Insurgent Lines Cut Deeply Into South of City of Madrid

Loyalists Fight Their Way Up Slopes of Pinzarron To Silence Guns Shelling Valencia Road; 800 Rebels Reported Slain in Day.

MADRID, Feb. 19: (CP)—Government troops cut deeply into the insurgents' lines southeast of Madrid and fought their way up the slopes of Pinzarron Hill today in an attempt to silence guns shelling the road to Valencia. Eight hundred insurgents are reported by the government press to have been killed in a single day of fighting.

SNOWFALL IS HEAVY

Trouble Expected Along Railway Line When Thaw Comes

Unprecedented heavy snow conditions now prevail along the railway line in the lower Skeena Valley, it is reported, and, when the spring thaw comes, there appears good reason to anticipate that serious flood conditions may prevail. So far, despite some slides, it has been possible to keep the snow under control and the line clear. During the past week the snowfall has been particularly heavy. There have been unusually heavy snowfalls as far down the line as the canneries in the slough and throughout the interior. At Prince George the ploughs have thrown it up so high that one cannot see across the streets, the sidewalks being in virtual trenches.

SOCIAL CREDIT GOVT CORNERSTONE IS RULED OUT BY COURTS TODAY

EDMONTON, Feb. 19: (CP)—The Reduction and Settlement of Debts Act, cornerstone of debt legislation of the Aberhart government, was declared unconstitutional here by Mr. Justice Ewing in the Alberta Supreme Court today. The whole act was ruled to be beyond the constitutional powers of the province and within the legal ambit of the Dominion as defined by the British North America Act. No immediate announcement by the Alberta Social Credit government was made in reaction to the judgment.

IS CANDID ECONOMIST

Dean Clement Neither Babbling Optimist or Impractical Visionary

Still Downtrend

Necessary to Restore Agricultural Industry if Prosperity Is To Return

Dean F. M. Clement, head of the Department of Agriculture of the University of British Columbia, is not one of those jolly optimists who babble merrily along about the awful depression which is now about over.

In fact, he is quite candidly of the opinion that "we are a long way yet from being out of the depression" although there is a temporary uptrend in business cycle which may last until 1939 or 1940.

Nor is Dean Clement one of those impractical visionaries who goes around talking about a "change in the system" which will be the sure cure for all existing economic ills. On the contrary, he quite frankly admits that he has no solution to offer. All he can suggest is that individuals should try and study social and economic matters, endeavor to live in understanding one with another and establish themselves as well as possible.

In the second of his series of three extension lectures at First Presbyterian Church here last night, Dean Clement concluded with the reminder that the great mass of the producers and, he was referring more specifically to the agriculturalists as far as Canada is concerned, must be assisted if the rest of the people are to prosper.

Dean Clement's subject last night was "Canadian and British Columbia Problems as Influenced by European Policies." He started out to continue his discussion of the world food situation and ended up with a review of the present general economic situation in Canada which was frank enough if not overly hopeful as far as the immediate future is concerned.

Uptrends and Downtrends

Economic history of the last 150 years, Dean Clement said, had been marked by long uptrends and downtrends in prices due to changes in the value of currency. From 1796 to 1818 there had been an uptrend in prices, from 1817 to 1849 a downtrend, from 1849 to 1873 an uptrend, from 1873 to 1896 a downtrend, from 1896 to 1929 an uptrend and now there was another downtrend. Every period of prosperity in the world had been accompanied by an increase in the supply of gold, inflation of currency or war. Plotted on the other side were the periods of misery, want and reform. The world had never learned yet how to be prosperous in times of peace.

The present downtrend was not yet over, Dean Clement believed, although there appeared to be a temporary business uptrend due to inflation which could not be expected to last any longer than 1939 or 1940. In this connection he referred to the present inflationary policies in United States and Great Britain.

"I cannot paint a cheerful picture today from an economic or educational standpoint," declared the dean.

Six Persons Injured In Strike Riot

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Feb. 19:—Sitdown strikers defied a court eviction order in the Pansteel Metallurgical Corporation plant in nearby North Chicago today. At least six persons were injured in a brief battle between the strikers, estimated at 82 men, and about 125 police. The strikers threw acid, pulleys and other objects.

OPERATION DEFERRED

Health Insurance Scheme Operation Has Been Postponed Pending Review Of Difficulties

VICTORIA, Feb. 19: (CP)—Hon. Dr. George M. Weir, Provincial Secretary, announced today that operation of British Columbia's health insurance plan as projected to be the first North American state medicine scheme would be deferred.

Dr. Weir, who sponsored the health insurance bill in the Legislature last year, said he had received a telegram from Premier T. D. Pattullo in Ottawa asking him to postpone operation of the Health Insurance Commission sine die. The text of Premier Pattullo's wire was as follows:

"In view of your advice that the Health Insurance Commission has not been able to complete arrangements for operation of the Act by the dates fixed, please give instructions to postpone the operation sine die so an opportunity will be afforded to review the whole situation on my return."

