeated by a division of 191 to 17 in the House of Commons last night after a four-day debate. Liberals, Conservatives and some of the Social Crediters combined their vote to support the government. The motion, which was initiated by Grant MacNeill, C. C. F. member for Vancouver North, asked the House to view with grave concern the $13,000,000 increase in defence estimates.

LECTURER IS LIKED

University Extension Audience Asks That Dean Clement Be Sent Back Soon

Touching on a number of the more personal and intimate economic problems of the day, particularly with reference to youth, Dean F. M. Clement of the University of British Columbia concluded his series of three university extension lectures at First Presbyterian Church last night with a talk of more or less informal and conversational type. It proved of great interest to an audience which, at the close, manifested its appreciation. Not only was a vote of thanks tendered Dean Clement but a resolution was passed asking the university extension authorities to send him back here again at the earliest possible opportunity.

Dean Clement's lecture last night was of lighter and more rambling nature than the two previous ones. He commenced by giving some passing and humorous impressions of places he had visited while on a visit to Great Britain last summer including the House of Commons, the Cheshire Cheese, Canterbury Cathedral, the Tower of London and Holyrood Palace. Steeped as they were in tradition and surrounded by great world problems, Dean Clement found that the people of Great Britain, even the Parliamentarians, had their homely problems and pet schemes just as had the people of all other countries including Canada. "The Englishman and the Scotchman will sell you history, tradition and atmosphere and get a good price for it," the Dean said "and the beauty of it is the more he sells the more he has left to sell."

Getting down to somewhat more serious topics, Dean Clement referred to the movement of men and women from country to city providing the cities with the new blood which they required. One hundred years ago Canada was ninety percent rural. Today it is only about fifty percent rural and only about thirty percent was actually farming. As agricultural methods became more efficient through use of machinery etc. there were less and less people required for farming. Thus there was an excess population which must be taken care of in business and industry.

It was necessary to think today in the terms of a new society. Thirty-five years ago the horizon of the most people had been how far they could travel in a day with a team of horses. Automobiles, fine highways, the radio were among the things which had changed all that today. Everything was personal in those days. Today there was more detachment. The day of the little one-room school was passing. Instead buses and highways made larger central schools with teaching specialists possible. The business of the small (Continued on Page Four)

IS DEAD OF PNEUMONIA

William Bassett Morgan, Well Known Dry Dock Official, Succumbs

After a brief illness with pneumonia, William Bassett Morgan, engineering foreman of the Prince Rupert dry dock, passed away last night in the Prince Rupert General Hospital. Influenza had developed into double pneumonia. He had been in hospital only since last Tuesday night. A resident of Prince Rupert for nearly twenty years, he was widely known and highly esteemed and his sudden passing will be deeply regretted by numerous friends.

Mr. Morgan was born at Truro, N.S., October 27, 1877. He spent some time in England, having been identified with a large electrical plant in Bristol. Before coming to Prince Rupert, he had been located for a time at Anyox. Besides his widow, Mr. Morgan is survived by a stepdaughter, Mrs. Gladys Rochester of Toronto, and a stepson, George A. Umpleby of Vancouver, who arrived from the south on the Princess Adelaide yesterday afternoon. There is also a little grandson, Billy, who resides here. The relatives will have general sympathy in their sudden bereavement.

Deceased was particularly active in Masonic affairs, having been Worshipful Master of Tsimpsaan Lodge here in 1928. The remains are in the hands of the B. C. Undertakers and will be sent next Thursday night on the Prince George to Vancouver where the funeral will take place.

PLENTY OF SNOW HERE

New Task Added to Daily Routine—Looks Like Record—And What of the Thaw?

After pretty much a solid week of it, Prince Rupert folk are getting almost reconciled to the additional routine of shovelling snow off their walks two or three times a day. Some were beginning to wonder today what they were going to do when they had built up the great mounds alongside the walks too high to pile more snow on. Others were thinking if it would not be a good idea, after they had finished the walks, to move up to the roof in case that might cave in with the excess weight of the "beautiful." And almost everybody is beginning to conjure up the picture of just how bad it is going to be when the real thaw comes. It is going to be bad enough, everybody agrees.

