Premier Excels in Fighting Speech

Pattullo Puts Election Issues Before Home Town Audience; Poor Time to Change Horses

Importance of Returning Present Government to Office Is Stressed—Variety of Matters Dealt With By Prime Minister Before Big Meeting

"There never was a time in the history of the province when it was more important to return a government to office to carry on its work," declared Premier T. D. Pattullo in a fighting campaign address before a large home town audience in the Moose Hall Saturday night.

Points by Pattullo

Premier T. D. Pattullo

The Premier was in fine fighting mood. There was some heckling at times as the Prime Minister drove a rapid fire of decisive statements, evidently caring little where chips flew.

Mr. Pattullo spoke for just about two hours and many matters received his attention. He dealt at some length with the Conservative platform, pointed to the accomplishments of his own administration and, before closing, gave some particulars of the better terms which the government now had in hand.

At the outset, Mr. Pattullo referred briefly to the reasons for calling the general election at this time. It had been considered timely to hold the plebiscite on health insurance and the election at the same time.

ling Workmen's Compensation funds. This was without foundation in fact or substance and was totally misleading. These funds were kept separate and administered by the Workmen's Compensation Board which had millions of dollars invested, some of it in B. C. securities.

Mr. Pattullo mentioned the new local federal building. He (Pattullo) had agreed to give the federal government the site on which the building was to be erected.

The Premier then turned to a memorandum of requests that had been made by the Trades & Labor Council. One request was for a bill recognizing the right of collective bargaining.

Points by Pattullo

Never was there a time in the history of the province when it was more important to return a government to office to carry on its work.

We have important business half way through. Is it reasonable to make a change now?

Plans for the federal building in Prince Rupert are being drafted and within two months tenders will be called.

Positive instructions have been given to proceed with the ore sampling plant in Prince Rupert at once.

I want to know all the implications before making a decision in regard to collective bargaining. If it means a One Big Union in control of a handful of men, I am opposed to it.

The record of the Liberal governments over a period of years shows that we have not only talked but acted for the benefit of the average man.

Roads, bridges, schools and hospitals cannot be provided without increasing the public debt.

The Liberal government proposes further relief to the municipalities on a sound basis involving the lessening of the tax burden on land.

The public works department of this province was never better conducted than it is today. There is less partizanship than there ever was before.

All reports have been given to the public in full. We have nothing to hide; nothing to apologize for (in regard to Hedley Amalgamated).

Collection marketing, effected by this government, has resulted in improved prices for halibut.

Our education curriculum is unexcelled on this continent and the basis of taxation is more equitable.

You should vote "yes" on the health insurance plebiscite. If you do not, it cannot be gone ahead with.

No one intends to extend the franchise to the Orientals with the possible exception of the C. C. F. and they won't be given the chance to.

The Liberal party is the only organization efficiently equipped to serve governmentally at the present time. It has a record of achievement, definite and progressive plans for the future and knowledge, experience and determination to put these plans into effect.

British Columbia is now selling its bonds at the best price in the history of the province.

This government should be returned on its record alone.

The government is determined to be of assistance to the Prince Rupert pulp mill undertaking.

INTERVIEW PATTULLO

Trades and Labor Council Delegation in Session With Premier

To place before him several matters concerning the workers in general, and Prince Rupert in particular, a delegation from the Prince Rupert Trades and Labor Council consisting of T. B. Black, T. Elliott, J. J. Gillis, and G. Anderson interviewed Premier Pattullo on Saturday afternoon and the following requests were taken up:

A Trades Union Bill giving the workers the right to collective bargaining and the right to join a trades union of their own choice.

A Better Housing Act. More relief allowance for the unemployed and more coverage be given the married unemployed.

A basic minimum rate for common labor of 50c per hour.

Enforcement of the fire department's Hours of Work Act, giving firemen two full days off in each week instead of having to work 12 hours per day week in and week out.

The last mentioned request was adjusted immediately and other requests will receive consideration.

Trades and Labor Council Session

Extra Gang Pay, Health Insurance and Minimum Wages In Construction Industry Discussed

Matters of considerable importance were taken up at the last regular meeting of the Prince Rupert Trades & Labor Council.

