CITY HALL OFFICIALS DON'T KNOW WHAT CITY'S CONTRACTS HAVE COST

All They Know About Section B on First Ave. is That It Was Not Completed Till a Month Ago—Don't Know What It Cost, What the Payroll Was, What the Quantities Were, or Anything Else About It

On all street grading work in Prince Rupert the city engineer has put in his bid in competition with other bids received. In most cases the engineer's bid has been higher than the others, but in one or two cases the city engineer has been lowest and has accordingly been awarded the work. So far no attempt has been made to enlighten the public as to whether the city engineer has been able to carry out the works for the estimate given, or whether the cost has far exceeded the tenders of the contractors.

Asked for Information.
 Ample time has now elapsed, even with primitive bookkeeping methods, for the city to know what these works have cost, and The Daily News this morning sought specific information on the following points in relation to the Section B6 contract on First avenue (the portion in the vicinity of Lynch's store). On this contract the contractors were bound by a penalty to complete operations by May 12th.

List of Questions.
 The following were the questions asked:
 When was the contract completed? What was the total cost of the work? What were the amounts, respectively, of (1) the payroll, (2) horse hire, (3) tools and equipment, (4) explosives, (5) sundries, (6) how much solid rock was there, (7) how much earth, (8) what did it cost to take up the plank roadway (9) how much overhaul was there?

Answers to Questions.
 Both the Mayor and Alderman Hilditch, chairman of the Public Works Department, were asked the questions. Alderman Hilditch, who was first seen, said that the information was not yet ready even for the Council. All he could state was that the contract was completed fully a month ago, which is the answer to the first question. He answered the last question also by saying that practically all the hauling was overhaul in this contract, but in the absence of M. J. McNeil, Public Works superintendent, he could give no further details and referred The Daily News to the Mayor.

The Mayor's Statement.
 The Mayor could do no better. He said that the information was being sought by the Council, but that owing to the City Engineer's being busy with the lawsuit, and his department's being in consequence also extra busy, the details asked could not easily be obtained even for Council purposes. The Mayor did not think Colonel Davis had gone into the matter yet, and Alderman Hilditch believed the information could not be obtained until the end of the month.

REV. F. W. KERR MADE AN ATTACK ON THE EXTRA HOUR TO THE HOTEL MEN

Says That the History of the Liquor Traffic in the Past Year Shows That the Liquor Men Are Out to Become a Political Power—Says No Attempt Whatever Has Been Made at Enforcing the Law

The granting of the extra hour by the City Council to the hotel men was sternly denounced by Rev. F. W. Kerr in his sermon last night in the Empress Theatre. "This extra hour," he said, "was granted because of the power wielded by the liquor interests, and for no other reason. They cannot make us believe that it was done in the best interests of the city. It is not in the best interests of the city. This extra hour is the most dangerous hour of the day. It was at this hour that a poor fellow a few nights ago came from a saloon and met his death down the Second avenue embankment."

Law Enforcement Promised.
 In his sermon the Presbyterian pastor reviewed the period since the Bowser Act came into force in Prince Rupert. He admitted that the defeat of local option was a disappointment, but he had hoped that the promised strict enforcement of the law would have worked out for good. Mr. Blakemore had used moral fervor and pathos to secure its passing, and a committee of prominent business men had said it was necessary for the sake of the town's commercial growth and promised to see that the law enforcement would be carried out.

Promises Not Observed.
 "From that day to this," said the preacher, "I have never heard a word of the Bowser Act, of law enforcement or of the committee of business men who stood voucher for it. Instead, hotel licenses have also been issued to fill a long-felt want". In addition, several club licenses have been granted to enable the self-respecting boozier to get his drink away from the company of the laborer, and to enable the young man of the city to learn to take his glass like a gentleman. The bars of the city have been granted an extra hour at midnight, and the Magistrate has issued a consoling encyclical to the effect that gambling is not legal."

Liquor and Politics.
 Rev. Mr. Kerr said he saw in all this the evidence that the liquor interests were determined to entrench themselves as a political power, and would be able to carry to power such candidates as were ready to serve their interests.

WILL ARRANGE PEACE IN CHINA

General Li Has Telegraphed to the Imperial Representatives Arranging to Meet in the City of Hankow to Arrange Terms of Peace---Where Peace Delegates Will Meet

Shanghai, Dec. 11.—General Li, commander-in-chief of the victorious rebel forces, has telegraphed from Wu Chang to the representatives of the Imperial authorities, who are in refuge at this city, offering to meet them at Hankow for the purpose of arranging terms of peace.

The offer will be accepted, and a meeting with the rebel leaders will be arranged. It is believed here from private information received that the rebels will be agreeable to a modified form of monarchy for China, giving wide prerogatives to the people. They will not, however, consent to the Manchu dynasty having anything to do with the throne of China again.

WILL DRIVE HIS JUGGERNAUT IN DEFIANCE OF EVERYBODY

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF PUELIC WORKS IS DISSATISFIED WITH THE RATE HIS HOUSE IS MOVING ALONG WON'T WAIT ANY LONGER.