There was another six or eight inches on the ground this morning after a steady fall during the night. It is now of the heavy, wet variety—the kind that caves in old roofs, canvas car tops and is hard to shovel. It had almost reached the rain stage. With due apology to the skiing enthusiasts, some of whom at least do not seem to mind two or three tough hours of trail-breaking up Mount Oldfield in order to gambol in nature's white bounty, the consensus of opinion seems to be now that this snow is getting just a little too thick and the sooner it ends the better.

The almost continuous snowfall of the past week probably constitutes a record for such a short period in Prince Rupert's meteorological history and, in spite of a milder turn this morning, there was no definite promise that it was ended.

Dean Clement Urges Horticultural Society to Go Forward to Even Better Things

Soil and Cultivation Philosophizes in Regard to Latent Power of a Seed and Interest in Cross-Fertilization

Yesterday afternoon, nearly forty people sat down to a dinner given under the auspices of the Prince Rupert Horticultural Society to hear Dean F. M. Clement of the University of British Columbia give a most interesting address on the philosophy of gardening. President Theo Collart presided at the head table and with him, besides the speaker, were City Commissioner W. J. Alder, Mrs. C. J. Norrington, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Winslow and Jack Frew. The speaker complimented the society on the large and representative group he saw before him. He had expected to meet only about a dozen or so at the luncheon and here he found a large gathering assembled at very short notice. Dean Clement told interesting stories of his life at the Macdonald Agricultural College where they worked half a day, several times a week, at practical work. He also told of an American tourist visiting England and inquiring at Cambridge University from one of the gardeners how they managed to get such beautiful lawns. The reply was: "Well, you see, we roll it and rolls it and mows it and fertilizes it for hundreds of years and that's how we get it like that."

Africa Backs Up Canada

"South Africa, like Canada, doesn't want any more titles," says Bruce Hutchinson in the Victoria Times. "When one of its most distinguished citizens accepted a title a few days ago there was quite a row, and in England, Mr. Baldwin had to explain that the more democratic a country is the more titles there are, a charming paradox which, like most paradoxes, has a false glitter and is quite untrue.

"The London papers, according to cabled extracts from them, explain that a title is simply a recognition of service to the state, a kind of spiritual reward which is given in lieu of something material, like money. If this were so, Canada would not object to them. Unfortunately, in this country, titles used not to have these respectable implications. The ones recently awarded were above reproach, but before that they were too often given to large campaign fund contributors and malefactors of great wealth.

"But the real objection to them here is that they are not democratic, they are not simple awards of merit, but they attempt to set up a separate class, a kind of parvenu aristocracy in the country. For you cannot divorce titles in a British country from the original purpose and the original privilege of titles. They belonged to nobility, they commanded certain rights and preferred treatment, denied to the ordinary man. The owner of the title was not a man who had done something fine for the state, as Sir Frederick Banting did in Canada, but very often was a man who had done a lot of harm to the state. Still, through the accident of birth, was entitled to receive something other people couldn't have.

"That is why Canadians don't want to build up a titled nobility in this country under any name or excuse. What we need is some institution of our own which would award medals or orders to men of distinguished public service, to men like Banting, and these would command general respect and admiration because they would recognize the merit of the wearer without setting him apart from his fellows. He would be still just a Canadian citizen, with no special rights, but appreciated by his country.

"We do not recognize and value public service of any kind highly enough in this country, but the last way to recognize it is through titles, of which the average man is secretly contemptuous. When a Canadian takes a title nowadays he doesn't rise in the public estimate. He falls. And the best illustration of the present value of titles is the fact that the Prime Minister of England who, though the most distinguished Englishman of his time, is still plain Mr. Baldwin."

given for a patrol to be sent to see that no one injured the tiny plant. The order had never been countermanded and a sentinel was still guarding the spot. The great monarch had in spite of all her cares of state thought so much of the tiny flower as to send a soldier to protect it.

