SEARCH IS SWITCHED

New Group of Islands Explored in Hunt For Amelia Earhart

Honolulu, July 13.—Rear Admiral Orin G. Murfin, commandant of the 14th Naval District, stated yesterday that the navy will switch its search to another group of islands for Amelia Earhart and navigator Fred Noonan lost in their plane in the south seas for eleven days.

Miss Earhart's course crossed this group of islands and they offer a possibility which cannot be overlooked, Admiral Murfin said, emphasizing that the navy would push the hunt to the utmost, regardless of opinions, beliefs and the fact that nothing has been heard definitely from the pair since they failed to make Howland Island July 2 on a hop from Lao, New Guinea, en route around the world.

Poor visibility yesterday held the searching scout planes down on the broad decks of the aircraft carrier Lexington. Squalls and low clouds prevented the carrying on of the systematic search during the day.

Doukhobor Women Protest Imprisonment Of Veregin

These women members of the Southern B.C. Doukhobor settlements are pictured attired in the costume they wear in their farm homes as they gathered outside the courthouse at Nelson to protest arrest and conviction of their leader, Peter Veregin, the younger, on a highway charge. Veregin was sentenced to a three-month jail term and groups of the peasant women, still loyal to him as their spiritual leader, demanded that the police either release him or place them in jail also. They were eventually persuaded to disperse. Founded in Russia over 200 years ago, about 20,000 Doukhobors settled in Canada some years ago under the leadership of Peter Veregin the elder. He was killed in a train explosion, his son, the present Doukhobor chief succeeding to the leadership. The women are shown during their verbal demonstration.

Buckley Valley Is Preparing To Harvest Finest Hay Crop In Years; Farms Doing Well

Haying has started in the Buckley Valley and the crop promises to be a third larger than last year and one of the best harvested for a long time. Warm dry weather is now required.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the spring and the very slow start which the hay and grains had, the growth during the past three weeks has been abnormal owing to the great amount of rain interspersed with bright warm sunshine and all the field crops have made rapid growth until the harvest is two weeks earlier than usual.

Much new farm machinery is going into action this year and it looks like a very prosperous year for the farmers of the district.

Owing to the hot dry weather early before the rains started the timothy which would have been out for seed in some places will not produce the quantity which might otherwise have been expected but, in some parts of the district, it will be a bumper crop and it is hoped that the price will be such as to put many dollars into the pockets of those who go in for this crop.

The stock throughout the district are rolling in fat and are in excellent condition. The farmers of the district can sympathize with their more unfortunate brothers in Alberta and Saskatchewan who have been suffering from excessive and protracted heat until their crops have been burnt up. There have been no pests of any kind in the Buckley Valley and the district never looked better than it does today.

With a stretch of fine warm weather for harvesting of the hay and grain crops which might now be reasonably expected, the barns will be filled to capacity on every farm.

GOOD TIME ON FLIGHT

Russians Conquer Perilous Polar Regions and May Be at Oakland by Dawn

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, July 13: (Canadian Press) — Mikhail Gromoff, Soviet long distance flier and his two companions, es-saying a flight from Moscow to San Francisco via the North Pole, had conquered the most baffling part of their perilous trip in the polar region last night and at 10:20 p.m. were reported 630 miles south of the North Pole and three hundred miles off Prince Patrick Island in Canada's Far North. They were running two hours ahead of the time made by Pilot Valeri Chalov and his companions less than three weeks ago in flying from Moscow to Vancouver, Washington.

Despite stormy skies, cyclonic winds and fogs in the polar regions, Gromoff reported everything going well as he got in touch with the United States Signal Corps radio station here. If the present rate of progress is maintained, the Russian air-ports should reach Oakland airport by dawn tomorrow less than sixty hours from Moscow and may go on to Los Angeles. This would shatter all previous long distance records by a wide margin. Gromoff is reported to be heading ultimately for Chicago.