Correspondence was received from the general secretary with respect to the extra gangs working on the railways for the sum of 25c per hour. The communication was to the effect that these men do not come under the maintenance of way agreement and are not subject to the 25c rate of pay which applies to maintenance of way men for the first six months.

Regarding the Health Insurance Act, the council again took the stand that this Act should be given all support and instructs its membership to vote "yes" in the plebiscite.

A communication from the Industrial Relations Board regarding a proposed minimum wage in the construction industry was not favorably received.

The council took the stand that it could do better through individual bargaining than at the rate set by the board and decided to notify the board accordingly.

Government Is Making Grant To Local Library

Realizing the present condition of the books belonging to the public library of Prince Rupert, the provincial librarian has notified the Prince Rupert Library Board that a grant has been made available to the public library by the government for the purchase of books in the non-fictional sections of the library.

Donations have been received towards the book fund campaign from the Hon. T. D. Pattullo and Olof Hanson, M. P.

Imperial Conference at London Has Been Adjourned Over Week-End

LONDON, May 17: (CP)—"It will be our task," said Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, in opening the first plenary session of the Imperial conference here, "to examine causes of the present international unrest, exchange views upon them and consider whether there is any contribution which we, co-operating together, can make to their diminution or removal."

Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King of Canada said it should be the aim of the rest of the Empire to so order their relations and co-ordinate their policies that they, in turn, might contribute to a peaceful ordering of international relations.

The work of the conference was suspended over the week-end until Tuesday when committees will probably begin their activities.

The conference will make no attempt to enunciate an Imperial defence scheme or set a general Imperial foreign policy.

He had on board P. Walker, deputy provincial secretary, whom he had taken to Atlin, Telegraph Creek and McDames Creek in connection with provincial election business. On leaving here today for Vancouver, the plane also had on board Mrs. A. R. Nichols of Prince Rupert who will pay a brief visit with her sister, Mrs. A. M. Manson, in Vancouver. It is expected to reach Vancouver early this evening with a possible stop at Alert Bay for refuelling.

BELLICINI ACQUITTED

Found Not Guilty by Jury of Having Burned Down Building At Houston Eight Years Ago

Defence Evidence Testimony of Dead Man, Implying Guilt of Accused, Is Discredited

After deliberating 22 minutes, the jury at the session of the Supreme Court Assizes in the case of E. G. Bellicini of Houston, charged with arson in connection with the burning of a partially completed hotel building at Houston in August 1929, returned a verdict of acquittal. After hearing the summing up of His Lordship and the arguments of counsel—T. W. Brown, crown prosecutor, and H. H. Griffin, for the defence—the jury retired at 4:30, returning shortly before five with its verdict. Thereupon, Bellicini was ordered released from custody. This ended the Assize Court session here on Saturday afternoon.

During the trial carpenters and builders who had been engaged in the construction of the building also testified, these including H. Mohnquist, now of Quesnel; Taylor Jensen of Burns Lake; Charles Lillia, Hans Peterson and A. St. Louis. According to these witnesses, the building was apparently run up along rather cheap lines and considerable economy was exercised at Bellicini's instructions. In the course of this evidence, the judge reminded crown counsel that the charge against Bellicini was not one of putting up a cheap building but that he had burned or caused the building to be burned down. "There is not a shadow of proof yet," observed His Lordship, "that accused was putting the building up in order to burn it down."

Harvey Davies told of seeing the hotel at Houston being burned down in 1929. Mr. Davies, daughter, Mrs. McDonald, told of seeing the hotel before it was burned. She said the windows were all in when the work of construction stopped but, just before the fire, five or six windows in the upper storey had been taken out. She noticed this when riding past on horseback.

Construction Described H. Mohnquist of Quesnel, told of being employed by Bellicini on the construction of the hotel. Asked in regard to construction he said that a rain came soon after the roof was put on and it leaked. The windows were all in. He worked on Bellicini's house after the hotel work was stopped and he had packed some boards from the hotel to the house. At that time he did not speak English. It was his first job in this country.

Cross-examined by Mr. Griffin witness qualified the evidence given at the preliminary hearing in Smithers.

Taylor Jensen, a carpenter of Burns Lake with 35 years' experience at the trade, said he started working on Bellicini's building in May 1929. He worked on the windows. Four of the rooms upstairs were finished when he was laid off. He was told there was no more money and the work could not go on. He took his orders from Bellicini.