Progress with the moving of the two-storey house purchased by Alderman Hilditch and being hauled by Weston's horses over city lumber skids to Third avenue from Centre street is not rapid. Yesterday better speed was made, and the bulky burden got as far as Fourth street.

Contractors engaged in rock dumping along Second and Third avenues, and First and Second streets, object to the moving of the house on week days, as it blocks their car tracks. But this morning Alderman Hilditch asserted his intention of going ahead with the moving in spite of opposition. "It will take a year to get the house to its new site working only Sundays," he said. "I'll go ahead with it and let them kick as they please."

The house bears the inspiring legend, "Vote for Hilditch," on one side, and on the other, "Watch it move," but so far few people have been privileged to see it actually in motion.

HEARD TEMPERANCE SERMON

Alderman Hilditch's Comment on Presbyterian Pastor's Address.

Amongst those who heard Rev. F. W. Kerr's sermon last night was Alderman Hilditch, who did not think a great deal of it. He does not approve of preachers bringing politics into sermons, anyway, he said, but in this case put it that the pastor had got off a lot of generalities which were intended to apply to certain citizens, but which he could not substantiate. "To my mind," said Alderman Hilditch, "the Rev. F. W. Kerr fell down, for he had evidently got a list of names he wanted to read out which he hadn't the nerve to do from the pulpit when he saw his audience."

THE PASSING OF ARTHUR J. BALFOUR

A Descriptive Sketch of the Great British Unionist Ex-Leader From the Pen of Dr. J. A. Macdonald, Editor of the Toronto Globe

They have done it at last: the "Last Ditch" men and the "Die-hards" have crowded Mr. Balfour out of the leadership of the Unionist party. Of course his going out was his own affair. He did not need to go. Indeed the spectator, the ablest of all the Unionist weeklies, the other day plainly warned the insurgents that the merciless and most damaging answer to their nagging and cabal would be Mr. Balfour's resignation. They got their answer the other day.

It may be that Mr. Balfour's health had something to do with it. In the olden days he stood against the wild charges of the Irish Nationalists, and the waves that broke Forster were themselves broken into foam against Balfour. In their chagrin they called him "Bloody Balfour." And he rather enjoyed it. He smiled back at them in that matchless nonchalant way of his. But they were Irish Home Rulers and opponents. It is quite a different matter when the insurgents are of his own political household. Then he cannot suffer gladly. They made him tired.

To be sure, Mr. Balfour never did belong to the same order as the men who have been secretly, as the Spectator says, trying to bluff and bully him out of the party leadership. And he did not mind letting them know that he appreciated the fact that he was not of their class. In August when the "Last Ditch" brigade were fuming over the destruction of the Lords' veto, and shrieking on the housetops what they were just about to do, Mr. Balfour went off to the south of France and left them to quiet themselves without even so much as a rebuking smile at their bad-mannered naughtiness. More recently, when Sir Edward Carson and his "Die-hards" were swearing by all the gods at once that they would lead Ulster in armed revolt against Home Rule, Mr. Balfour's whimsical smile was even more contemptuous than hLis neglect of the "Last Ditchers."

The fact is Arthur Balfour cares for none of these things. A fair measure of local self-government for Ireland would not alarm him. A curbing of the House of Lords does not distress

MONDAY, DEC. 11

THE UNITED STATES THANKS THE NEWS.

In its task of making Prince Rupert known all over the Continent, The Daily News receives almost daily some evidence of the attention it is attracting abroad. One of the most amusing of these occurs in a recent number of the Harrisburg Telegraph, which "on behalf of the United States" confers its thanks to the Prince Rupert News. The Telegraph in a lengthy editorial article entitled "Helping the Players" says:

Prince Rupert is a comparatively new and booming town in British Columbia not far from the Alaska line. It is to be the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which is now in course of construction, but although it will doubtless be an important city some day, it does seem a little odd that we should be obliged—close as we are to Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Carlisle, not to mention the occasionally efficient University of Pennsylvania—to acknowledge ourselves indebted to Prince Rupert for football pointers, yet so it is.

The Prince Rupert Daily News tells of a game between the Medford High School and Grants Pass teams, in which Medford won by the unusual score of thirty-nine to nothing. The victory is attributed entirely to the girls of the domestic science department in the Medford High School who prepared luncheon for the high school players before the game under the direction of their teacher.

It was the object of the hostesses to provide a menu which would furnish a maximum force, calories, food units, etc., with a minimum of digestive effort. After careful study of the needs of the team, it was decided that bean soup, poached eggs, toast and spring water constituted the proper ration. The girls did the cooking themselves and waited on the table and after they had fed their champions went to the football field to cheer and watch the result of their experiment.

We are informed by The News that "their vocal enthusiasm was superfluous, however, for the soup and poached egg players simply swamped the Grants Pass eleven, who had to rely upon what nourishment the Medford restaurants offered."

Here is an argument in favor of domestic science which seems to have been overlooked by those of us who have advocated its establishment in the public schools of Harrisburg, as well as in the summer playground course. If our young women have been rather contemptuous of the knowledge offered them in domestic science text books it is because they interpreted it to mean only prosaic "kitchen drudgery" and have not realized its romantic possibilities in the field of sport.