Body of Terrace Man is Found In Slough of Skeena

E. T. Cole Disappeared Nineteen Days Ago; He Was a War Veteran Who Fought Overseas

The body of E. T. Cole, who had been missing for the past nine days, was found in Braun's Island slough. He was a veteran who fought overseas with the 48th Battalion, C.E.F. Third Pioneers and was a disability pensioner. He was 47 years of age and leaves a widow and five children.

The roar of cannon and the rattle of machine guns tells Peiping that fierce fighting between Chinese and Japanese troops along the Yungting River is continuing. Both Chinese and Japanese refugees are fleeing in large numbers, from the Peiping area towards Tientsin as the North China war spreads rapidly.

Large scale manoeuvres are believed immediately ahead. Chinese quarters here had previously said that a local armistice had halted fighting along the Yungting River. Japanese troops being said to have withdrawn from the river to a base at Fengtai. The truce appears to have been short-lived.

The sound of the guns in the fighting area, ten miles west of Peiping is distinctly audible there. Both Chinese and Japanese admitted fighting had been resumed after negotiations had broken down. Peiping itself is in the grip of a rigid martial law.

China is moving to meet the threat of large scale Japanese military operations in North China. A government spokesman said that Generalissimo Chiang Kia-Shek was moving fifty thousand troops northward to Peiping on the Peiping Hankow Railway.

Tokyo Watchful

TOKYO, July 13: (Canadian Press)—The Japanese War Office announced yesterday that the vanguard of the Chinese Army, advancing from the south, opened fire on Japanese positions west of Peiping Sunday night. The communique declared that the Chinese attack had brought a critical situation in Sino-Japanese relations to a breaking point.

Japanese reinforcements are being rushed to the Peiping-Hankow railway zone.

The Japanese cabinet was reported to have decided on definite military measures to solve the North China crisis unless the Chinese government accept all Japan's terms. One member of the cabinet said that fullest preparations were being made for an emergency.

A BIG SALARY

Charles Schwab was paid a million dollars a year by Andrew Carnegie because of his ability to deal with people, not because he knew more about the business than anyone else. Speaking of this himself he said: "I consider my ability to arouse enthusiasm among the men the greatest asset I possess, and the way to develop the best that is in a man is by appreciation and encouragement." That is from the book "How to Win Friends and Influence People," by Dale Carnegie.

While a great many people will think the payment to Schwab of a million dollars a year was part of a vicious system and that no man could possibly be worth that sum, Andrew Carnegie thought he was worth it or he would not have paid it.

A VALUABLE BOOK

Carnegie's book is a valuable one to businessmen, politicians and others who have to meet the public a good deal. It goes into considerable detail and gives numerous illustrations of his methods. Here is another illustration from Charles Schwab who, when passing through one of the steel mills noticed some of the employees smoking while just over their heads were notices which said "No Smoking." Schwab stepped over to the men, handed each a cigar and remarked "I'll appreciate it boys if you will smoke these on the outside." This proved much more effective than pointing to the sign and asking them if they could not read. It illustrates the indirect method of reproof.

Another illustration tells of John Wanamaker who, when passing through his store, noticed a woman waiting at the counter while the sales people were in a huddle laughing and talking to themselves, just as they might be in Prince Rupert. He waited on the woman himself and then handed the parcel to the others to wrap, left and did not say a word.

TWELVE RULES

Dale Carnegie, who, by the by, is no relation of the famous Andrew Carnegie, sets down twelve rules for trying to win people to your way of thinking and here they are very briefly:

- The only way to get the best of an argument is to avoid it.
- Show respect for the other man's opinions. Never tell a man he is wrong.
- If you are wrong, admit it quickly and emphatically. Begin in a friendly way.
- Get the other person saying "Yes, yes" immediately.
- Let the other man do a great deal of the talking.
- Let the other man feel that the idea is his.
- Try honestly to see things from the other person's point of view.
- Be sympathetic with the other person's ideas and desires.
- Appeal to the nobler motives.
- Dramatize your ideas.
- Throw down a challenge.

SMITHERS

Dr. Ferguson arrived in Smithers from McBride on last Thursday's train to take over the practice of the late Dr. F. V. Agnew at Smithers. He will take up residence in the house of Mrs. Dorothy Lewis as Mrs. Lewis intends leaving Smithers very soon for a lengthy visit in Idaho.