Charles Lillia, carpenter, told of building the shack in which they lived. He then drew sketch-plans of a hotel 50 by 80 feet. Materials were bought for the house and afterwards used in the hotel. Bellicini was in charge of construction. He gave the instructions to plaster over two-foot centres. No chimneys were built but the fireplace was built to the ceiling.

Election Danger

While it is expected that Hon. T. D. Pattullo will be re-elected member for Prince Rupert and that W. J. Asselstine, E. T. Kenney and Mark Connelly will again be members respectively for Atlin, Skeena and Omineca, there is danger that the respective committees supporting these candidates may be too sure of their ground and get a surprise.

At the meeting Saturday night Mr. Pattullo emphasized the need of support in order that he and his associates may carry on the campaign commenced in the east to secure just treatment from the Dominion. Already over two million dollars has been secured as a result of representations made by the delegations that have gone east. These men are thoroughly familiar with the situation and it would be fatal to the cause of the province to change leaders at this time.

The Pattullo government has rehabilitated the finances of the province and by the end of another term will have placed them on a sound footing and relieved the municipalities of the burden they are now carrying. The work is proceeding well and any setback would be contrary to the best interests of British Columbia.

The Local Situation

In regard to the local situation it may be pointed out that Prince Rupert is making strenuous efforts to secure a pulp mill. In the past it is said that one objection to expending so much money here is the labor situation. There have been signs of unrest in the city and neighborhood which does not prove inviting to those who would put millions into a big industry. Should Prince Rupert now elect a member pledged to the policy of taking over the big industries, it is easy to see what effect this might have on the promotion of a big industry. It would be safer and better for them to invest their money in Quebec than in Prince Rupert.

Any new industry such as a pulp mill would look to the provincial government for support in regard to securing timber limits for the supply of the raw material. If the Premier of the province should be defeated, there would be no assurance that they would receive the needed co-operation. His defeat just now would be a bad slap at the promotion work that is now going on.

It may be mentioned in this regard that this is the first time the Premier has come out as backing the efforts being made to erect a mill here. It is the first time he has mentioned the possibility of government support at a campaign meeting. He has now associated himself with the project and to defeat him might delay if not overthrow the whole project.

would only mean autocracy and dictatorship.

Charlie Chapman (from the gallery): "A few men are dictating now."

Mr. Pattullo: "If it comes to the time where it is necessary to have a dictator, I want to be the dictator."

The Premier said that he had no objection to Socialistic principles. Indeed, he had advocated them himself. As long as it was not subversive or controversial of constitutional government, expression of socialism would not be objected to by him. There might come a time when it would be necessary for the government to regulate private and public activities. He would never, however, favor the destruction of personal initiative. As for the request for collective bargaining, he wanted to know all the implications before he made a decision. Also he could not personally commit his government without consultation.

"Surely the record of Liberal governments over a period of twenty years shows that we have not only talked but also acted for the benefit of the average man," declared the Premier.

Conservative Platform

The Premier then turned his attention to the Conservative platform. As for Mr. Evelt, Mr. Pattullo said that he respected him very much. He knew he was highly and deservedly esteemed.

Talk of not increasing the public debt was only "bunkum." In twenty years the population of this province had doubled. "Do you think that it was not necessary to increase the public debt in order to provide roads, bridges, schools, hospitals and such services? Do you think everything can be paid out of current revenue?" Governments were in the same position as an individual who wished to build a house. It was business to arrange finances to build the house. If the Conservatives were sincere it meant that they were going to cut out all public works.

The Conservatives talked about cutting interest rates. But did they know what consols were? How much did they expect to get for perpetual bonds? It was perfect nonsense. Mr. Pattullo mentioned how the Conservative member for Victoria, Mr. Anscomb, shuddered at the mere mention of reducing interest.

Aid to municipalities was a laudable and practicable proposal. The last Liberal government had restored $1,600,000 per year to municipalities which, however, still received $800,000 per year less than they did in 1928. The Liberal government proposed further relief to the municipalities in the very near future on a sound basis involving the lessening of the tax burden on land.