What would be the satisfaction of making a sofa pillow or embroidering a pennant in comparison with the delights of fattening or thinning to the required dimensions a candidate for the varsity team? Or consider the proud distinction of watching your special charge leap victorious against the tape after a hard-fought race, while the uproarious applause of the spectators proclaim the prowess of your skilful and every sign of weakness. You could say as he dropped behind:

"It was a mistaken kindness to allow him that charlotte russe." And when he forged ahead: "Ah! There go the calories in yesterday's sausage."

When we ponder over this tender and affecting phase of domestic science, we regret exceedingly that it was not discovered sooner and on behalf of the United States we confess a debt of gratitude to the Prince Rupert News.

The News has great pleasure in accepting the thanks of the United States—and the free advertising that the Telegraph has so generously given to Prince Rupert.

WHITE VS. BLACK

The Struggle Between the Two Races Is Over a Century Old.

The abandoned fight between the young Englishman, Bombarrier Wells, and Jack Johnson brings to mind the many struggles for racial supremacy that have taken place between white and black.

On December 18, 1810, Tom Cribb, the English champion, faced the formidable American negro, Tom Molyneux, before a crowd such as had perhaps never before gathered to witness any like event.

As it was the English champion contrived to outlast the challenger, whose ferocious method of attack had exhausted his strength, and snatched a hardly earned victory.

From that time until Johnson beat Jeffries there has been no colored champion, though the race has produced many grand fighters.

The following year he accomplished an even greater feat when he decisively thrashed Tom Shelton, who was classed among the foremost heavyweights of the day.

Among other black fighters who have made a lasting reputation in the ring may be mentioned Bob Travers, the opponent of Jem Mace and Bob Brettie; Bob Dixon and Joe Gans, the accomplished lightweights, and Peter Jackson, whose memorable glove contest with Frank Slavin at the National Sporting Club will never be forgotten.

THE PASSING OF A. J. BALFOUR

him. The Lloyd George budget has not spoiled his real affection for the "little Welsh attorney." And as for Chamberlain's tariff policy, the best he can think in its favor is that it might not do much harm.

In the Unionist party is no second Balfour. There are men more virile, more robust, more full, none to winsome, none so more pushful, but none so skill-potent with the "best families," who after all give substance and dignity to English Toryism. This was painfully evident almost any day in the House of Commons. If he was not there you might see some frantic gesturings and thrust or blood. Not that even club wavings, but no fence or he ever drew more blood than enough to prove his own quite unequalled skill as a dialectic swordsman.

He was seen to fine advantage on one notable occasion in June last during the coronation festivities. A dinner was given to the overseas Prime Ministers by the Constitutional Club. Several of the Unionist journals had been working overtime trying to harness the conference of the Premiers to their own jingo-imperial coach. None of the Premiers, not even Sir Joseph Ward, would take to the collar. I do not believe Mr. Balfour had any sympathy with the scheme himself. He was chairman when the overseas leaders were guests of the great political club whose motto, carved in stone over the doorway, is "For King and Constitution." In all that great gathering two men stood alone and apart from all the others. They were both leaders. Both were touched with the unmistakable marks of distinction. Each represented what was finest in the blood and breeding of his race. The one was of the old English aristocracy, the other of the old French. In penetration of mind, in deftness of touch, in attitude, and thought, and style none of the men from the homeland or from overseas was in the class with Balfour and Laurier. And yet the differences between these two men are as marked as their similarities. The one is a philosophic doubter bothered with party politics; the other a cheerful optimist, with a personal interest in human affairs. The one expresses his most dogmatic opinions with a graceful air of the genial cynic that robs them of convincing and compelling power; the other, with something of the Gladstone temperament, kindles commonplace facts with the imaginative emotion that inspires belief. The one was not a masterful leader, even in power; where the other sits, even in defeat, will always be "the head of the table."

GREAT STORM OVER BRITAIN

Three Large Steamers Wrecked in the English Channel—One of the Worst Storms on Record for Many Years.

(Canadian Press Despatch.) Dover, Dec. 11.—A great storm is raging in the English Channel and has already claimed over a score of lives. Three large steamers are wrecked, one in the harbor here being completely broken in two by the force of the gale. Reports from France show a similar state there, which is regarded the worst storm in many years.

SHE DIED WITH HER HUSBAND

Paul Lafargue, Noted Socialist, and His Wife, a Daughter of Karl Marx, Commit Suicide Together—Prefer Death to Age.

(Canadian Press Despatch.) Paris, Dec. 9.—Paul Lafargue, the well-known Socialist, and his wife have committed suicide. Lafargue left a letter saying that he felt the approach of the infirmities of old age, which threatened paralysis, and determined to die while still in possession of all his faculties. His wife refused to survive, preferring to share his fate. Lafargue said in mented with various poisons and had chosen the subcutaneous injection of prussic acid as the best means to die.

Mme. Lafargue was the daughter of the German Socialist, Karl Marx.

M. Lafargue left the following letter to his fellow Socialists: "I die with supreme joy and with a certainty that the cause to which I devoted my life will triumph in the near future. Long live communism, long live international Socialism."
