Gyro Club Hears Interesting Address by Roy M. Winslow At Special Fish Week Luncheon

Reviews Year

Some Reverses, Yet This District Does Not Seem to Have Done So Badly, Says Executive

In a National Fish Week address before the Prince Rupert Gyro Club at luncheon yesterday, Roy M. Winslow, assistant general manager of the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co., discussed in an interesting way some of the past year's developments and problems of the British Columbia fishing industry.

The time of year in which National Fish Week was observed in Canada, said Mr. Winslow, was not particularly suitable for British Columbia. Possibly spring when the new fresh fish started coming on the market would be more appropriate for the Pacific Coast province.

There had been interesting developments in the fishing industry of Prince Rupert district during the past year although, on the whole, the British Columbia coast fisheries might not have had as good a year financially as it might have been.

As for the halibut fleet, there had been an increased production and healthy advance in prices. For several years now prices had been showing improvement from the low mark of the depression and had now reached a level where the halibut fleet was doing much better.

For salmon, said Mr. Winslow, it had been a "spotty" year. Higher prices had been paid for cohoes and red springs. Production of cohoes, the principal variety taken by the trollers of Prince Rupert district, had, however, been lower although production of springs had been greater.

The pilchard fishery had had another poor year. Scientists had

STUDY IN CONTRASTS

An interesting study in contrasts may be seen in placing the proposed new airplane landing site at Prince Rupert beside that being constructed at Botwood, Newfoundland. While up to the present seaplanes and flying boats have been used solely in transatlantic flights it is expected that land planes may be used soon as engines become more reliable and more of them are used in the big planes.

At Botwood airport they have laid out three runways, each 4,500 feet long and 600 feet wide. At Prince Rupert the engineer reports they can lay out two runways each 4000 feet long and 300 feet wide. Another plan provides for a single runway 6000 feet long and 300 feet wide.

At Botwood provision is made for a master runway more than a mile long and 1200 feet wide. All the runways are to be asphalt paved with an elaborate lighting system installed, and are planned to accommodate planes of 200,000 pounds gross. These 100-ton planes are twice as large as any being planned at present but it is expected that future developments will provide for much larger planes.

Work is already well under way at Botwood, there being well on toward completion a power house, boiler house and administration buildings. Plans are laid for construction of elaborate shops and hangars, a hotel for accommodation of passengers and living quarters for the ground staff. The total cost of the centre, which is being constructed by the British government, is estimated to be $2,500,000. It is located far in the interior of the island and not near any centre of population. It is on the Newfoundland government's narrow gauge railway and it is thought it will be one of the most up to date airfields in the world, designed to serve the aviation needs for at least ten years.

Prince Rupert's aviation field, if it is built, will be part of the defense plan of the Federal Government. It will be comparatively easy of construction and will fill the need for land planes for a number of years to come.

LABOR ORGANIZATION

There was an increase in organized labor during last year over the preceding year, according to the 26th annual report of the department of labor at Ottawa. The increase in members numbered 41,769 and the number of branches increased by 158. As a matter of fact the membership in trades unions in Canada today has just caught up with the membership for the year 1930 when it reached its peak before the depression.

According to the report there were last year three important labor organizations in Canada the international group with 1896 branches, an increase of 102 in the year and a combined membership of 174,769; the group of Canadian organizations with 740 branch unions, an increase of six with a combined membership of 83,841 comes second in strength. The National Catholic group is the third with 190 branches known as syndicates, an increase of 50 in the year with a membership of 45,000.

not yet ascertained definitely why the pilchards came some years and did not others. It had been found however, that the British Columbia pilchards were largely the same as the California sardines. This had been established by tagging.

During the past few years there had been quite a development in the field of fish reduction, said Mr. Winslow. Particularly had this been so in Japan and California. As a result of scientific investigations, the value of fish meal in animal feeding had been demonstrated and its use was becoming established to a greater and greater degree both in this country and abroad.

Reduction Important
The fish reduction industry promised much for Prince Rupert district, declared Mr. Winslow. This fall it was to be noted that reduction plants at Namu, Port Edward, Butedale and Tucks Inlet were being operated to capacity on Bella Bella herring. This was a new and important operation.

The salt herring business, the speaker stated, had been practically cleaned out owing to the collapse of the Chinese market which had been a heavy consumer.

It had also been a tough year for the exporters of dry salt salmon owing to Japan tightening up on imports from abroad. Dry salt salmon, which was first classed as a non-essential food in Japan, had been put back in the essential class but the advancing of credits abroad for this commodity was another obstacle which had not yet been removed. However, this had not been all to the bad because dog salmon which had been salted before had been canned this year. Nearly four hundred thousand cases had been put up and the market was strong, particularly in the United States.

The fishermen had benefited through higher prices being paid. Finest quality dog salmon had been frozen for the Eastern Canada market and in Prince Rupert 16c had been paid for this fish whereas last year the price was 6c.