True the Liberal platform had included a highway commission plank but a program of joint public works had since been entered into with the Dominion. How could a provincial highway commission function under such circumstances? It would mean responsibility for the province without control. Further, such a commission could not be appointed until road building was placed on a permanent basis.

"Nevertheless," declared Mr. Pattullo, "the public works department of this province was never better conducted than it is today. There is less partisanship than there ever was before. Indeed, I am constantly receiving protests from members of the Liberal party complaining about not getting patronage."

Freedom From Politics

His government had shown its freedom from politics, Mr. Pattullo maintained. Specially trained men had been secured for special work without respect to politics.

Speaking of social services, the Premier mentioned work along preventative as well as curative lines. Mothers' pensions were freer from red tape and more generous than anywhere else. The Liberal government of British Columbia had been the first to pay old age pensions.

The only reason that a public utilities commission had not been appointed was that it would have cost $1,000,000 to secure the necessary information. With other more pressing requirements, it was simply felt that this expenditure might well be deferred. Utility rates were, however, too high and would have to be and would be reviewed.

In regard to restoring confidence in the mining industry and protecting the public from unscrupulous investors, Mr. Pattullo, referred to the Hedley Amalgamated affair. "The report of Mr. Fraser has been given to the public in full. The Richmond report was given to the press to be published in full. The Stewart report was given in full. The report of the deputy minister, Dr. Walker, was given in full. Charges have been laid against three officials. We have nothing to hide and we have nothing to apologize for."

"We are as determined as anyone to restore confidence, if it has been impaired, in the mining industry," asserted the Premier who announced the intention to separate the Securities Act administration from the mines department which was too busy to handle it.

Regarding forest protection, the Premier declared that the government was stimulating natural regeneration and proposed to continue to do so. In this regard, operators on crown granted land were co-operating with the forest service.

In the matter of marketing, Mr. Pattullo referred to the collective marketing of halibut plan now in operation at Prince Rupert. This had been effected by the Liberal government. It had resulted in improved prices for halibut here whereas the prices in the markets of the east had been no higher.

Settling of Lands

The Conservative platform talked about discouraging of settlement of remote lands without roads and schools. The policy of the McBride government of alienating land and natural resources had been to a large extent responsible for isolated settlement in this province.

As for education, Mr. Pattullo said: "Our curriculum admittedly is unexcelled on this continent and we have a more equitable basis of school taxation than anywhere else."

Turning to health insurance, Mr. Pattullo told how it had been a plank in the Liberal platform. There had been so much opposition, however, after the plan had been adopted that he (Pattullo) had ordered that its being put into effect be deferred. Then it had been decided to submit it to the people. If the Act had been put into operation, hundreds of women in the province would have already received maternity benefits and surgical benefits would also have been paid. The intention of the government had been to go ahead surely and progressively. "I think," said Mr. Pattullo, "you should vote 'yes' in the plebiscite. I shall do so myself. If you don't we cannot go ahead with it, of course."

The Premier saw no necessity for a plank in the Conservative platform opposing granting the vote to Orientals. No one intended to give them the franchise unless possibly it was the C. C. F. and they would never be given the chance to. Why flaunt this kind of thing in front of the Orientals?

"I firmly believe," declared Mr. Pattullo, "that the Liberal party, for the time being at least, is the only equipped and efficient political organization through which our people can be served governmentally at the present time. We have a record of achievement. We have definite progressive plans for the future. We have the knowledge, experience and determination to put these plans into effect."

"As for myself," asserted the Premier, "I have been in public life for forty years. I should know something about it and, without, I hope, appearing to be unduly egotistic, I think I do."

For Common People

"From 1916 on the whole trend of Liberal governmental activity has been to place legislation on the statute books for the benefit of the common people."

Mr. Chapman again: "Only on paper."

Mr. Pattullo: "Not only on paper, my friend, but in actuality. In the east, for instance, we are blamed with being far too radical. But the east itself is beginning to follow suit."

Turning his attention to the province's financial situation, Mr. Pattullo recalled how the Liberals had found the province in 1933 at zero. Since then the credit and affairs of the province had been brought to a point where British Columbia was now selling its bonds at the best price in the history of the province. British Columbia had demanded from financial interests the same rate as Ontario and Quebec enjoyed and had got it.