Wonder of a Seed

The speaker called attention to the wonder of a seed or bulb. No one was able to measure the natural forces locked up in a tiny seed. All a gardener needed to do was to provide the proper conditions for growth and the seed brought forth a flower. He said he had always been interested in the experiments at the university where they raised plants from seed in clean sand with a synthetic mixture chemically necessary.

Soil analysis could be carried out by pressing from a small portion of soil the moisture which it absorbed, for in it would be found to a large extent the chemical constituents of the soil. Soil was also examined for bacteria. In this country there were thousands of acres which would produce nothing because of the lack of the bacteria necessary to growth. Some gardens were over-fertilized and this was almost as bad as under-fertilization. He mentioned these things to show that the gardener had a great deal to study and that the brotherhood of gardeners was no mean occupation. There was a continuous challenge of the intellect when dealing with the forces of nature.

Dean Clement compared the work of the gardener to the weaver of Oriental colors in which the colors were artistically and wonderfully blended. He told of a little work he had done in cross-fertilization when he had produced two new tulips, the "Vancouver" and the "Dean Clement." It had taken eight years to bring the first generation and sixteen or seventeen years to bring the new flowers to perfection. These flowers were of no particular importance but he told of it to show that the challenge to produce a new flower for posterity was a continuous problem. Flowers were used as a tribute to the departed at death, a tribute of loveliness and joy at a wedding.

The visitor then referred to the value of a horticultural society in a community. He told a story of an Indian woman who had owned a piece of land in the oil country in the south and who had, as a result, become rich. She bought a fine car, fine clothes and everything that she could think of that seemed to imitate her white neighbors. They found her sitting in her finery among some old sacks at the confines of the city. Dressing her up had not changed her nature. Each individual was just like a long line of lights in a straight city street. Each light did its part in the general effect.

Civilized Wheat

The wild wheat of Palestine was of little use for producing flour but it was able to exist under difficult conditions. The cultivated wheat, far more useful and suitable for producing flour, was unable to exist except under cultivation. In other words modern wheat was civilized. In the Rothenstead Experimental Station which Dean Clement visited in England he was shown a field of wheat which had grown a crop every year for the past 100 years by means of modern cultivation. While the crop last year was not large, it was higher than the average for all Canada for that season. In another plot which had not been reseeded for three years but had been allowed to go wild, only one stool of wheat was left. It was cultivated wheat and was unable to survive except under favorable conditions.

Marquis wheat, which had made wheat growing possible in the colder parts of Canada, was simply a variety in which the natural processes were speeded up.

In conclusion the speaker spoke again of the value of such a society as the one he was addressing and urged it to go forward to even better work in the future than it had done in the past.

3. Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Just Gargle This Way with "ASPIRIN"

Here is the most amazing way to ease the pains of rawness of sore throat resulting from a cold we know you have ever tried. Crush and dissolve three "ASPIRIN" tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back. This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases almost instantly; rawness is relieved. Countless thousands now use this way to ease sore throat. Your doctor, we are sure, will approve it. And you will say it is marvelous.

● "Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trade-mark of the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

Presbytery Takes No Action Regard To Church Project

As it was a projected or self-supporting undertaking, Prince Rupert Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, at its sessions here this week, decided to take no action in regard to the proposed community church here. It was entirely a local matter as long as it did not affect property of membership of the United Church, the Presbytery decided.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM.
Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Rough Week at Sea—Arduous Trips—One That of Mission Boat Udal—Alberni to Dry Dock