Mr. Winslow discussed the problems of selling high class British Columbia salmon and halibut in the Eastern markets. Competition of eastern cod and haddock had become increasingly strong. Due to the collapse of foreign markets for these varieties, the federal and the provincial governments in the east had set themselves about to develop the markets in Canada for cod and haddock. There had also been extensive subsidization and in Quebec the government had gone into the fish business, buying and purchasing twenty-two cold storage plants along the St. Lawrence River and gathering up the fish for market with fleets of trucks. Last spring filets had been sold on the market as low as 10c a pound. The effect of this eastern fileted fish competition on British Columbia fish could be readily seen.

The British Columbia fishing industry had in the past asked for little government aid, said Mr. Winslow, and his remarks at this time were not intended to make any suggestion along that line.

Scientific Aid
The speaker acknowledged the aid that had been given the industry by the government through the interest it had taken in improving the quality of fish products and efforts to get fish to the market in better condition. British Columbia frozen salmon now enjoyed a wonderful position under British preference.

Mr. Winslow closed by paying tribute to the research work of the band of scientists of the Biological Board of Canada right at Prince Rupert. They had faced difficult problems and had been instrumental in bringing about many practical improvements. They had pursued their work with a high degree of courage and had met with a very satisfactory measure of success.

Dr. H. O. Smith, medical superintendent of the Port Simpson General Hospital, was a guest at the luncheon.

Progress of arrangements for the club's masquerade dance on Friday night of next week was reported by W. M. Watts, chairman for the affair.

A subscription list for relief of prairie drought sufferers was passed around with all club members pledging cash donations.

MISS EARL IS SPEAKER

Describes Coronation to Keen Interest of Parent Teachers' Association

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert Parent-Teachers' Association last evening at the Booth Memorial School was the best attended the association has ever had, the special attractions being an address by Miss Earl on her impressions of the Coronation procession and her trip through the Old Country.

Miss Earl was greatly impressed by the solidarity of the Empire from her position at Canada House she was in the centre of the Canadian Colony in London and had a rare view of the procession the wealth of color of the various representatives of the Empire, the presence of Queen Mary, the smiling countenance of Queen Elizabeth and the many character of King George combined to make her feel that "all's well with the world." With touches of humor and apt quotations the speaker took her listeners to the Houses of Parliament, Ascot Races, Edinburgh Castle, the Blarney Stone and the auditorium in Dublin where the Irish sweepstakes are drawn. Altogether the address proved a real treat.

In the absence of City Commissioner W. J. Alder, Arthur Sutton, principal of the King Edward High School, presented the Entrance to High School Certificates. He welcomed the graduates and asked them to remember that another milestone had been passed but that there were other milestones ahead to be passed yet.

The program included a delightful duet by Mrs. R. G. Large and Mrs. H. N. Brocklesby, accom-

An interesting outline of the missionary work being carried on in the Korean field by the United Church of Canada and formerly by the Presbyterian Church in Canada was given by Rev. E. J. O. Fraser at a meeting yesterday afternoon in First United Church. Mr. Fraser also described some of the customs of the people.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of the local Church. Mrs. E. P. Jenner, president, was in the chair. There was quite a good attendance.

Rev. W. D. Grant Hollingworth, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, gave the opening prayer. Rev. J. C. Jackson, pastor of First United Church, pronounced the benediction.

Toy Repair Shop Operating Again

Boy Scouts and Girl Guides To Work Again for Needy Children

Local Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, for the ninth year, will operate their toy repair shop this season in preparation for Christmas. The plan, as is well known, is to secure all possible discarded toys, dolls, books, games etc. and recondition them for distribution at Christmas among the needy children who might otherwise be without. Through the kindness of S. D. Johnston Co. Ltd, the premises next to Pat Phillipson's store on Second Avenue have been secured for use as the repair shop. Gifts may be left at Linzey & Davies, Q & S. Grocery, and the Fire Hall or will be called for by phoning Blue 276.

fices as a protest against the famous "Passfield white paper," claiming it revoked Great Britain's policy of encouraging Jewish settlement in Asia Minor.

That policy, formulated by Balfour in 1917 after Allenby had driven the Turks from Jerusalem, was incorporated in the mandate over Palestine which the League of Nations voted to the British in 1923. The reaction to Passfield's pronouncement, which was issued after fierce racial riots between Arabs and Jews, became almost worldwide and lasted until Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister, wrote to Dr. Weizmann in February, 1931, modifying the "white paper."

Work for Judaism

Aside from incidents of this stamp which projected him into the limelight, Warburg's part in the various causes which he espoused was generally a quiet one. But in 1930, when the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity awarded him the Gottheil medal as having done the most for Judaism in the preceding year, the citation said that his benefactions in the post-war decade had reached $10,000,000.

He gave freely too of his time, for example, as chairman of the American Jewish joint distribution committee formed in war days to coordinate relief work in distressed Europe. In 15 years the organization under his leadership dispensed $80,000,000 in 46 sections of the old world.

"It was one of the world's outstanding pieces of human engineering," said President Hoover of this work.

Hungary bestowed its Red Cross as an appreciation of Warburg's part "in mitigating misery" in that country.