"We have put this province in a sound financial position," declared the Premier, "We have improved the position of the municipalities. We have helped industries to establish. We have got new business for the province. We have increased employment. I think you should return this government on its record alone."

Mr. Pattullo mentioned the local pulp mill project and there were titters.

"I would suggest that you should not scoff and laugh at honest attempts being made to establish industries. Do not forget that some one is spending money even to promote the undertaking here. There is no more favorable location than Prince Rupert for a pulp mill. Present negotiations for such an industry here are responsibly sponsored. We are determined to be of assistance if possible. I might tell you that a stop order has already been placed on Naas River timber in order to ensure a supply if the industry here gets going."

"How about the Yukon?" Mr. Pattullo was asked.

"Yes, and I want to tell you about that," answered the Premier. "This government has visions of greater and greater development. Those who want to stick in the mud can do so but I, for one, refuse to do so. Possibly you know that great developments are anticipated, indeed have started, in Alaska. That development is going to be reflected in Northern British Columbia and the Yukon. Last year the Yukon was at its lowest ebb. Already new expansion is starting this year." Joining up of British Columbia and the Yukon, the Premier believed, would be of mutual benefit. However, the rights of everybody would be considered. The proposal would have to be endorsed both in Victoria and at Ottawa. The Premier did not think that the whole future of the country should be decided by a few people now resident, many of them but temporarily, in the Yukon.

"And let me tell you this Yukon question is no election issue," said the Premier. "It so happened that the agreement was arranged after the election was announced. I pursued the honest course and told the people."

Better Terms

Mr. Pattullo then proceeded to the subject of better terms for British Columbia under the B. N. A. Act. As matters stood at present, the situation was all to the benefit of the federal government. Grants made by Ottawa were altogether inadequate to take care of the things intended. Great sums were taken from this province and comparatively little came back in return. Provincial taxation fields had been entered by Ottawa. The Liberal government had so impressed Mr. Bennett that his government had increased the grants by $750,000 a year, making it almost double of what it was before. Recognition of the claims having been achieved, Premier King had now promised a royal commission to go into the whole matter, studying the relationship with a view to bringing about a realignment of the financial position.

"We have opened negotiations," said the Premier, "they know us and have confidence in us. We have this important business half way through. Would it appear reasonable to make a change now? Do you think those who might succeed would be able to carry on effectively? Never, it appears to me, has there been a time when it is more important to return your government to office."

Mr. Pattullo addressed a few words to the people of the small communities in the vicinity of Prince Rupert and on the Queen Charlotte Islands. They had not been forgotten, he thought. No part of British Columbia had been better served. In voting he urged the people of the district to exercise sound judgment.

the Premier to the Liberal party here for renominating him as well as to the people generally who had elected him. His sympathies now, as they had always been, were with the pioneers.

House Representation

Speaking of House representation, Mr. Pattullo said that the Liberal plan was to consider population, community of interest and topography of the country. He thought the present basis fair and equitable.

If re-elected on June 1, Mr. Pattullo mentioned that he would be the Dean of the Legislature following the withdrawal of Mr. Pooley. He had never aspired to be Prime Minister.

"I believe the government will be returned by a large majority" concluded Mr. Pattullo. "I conscientiously believe we are about to have a new era of rising development and increased prosperity. I urge you to see that you are so represented that this province can go ahead and prosper. We are going to put the province in an impregnable position and we intend to maintain it there."

The meeting ended with Mr. Marshall endeavoring to make a speech amid cries of "Sit down."

Charles P. Balagno presided at the piano to accompany "O Canada" at the start and "God Save the King" at the end.

BORDEN IS VICTORIOUS

Defeated Booth School by Score Of 3 to Nil Saturday

In the regular Junior Football League game on Saturday afternoon, Borden Street School defeated Booth Memorial School by a score of three goals to nil.

The game was well contested with both schools playing a good open game with nice combination. Borden Street was the more aggressive and, although playing against hill and a strong wind, scored two goals in the first half. A clever run by Wong and a hard shot from Alan Smith obtained Borden's first goal. Soon afterwards Smith worked his way through the Booth defence and scored his second goal. Franks had a good chance for Booth but Bird saved at the expense of a corner.