With heavy snows, fierce gales and mountainous seas, the past week has been one of the roughest for many a moon along the coast hereabouts and there have been no boats out, particularly smaller ones, without urgent reason to be abroad. Such vessels as were at sea received considerable buffeting and reports of arduous trips have been general. Fortunately, mishaps in this particular vicinity have been pretty well averted. The only serious casualty was the stranding and sinking of the Vancouver halibut boat Western Fisher at Stewart Anchorage in Grenville Channel on Tuesday evening as she was returning south after having delivered a cargo of fishing supplies for Edward Lipsett Ltd. here. While Capt. Robert Hobbs and his crew of two—G. Clarke and W. Hussey—had barely time to escape in a small boat as the vessel turned over and sank after striking a rock in the snowstorm, the Western Fisher, as it turned out, was not badly damaged except for the effects of the immersion. The Armour Salvage Co. was promptly on the job and the Algie arrived in port yesterday morning with the Western Fisher in tow. Such repairs as are necessary will be effected here.

The United Church mission boat Udal, which arrived in port on Wednesday morning of this week from Queen Charlotte City, bringing the missionary in charge, Rev. William Selder, in for the Prince Rupert Presbytery, is awaiting arrival of parts from Vancouver before leaving, probably next Tuesday morning on her return to the Islands. The Udal, on the way over from the Islands, had a harrowing trip and might be considered lucky to have got in safely. Leaving Queen Charlotte City at 6:20 Tuesday morning, the little vessel ran into a wild storm including heavy southeast and easterly gales, also running through dense snow for about half way across Hecate Straits. Outside of Porcher Island engine trouble developed and she broke down. For four or five hours, while repairs were being effected, the Udal drifted about, her anchor failing to hold. Mr. Selder and W. H. Fairbairn of Queen Charlotte City, the latter having come over as pilot, had their hands badly cut up and partly frost-bitten while working with the heavy anchor chain. It was necessary for Mr. Selder to enter the hospital here for attention to his hands but he is now out again. The trip of the Udal took almost twenty-four hours. In addition to Messrs. Selder and Fairbairn, Mrs. Selder, Miss Velma Fairbairn and Mrs. R. G. MacKenzie also came over on the Udal.

After having been tied up for a couple of weeks at the ocean dock following the arrival from Victoria, the new lighthouse tender Alberni moved up to the local dry dock this week. Considerable work is to be done on the Alberni before she goes into actual commission in her lighthouse work.

Dr. H. H. Caldwell, who has seen twenty years medical missionary work in India, has been assigned to the United Church mission boat Thomas Crosby which was in port this week with Rev. Peter Kelly of Ocean Falls on board for the sessions of Prince Rupert Presbytery.

Union steamer Venture, Capt. John Boden, arrived in port at 3 o'clock this morning from the south and sailed at 7 a.m. on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

On account of the heavy snowfall throughout the night, C. P. R. steamer Princess Adelaide, Capt. S. K. Gray, scheduled to sail at 10 o'clock last night, did not leave until 6 o'clock this morning for Vancouver and waypoints.

It is reported here that the Seattle salmon co-operative has discontinued selling its production through Ovenberg Co. of New York and that the executive and members have decided to immediately commence selling on the open market to the regular dealers.

KICKED TO DEATH BY HORSE

town was being absorbed into the larger cities. Social and educational standards were changing all around. There was the problem of the young man who worked every day with an automatic machine. What should he do with his leisure? The farmer had an advantage over the man employed in industry, Dean Clement felt. He was self-employed, was his own boss and set his own pace. There was also some variety in his work.

Educational Changes

The speaker referred to alterations which were being made in educational curricula in the endeavor to meet the changing conditions. Considerable progress had been made in the way of vocational education. A start was being made in training High School boys in lines with which they could make a living. As for university education, Dean Clement frankly admitted that there were many who failed to measure up academically but were successful in practical business lines and vice versa.

The idea of adult education was also discussed by Dean Clement. This was something in which he had taken a direct interest particularly in the rural field. He had found that mothers were still concerned, and rightly so, with such things as the children's teeth, tonsils and adenoids before they could think of adult education. The father was wondering about food, shelter, clothing, work and play. After all, these were all things with which the educational program should be concerned.