Mr. Simpson arrived in Smithers a few days ago to take up his duties as Chief Despatcher in the Canadian National Railways offices here. Mr. Simpson comes from Edmonton to fill the office left vacant by the promotion of Chief Despatcher J. H. Thompson to the office of the C.N.R. in Kamloops.

Jack McNeil has returned home after an extensive visit to Vancouver, and to Alberta. Mr. McNeil reports the crops just about burnt up in Alberta with little prospect of any returns to the farmers of that province or Saskatchewan for this year. The Bulkley Valley on his return looked like a farmer's paradise by comparison.

Bernice Palmer says . . .

Do you know, I think in some ways we are cheating our children of a great deal of future pleasure by letting the radio so completely fill our lives. It is so simple just to turn the dial and have ready-made music, be it classic or jazz, that we have lost the incentive to learn to play the piano or have our children learn. Once it was considered a requisite of a lady.

Every day for years and years I was forced to practice. At the time it was more painful than pleasant but now I am beginning to reap my reward. I never d'd become much of a sensation as a musician but I did learn to love and appreciate good music and how to listen intelligently to someone else play.

Watching young people who d'd not "suffer" this advantage, I now realize just how much I did learn in those years of practicing scales and struggling with Beethoven, Bach and other masters. My execution may not have been so good and it is years now since I have touched a piano. However, my repertoire was extensive and it is that that is now giving me so much pleasure. For me to listen to a symphony on the radio or to some great artist sing or play is just like meeting a character from a beloved book. The tunes are familiar and in retrospect the hard work and tears shed when toiling over a particularly difficult etude is forgotten in the pleasure of again recognizing an old friend.

I never did conquer the intricacies of "La Pappillon" but whenever I hear it played by some pianist on the radio, memories come back to me of my own mother sitting at the piano trying to show me just how to master the grace notes.