In the second half with the wind in its favor Borden pressed and Bill scored with a nice shot after Zbura had saved several hard drives. Booth now took the offensive and Cameron shot hard from close in. Mah had to save some difficult shots, including a penalty taken by Cameron.

Teams:
Borden Street School—Mah; McLeod, Bird; G. Smith, Robertson, Fong; Hodgkinson, Long, A. Smith, Bill, Wong.

Booth Memorial School—Zbura; Keyes, Gomez; Watt, Sunberg, McCrimmon; Anderson, Baker, Cameron, Hogan, Franks.

Referee was Andy Horne.

Linesmen were Billy Brown and Ken Schubert.

tigation following the fire. Cement steps had been found to crumble when stood upon. Accused had said that the building cost him $17,000 and that he still owed $4000. He had justified the outlay on a hotel building in view of ore deposits and timber limits in the vicinity. In arriving at the cost of the building, accused had computed $6 a day wages for himself and $2.50 per day for his wife with board. Cross-examined, Mr. Walker said that he would bring prosecution if the grounds seemed to warrant it.

Sergeant Andrew Fairbairn, provincial police, told of visiting the building during construction. Cement steps had broken down under his weight. The day after the fire he started getting a report under the Fire-Marshal's Act. He had no intention of prosecuting at that time. Accused had told him that the building had cost $18,000 and there was insurance of $15,000.

At 5 p.m. Friday the trial adjourned until 9:30 Saturday morning.

Alleged Plans

The evidence of Salice on Saturday gave details of the alleged plans for the fire, showing how candles without any bottom were to be lighted in two different places.

These were surrounded by shavings and loose lumber and coal oil was to be scattered around just before the lighting. In the meantime Belicini was to leave town so that he would not be under suspicion. This happened eight years ago but, recently, Salice had confessed to the crime, had been convicted and sentenced to a year in jail. His confession implicated the accused.

The setting of the fire was, according to the evidence, carried out according to plans and the fire occurred, the hotel being razed to the ground. Meeting with Belicini and his wife afterwards, both admitted Salice had done a good job but the excuse accused gave for not carrying out his part of the agreement later was that he had not collected all the insurance expected.

The witness, Salice, also told of Belicini admitting that he previously burned down his shack and collected $750 and burned down his house and collected $4,000. This money was used in building the hotel. Witness, however, was "not in on" these other fires.

Years after the setting of the fire, according to Salice's evidence, his conscience had troubled him and he confessed to the police. He denied that he was jealous of Belicini but stated that they were friends all the time. While he had been gassed overseas and had been wounded in the head and his health was poor, his mind was quite clear. He had set the fire because he had been urged to do so by Belicini and because he did not want the mortgage on his farm to be foreclosed.

Got $10,000 Insurance

Colonel R. L. Gale, at the opening of the Saturday morning session, gave evidence of having written two policies of insurance on the hotel. He saw the building which he considered might be worth twelve thousand dollars. The sum of $15,000 had been applied for. Later he turned over to Belicini a check for $10,000 which was paid into an account at the Royal Bank. He understood that Belicini could not get insurance elsewhere. He had not solicited the business but it had been brought to him. He did not think $15,000 on the building would be over-insurance.

L. H. Kenney identified documents which Belicini had signed.

Miss Gudrun Welle, stenographer, swore to having taken down the evidence and made a number of copies of the transcript for the preliminary trial.

Constable C. F. Oland swore to having heard the evidence of Salice given at the preliminary trial. He also produced a key which Salice had given him.

The last witness for the crown was Andrew Thompson, land registrar in Prince Rupert, through whom was entered a copy of the mortgage between Belicini and Salice on the latter's farm and papers in regard to land owned by Belicini at Houston.

Defence Evidence

When the trial resumed Saturday afternoon H. H. Griffin summarized the evidence on behalf of the defence, discrediting the evidence of the rival hotel-keeper and his daughter and defending the accused in the matter of possible building defects, reminding the jury that his client was not on trial for breaking building regulations. Referring to the evidence of Salice, he suggested that, as he had been injured during the war and was proven to have had a grudge against Belicini, his evidence was not reliable. At least part of the evidence had been combated by Mrs. Belicini. The Delco plant which had been placed in the building had not been removed, indicating that the fire had not been deliberately planned.

