Is Amelia Still Alive?—Search Of Coral Reefs Continuing

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8: (CP)-Weak radio signals, which might possibly have emanated from the missing plane of Amelia Earhart Putnam, were again reported to have been picked up yesterday. An amateur operator at Honolulu last night reported having picked up a message, possibly from Mrs. Putnam's navigator, Fred Noonan, saying "All's Well" and giving position.

The United States battleship Colorado reached the area of the Phoenix Islands yesterday and catapulted three planes to search the coral reefs for trace of the missing plane. After being out for two hours, they returned without finding trace, resuming the search this morning. The aircraft carrier Lexington and three destroyers were last night nearing Pearl Harbor from San Diego to refuel before taking up the search.

The mighty general peacetime search will continue at least another six days in the hope that the couple may be awaiting rescue on

George Palmer Putnam, husband of the aviatrix, was still hopeful last night that his wife might be safe on a coral island near Howland. He admitted, however, the possibility of disaster. "If she is dead." he said, "it is the way she would have chosen to go."

Despite Weather Conditions, Outing at Dodge Island Is Proving Happy One

Although the rainy weather has been hampering outside activities and keeping the boys indoors more than otherwise would have been the case, some twenty members of the local Sea Cadets Corps, in two weeks camp at Dodge Island, are a very happy time with Chief Petty Officer Instructor J. Anslow in charge. The newly obained quarters in the old quaranine hospital are proving very comfortable and the boys themselves are making a number of improvements. Regular camp routine is being carried on. Rising time is 7 a.m. with lights out at 9:30 p.m. Mornings are spent in work and afternoons and evenings in recreational activities. There are regular watches for various duties. Members of the Navy League Canada, parents of the boys and others will pay a visit to the camp on Sunday, boats leaving at noon.