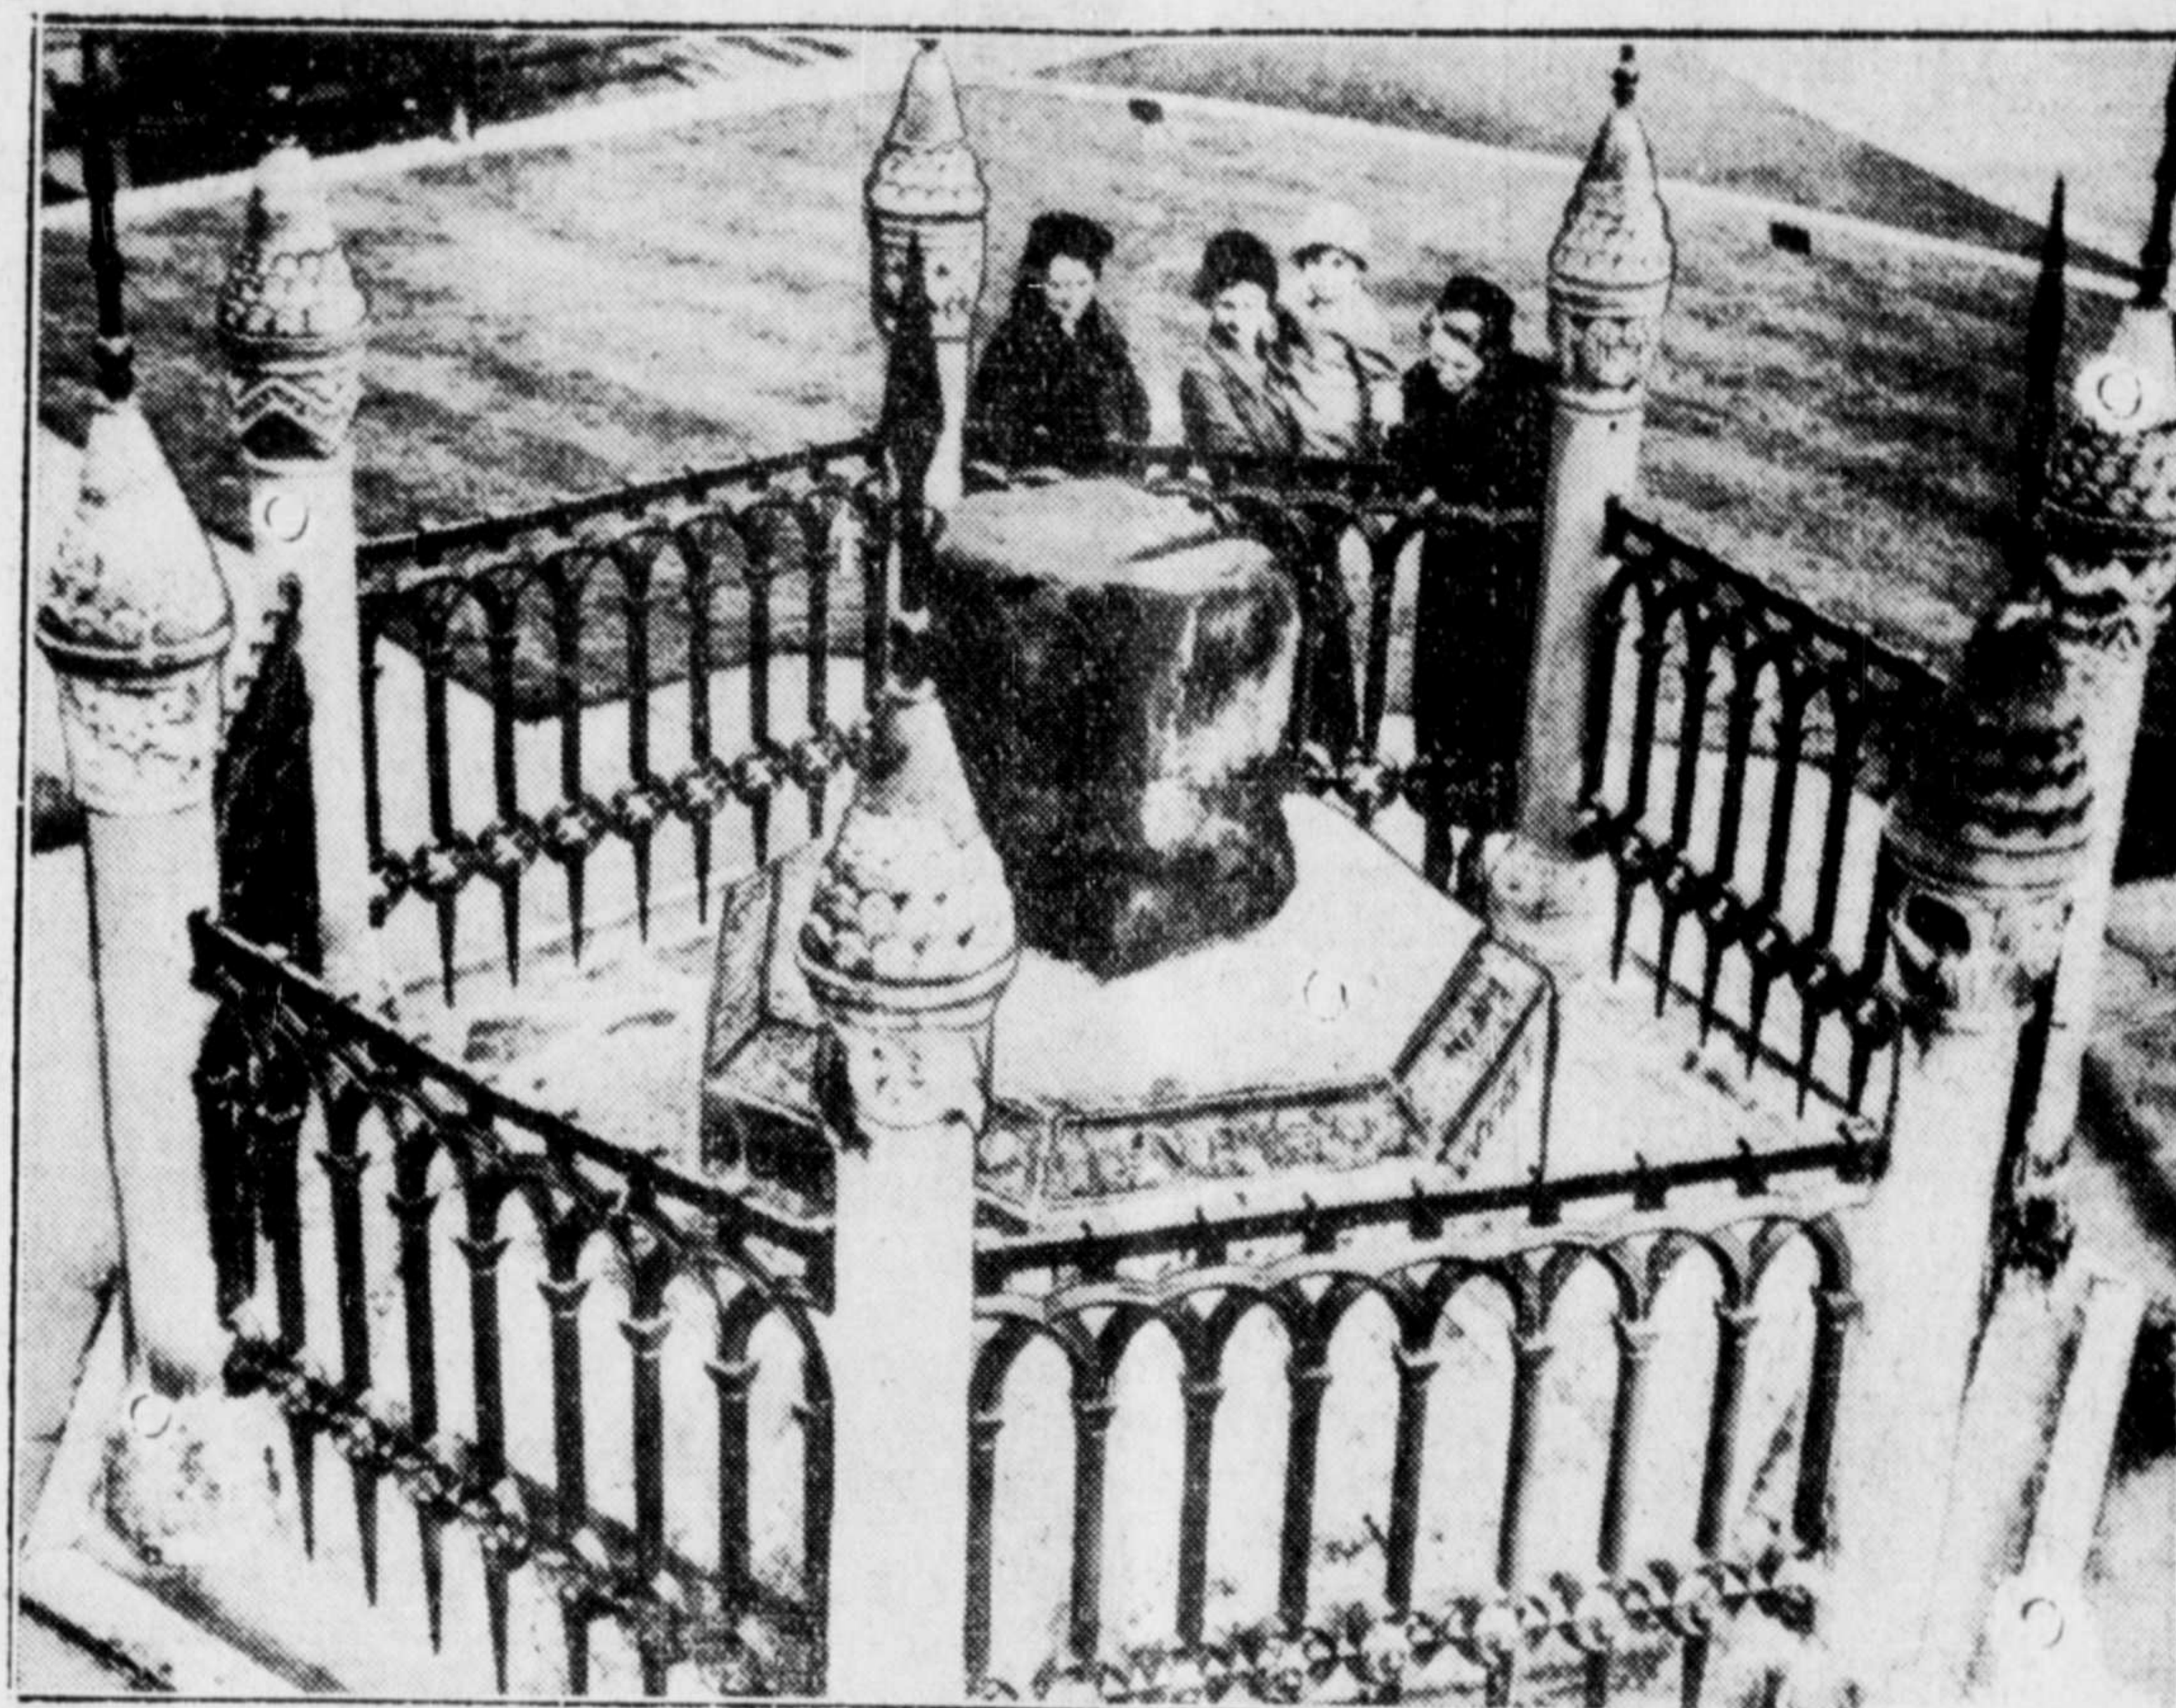

And again I am thrilled and filled with a warm glow when someone plays "The Mill Song" or the "Spinning Wheel." I used to be pretty good at these. Because of the arias I struggled with so long ago as a youngster, I can follow more intelligently Greig or Handel and lose myself in the Saturday afternoon broadcasts of the various operas.

There is a sort of breathless ecstasy of suspense when the orchestra or artist approaches some particularly difficult part and then comes the thrill of accomplishment when the passage is mastered. Therefore, unless one has an intimate knowledge of music gained by the sweat of his brow, as it were, how can he anticipate the struggle and appreciate the victory?

And there isn't the hominess about a radio that there is about a piano. You didn't turn your piano in for a newer model each year. It has a permanent and definite place in the home. In time it becomes an heirloom.