T. W. Brown, for the crown, read the agreement which had been made by accused to sell the property for more than the insurance money, intimating that the agreement was such that it had no effect on the case.

Mr. Brown said the crown claimed that the erection, insuring and burning were all part of a scheme to defraud and were one transaction. He drew attention to the rate of interest charged Salice, showing that, although a considerable sum had been paid on it, the total amount was not much reduced. He urged that, while the crown did not wish to secure convictions, they wished to have the guilty punished.

His Lordship explained the law in the case, pointing out that, if there was no corroboration, it was a very serious matter to convict. However, it was possible to do so. He analyzed different phases of the evidence and suggested that the act of the accused in giving Salice a new agreement for a considerably reduced sum and at half the former amount of interest might possibly be looked upon as corroboration. While the pay for committing the crime was to be the cancelling of the mortgage, the reduction of the amount might have been looked upon as pay in view of the fact that the accused had told Salice that he had not collected all the insurance money. This document seemed to have been signed by the accused. There was danger in using the alleged flimsy construction of the building as corroborative evidence implying guilt.

Robert C. Gosse, well known coast canneryman, came north from Vancouver to Bella Bella on the Catala at the end of the week.

Bernice Palmer says . . .

Hollywood hair stylists predict an epidemic of small mustaches. So many male stars (naturally) have worn them in period pictures lately and, after all the effort of raising them, have refused to give up their masculine adornment, that others, taking courage, are following suit. Clark Gable, Jack Oakie (hasn't he got fat lately?) William Powell, Dick Powell and Michael Whalen are among the well-known mustache addicts, and Fred Fredericks, movie hair stylist, personally applauds the trend. "A mustache, properly used, (note 'properly used' what does he mean by that?) is an effective thing. You can hold a man's face with it bring out his good features and disguise those not so good. Perhaps you can also try his temper sorely during the incubation period too!

If they want their mustaches it is alright by me, my own son is still too young to cause me any worry on that point, only I hope they will stop with the eyebrow variety and not be tempted to greater lengths. Last winter, when shopping in Oakland, we met a member of the House of David on the street. These men wear their hair and beards long. Much to my embarrassment, my young daughter asked "Mother is he God or only Santa Claus?"

ENTERTAIN TEACHERS

KITZEGUKLA, May 17: — On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wesley entertained the visiting teachers, Mr. Weir, Mr. Gilmour and Mr. Taylor of Prince George at luncheon. Other guests were W. D. Milton and Rev. B. Black. A very delicious luncheon was served.

We Must Not Lose HART

UNEQUALLED in all Canada is the record of achievement established by the Honourable John Hart, as Minister of Finance for British Columbia.

Assuming office first under the late Premier Brewster, Mr. Hart found the finances of the province in a deplorable condition. Bank credit was gone and British Columbia was unable to meet its issued cheques.

During his tenure of office, Mr. Hart stabilized the credit of the province and left the finances in excellent condition.

Again taking the Ministry of Finance under the Honourable T. D. Pattullo's leadership, Mr. Hart found the Tolmie administration had not only completely destroyed the financial credit of the province but had actually issued cheques to THE AMOUNT OF $1,009,509 WITHOUT FUNDS WITH WHICH TO COVER. The bank refused to extend credit for payment.

In financial circles it was freely predicted that British Columbia would have to repudiate its indebtedness or go into bankruptcy.

Today, less than four years since the Liberal Administration assumed office, BRITISH COLUMBIA'S CREDIT HAS BEEN RESTORED . . . bonds have been sold at the highest price and lowest interest rate in the history of the province . . . and, according to the statement of Mr. Morris W. Wilson, president of the Royal Bank of Canada, British Columbia now leads all Canada in the march to recovery.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER THESE FACTS AND THAT BRITISH COLUMBIA IS THE ONLY PLACE IN NORTH AMERICA WHERE TAXATION HAS NOT BEEN INCREASED, BUT ACTUALLY REDUCED TO THOSE LEAST ABLE TO PAY.

And, while other provinces still flounder in financial difficulties, or wallow in political experiment, British Columbia is steadily marching toward complete recovery.