Dean Clement suggested the possibility of some of his listeners being able to give some promising boy or girl a start in life.

The speaker turned for a moment to the subject of propaganda. The abstract subtle idea was the thing to be on guard against in these times. There should be an effort to get at real facts.

Speaking of Canadian affairs Dean Clement did not believe there was any necessity for 1,200,000 people being on relief in the Dominion. The case, he did not think was hopeless. The boys and girls were the greatest asset of this country, if they could be guided in the right channels. The main problem was not one of production but of fairer, even distribution of the country's wealth.

In conclusion, Dean Clement expressed appreciation for many courtesies he had been extended in Prince Rupert. He mentioned particularly G. P. Lyons, chairman of the university extension committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Among those who spoke briefly in appreciation of Dean Clement's lectures were J. S. Wilson, City Commissioner, W. J. Alder, Dr. J. T. Mandy and Theo Collart, T. J. Williams, secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce president.

DEAN CLEMENT IS HEARD AT HIGH SCHOOL

"It Matters When You Were Born" was the subject of an interesting and instructive address given before students of Grades 11 and 12 and the Commercial Class of King Edward High School on Thursday afternoon by Dean F. M. Clement, head of the Department of Agriculture of the University of British Columbia. Dean Clement referred to the different conditions prevailing today than twenty-five years ago. A quarter of a century ago there were new areas to which educational graduates could go. Today it was necessary for them to make their living in their own communities. Higher educational standards were becoming more and more essential.

Dr. E. E. Lucas, the principal, with brief and appropriate remarks introduced Dean Clement to the students.

United Church Presbytery Not At All Satisfied With Handling Of Indian Affairs

Policies of the Department of Indian Affairs in handling its native charges came in for no small amount of criticism at the sessions of Prince Rupert Presbytery of the United Church of Canada here this week. It was the feeling of the Presbytery that the whole Department should be overhauled. One of the complaints was that the Indian Agents were given too much power, especially in the issuance of relief. As ninety-five percent of the church work in this Presbytery has to do with the native people, much time was given over to these matters. Complaints came from nearly every mission in regard to departmental policies which were considered inadequate, out-of-date and detrimental to the interests of the Indians.

Hospitalization of Indian patients was a matter which received a considerable amount of attention from the sessions of the Presbytery. One of the complaints was that the Indian Agent was practically senior in authority to the doctor in regard to giving of treatment or hospitalization to Indian patients. One resolution which was passed protested at the policy whereby Indian tuberculosis patients could not be admitted to hospital unless it was to relieve pain. Objection was also taken to the refusal of hospitalization for Indian confinement cases. Such policies were considered inhuman and unscientific from a medical standpoint.

The policy whereby no able-bodied destitute Indian could obtain relief, direct or by work, was condemned as being unfair and discriminatory. In cases of sickness, it was said, a family of five or six people received only $7 to $8 month while an aged destitute person was allowed only $4 a month for rations.

The inspector of Indian schools was criticized in that he sent no copies of his reports to the teachers, especially when they were adverse ones, these teachers having no option of appeal such as did the teachers of public schools. In the case of one teacher whose dismissal had been recommended by the inspector, a strong protest was sent to Ottawa and to the local member, Olof Hanson, the request being made that the provincial inspector, T. W. Hall, be asked to make an independent inspection of this particular school.

Franchise Urged
A recommendation of the General Council of the United Church that the franchise should be given to all Canadian-born, especially the Indians, was supported by the Presbytery.

Rev. Peter Kelly wanted to know what happened to $100,000 which was supposed to come to British Columbia annually for the Indians in place of annuities.

The Presbytery ordered letters of appreciation sent to Dr. H. C. Wrinch, for years medical missionary at Hazelton, to Capt. and Mrs. Archie Scott, who have been forced to retire on account of Capt. Scott's illness, and to Capt. William Oliver.

Rev. W. H. Pierce was congratulated on the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination as a minister. He was received as a student into the Toronto Conference in 1883.