Much of the work of this committee was done in Rumania, Lithuania, Poland and Russia. In one of its years it was responsible for the planting of 2,500,000 acres in the Ukraine to American corn and in the same twelve-month it fed 2,000,000 children and 1,000,000 adults. It also had to its credit co-operative societies, loan banks, trade schools, medical centres and similar social services.

The Warburg interest in education led him to contribute heavily to the Fogz Art Museum and the graduate school of education at Harvard. He was a trustee of the Teachers' College at Columbia University, the Jewish Theological Seminary, the American Museum of Natural History and the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Born in Germany

Warburg was born in Hamburg, Germany January 14, 1871. His elder brother, Paul, preceded him to America. Felix following in 1894. That year Paul married Nina Loeb of New York and the next year Frieda, daughter of the late Jacob H. Schiff, became Mrs. Felix Warburg. In 1896 both brothers were made partners in Kuhn, Loeb & Company and a few years later became American citizens.

Paul resigned from the banking firm in 1914 to become one of the organizing members and later deputy governor of the federal reserve board. He died in January, 1932, having meanwhile organized the International Acceptance Bank of which the younger brother was a director. Felix Warburg was also a director of the Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Company.

ment, has a cruising range of 3500 miles.

"Arctic flying is no longer the cold, uncomfortable game it used to be," comments Wilkins the veteran of many Arctic adventures.

"Compared to other types of planes where we used to hunch over a motor all day long and then climb out to pitch a tent in the cold at night, this is like living on a yacht," he smiled. The crew of five lived aboard a yellow-winged sky monster during their recent entire month's stay in the Arctic while searching for the Russians.

"The cold never got a chance to bother us in here," Sir Hubert Wilkins said as newsmen inspected his plane. "It was only the altitude that sometimes proved uncomfortable. You see we flew usually at around 5000 feet."

One of the latest types of two-motored bombers, the body divided into six separate compartments each separated by bulkhead doors, it is suggestive of the interior of a submarine.

The bow nacelle, in war time a glassed-in movable machine-gun turret, housed the observer's equipment, including an 85-pound anchor, a powerful searchlight, anchor ropes and a capstan imbedded in the flooring.

Here, high up in a glassed turret and surrounded by a maze of levers, dials and wheels, Pilot Herbert Rollick-Kenyon of Toronto and Co-pilot Al Cheeseman of Port Arthur alternated at the controls as the giant roared five times over the Arctic ice-caps searching for the Russians.

Behind theme in the navigation room with its felt-covered chart table and collapsible steel seats on one side and the powerful radio equipment and drum-wound trailing antennae on the other, Sir Hubert and the radio operator collaborated in assembling the data that guided the plane.

"But where do you keep the food?" queried a reporter sniffing a peculiar odor that permeated the tail end of the fuselage.

The grinning mechanic threw back the final bulkhead door and the reporter inserted his head to come in startled contact with a large furry bulk.

"Reindeer," said the mechanic succinctly.

WHIFFLETS From the Waterfront

There have been no further developments since the seizure ten days ago by the fisheries patrol of the local halibut boat Vera Beatrice on a charge of fishing halibut in Area No. 2 with an Area No. 3 clearance. The hearing of the case is expected to commence in provincial court next Monday.

Steamship companies announce that special excursion round trip rates from Prince Rupert to Vancouver will come into effect on November 1. Tickets will be on sale until February 28 with March 31 as the final return limit. The round trip fare, as in the previous winters, will be $32.

Motorship Beloit arrived in port at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Ketchikan and, after discharging one carload of fresh fish for transshipment East over Canadian National Railways, sailed on her return to Ketchikan.

Seattle comes second only to New York in the number of vessels documented out of the port according to officially compiled figures for the United States. There are 4900 documented vessels out of New York and 2600 out of Seattle. Juneau comes third with 1200 documented vessels.

Three schooners from Area No. 3 marketed halibut catches in Seattle yesterday totalling 118,000 pounds as follows: Resolute, 40,000, Whiz, 10 1/4 and 9 1/2; Trinity 40,000, Washington, 10 1/2 straight, Zenith, 38,000, San Juan, 10 1/2 and 9 1/2.

On Tuesday the halibut schooner Tatoosh sold 26,000 pounds at Ketchikan for 10c and 6c.

No boats being in with catches, there was no sale of halibut on the local Fish Exchange this morning.

Economical Means Of Running Radio

Retired Sea Captain Finds Means To Supply Set With Power Without Cost

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Oct. 21: (CP)—A retired sea captain here has solved the riddle of furnishing electric power for his radio set with no electricity in his home.

A repairman who was called to fix the "skipper's" ailing radio was surprised to see kerosene lamps in the house and no electricity. The radio was placed in a corner with the electric cords wound neatly around the set. He examined the set and remedied the trouble.

Wondering, he asked, "how could the set get out of order? You haven't been using it—how could it get out of condition like that?"

"Oh yes," replied the woman of the house, "we've been using it ever since we bought it—day and night in fact."

"But how could you use it without electricity?" protested the radio man.

Then she showed him. There was electricity in the adjoining house and the electric wiring ran up between the partition, which separated the two dwellings. The skipper had removed a board in the intervening wall, tapped the supply of electricity and used it for his radio.