Families used to gather around the piano and sing and "visit." The don't do that with the radio. With the piano, some strikingly beautiful melody, or some favorite passage, can be played over and

Stone Upon Which England's First Kings Were Crowned

The coronation of King George VI revives interest in the King's Stone at Kingston-on-Thames, England, which was centre of the ceremonial at the crowning of seven kings, from Edward the Elder to Ethelred, including Athelstan, the first sovereign to call himself "King of the English." Athelstan was installed with "drede and marvellous cerymonie" in 925. The stone is the centre of attention from many visitors.

over. On a radio it is gone and, if it does come back, it is usually in some other guise.

With a radio, a twist of the dial brings the program you want—sometimes a program you don't want. However it is now considered essential in the modern home. It is no longer considered as a luxury but, as a necessity, even so, its contribution to the home is limited. It can augment the piano but it can never entirely take its place.

No, I think that today music lessons are even more necessary than they were twenty or thirty years ago. They are necessary if young people are to get the best there is to be had from their radios. Otherwise, what advantage is it to have the greatest artist and symphonies available at the twist of a dial if their beauty and delicacy of expression are to be lost through ignorance?

The child who has played over and over some difficult passage from one of the classics in later years is much better able to appreciate its proper execution. Furthermore, there is a keen pleasure and a measure of pride in a masterful rendition that one who has never learned to play can never know.

School bands are helping to keep this art alive with the children. But I still think too much stress is being placed on tap dancing and not enough on the old fashioned piano!