CHURCH TO CLOSE SKEENA HOSPITAL

Feeling that the church was not justified in continuing to operate hospital and medical service on the Skeena River at a loss during the summer as it had been doing during the past few years, the Prince Rupert Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, in session here yesterday, passed a resolution recommending that the hospital at Port Essington be discontinued unless a new financial arrangement can be arrived at between the hospital authorities and the cannery companies. The Port Essington hospital situation was among a number of missionary problems that were discussed at yesterday's Presbytery session. In the last two summers, the hospital at Essington has gone behind over $1400, it was reported, and last year, although it was a good fishing season, receipts were lower. There was difficulty, it was pointed out, in getting from the cannery the $2 charged each fisherman for hospital and medical service if such fisherman was in debt to the cannery at the end of the season.

SENATOR IS DEAD

Hon. Horatio Hocken was For Many Years Prominent in Public Life of Canada

Newspaperman

Served in Every Department Of Journalism—Former Mayor Of Toronto

TORONTO, Feb. 19: (CP)—Hon. Horatio Clarence Hocken, aged 79, conservative senator and prominent in the political life of Canada for twenty-one years, died in Toronto last night of pneumonia.

"Printer's devil," printer, foreman, reporter, editorial writer, business manager, editor, member of the Toronto Board of Control, Mayor of Toronto and member of the House of Commons for Toronto Centre West—in the honored ranks of the self-made man a disarming place was held by Senator Hocken, editor of the Orange Sentinel since 1905. And yet it was not luck that brought Hocken to the high positions he came to occupy; it was a natural progress by virtue of the sterling qualities which were the man from the beginning he had a natural gift of self-expression, and a wide reading helped things along. From beginning to end, he was a staunch Conservative, and he was an Orangeman, but his Orangism was not Irish; it was the relative detachment of a man of Cornish descent from the intensity of the Ulster passion. And the slogan which he selected for the Orange Sentinel when he purchased it in 1905 remained the same as long as his connection with the publication continued: "One School, One Flag, A United Canada."

When Hon. George Brown had The Toronto Globe, Hocken was learning the printing trade in its composing room, and in 1882 he went to the Toronto News as foreman, a position he held for 10 years. On the appearance of the mechanical setting machines, Hocken led a strike of the men, leaving the paper with the entire staff, and in company with W. F. Maclean (later editor of The Toronto World) and W. H. Parr he established The Toronto Star, of which he became business manager. He returned to The News, however, in the capacity of reporter and specialized in municipal news. He became managing editor of The News in 1895, remaining till 1901 when he went to St. Thomas, Ont., to become editor of the Journal. He returned to Toronto and the News in 1902, this time as editorial writer of the publication.

On the death of E. F. Clarke in 1905, Hocken purchased the Orange Sentinel, becoming its editor and president of the Sentinel Publishing Company, and for 23 years he published and edited this paper entirely on his own account. In 1928, however, he sold the publication to the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America, remaining, however, as its editor.

It was natural that this early newspaper experience should give "Race" Hocken an abnormal thirst for politics, but instead of following the usual course for entrance into municipal politics, through the Board of Education and as Alderman, Hocken in 1907 suddenly announced his candidature for the Board of Control—and was elected. As a Controller he was re-elected (Continued on Page Two)

EXPLOSION ON WARSHIP

Officer and Six Marines Killed Aboard U. S. S. Wyoming Off California Coast

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19:—Capt. John E. Trumbull and six marines were killed yesterday in an explosion aboard the United States battleship Wyoming off the California coast. There will be an official inquiry into circumstances of the explosion.

The seventh to die of the eleven in all who were injured expired today in the person of Sidney Emesley, marine private. He succumbed to his injuries aboard the naval hospital ship Relief here.

The explosion of a gun aboard the old demilitarized Wyoming occurred when the training vessel, along with sister ships, was laying down a barrage in manoeuvres. The wounded were rushed to San Pedro by the training ship for medical treatment immediately after the explosion.

Western Fisher Brought to Port

Hull of Vancouver Halibut Boat Is Undamaged as Result of Stranding

Her hull undamaged except for possible bruises as a result of the stranding and sinking Tuesday night in Stewart Anchorage, the Vancouver halibut boat Western Fisher was towed into port at 10:30 this morning by the Armour Salvage Co.'s service boat Algie which refloated her. The Western Fisher is now moored at the Armour Salvage floats. She will have to be dried out and her engine and ignition checked before she can run again.

U. S. Senate Told So Today By Majority Leader Robinson; Not Expected All Nations Will Permanently Commit Themselves To Repudiation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19: (CP)—Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic majority leader, told the United States Senate today that "there is a strong likelihood that in the next year something substantial may be accomplished looking toward a final settlement of the war debts."

"There is a growing public opinion in some of the debtor countries," Senator Robinson said "which recognizes the unavoidable necessity for declining to permit themselves to be permanently committed to a policy of repudiation."

Robinson said he did not speak for any other public authority than himself.

Collective Security

Right Hon. A. V. Alexander, one of the British Labor leaders, blames the British government for having abandoned the principle of collective security. After the experience of the past few years when collective security failed so dismally, we cannot understand how any reasonable person can put any trust in it. The British people at that time found that it was a "broken reed," something not to be trusted in the present state of European international morality. They discovered that physical strength was the only morality that appealed to many of the powers and to meet these powers on their own ground it was necessary to strengthen their own defences. This was discovered by Russia years before that, with the result that they trained a huge army and equipped flying machines and other war material as a protection against possible enemies.

Fatal to Civilians

The air attacks on the city of Madrid proved fatal to civilians, according to a dispatch received yesterday. In this modern warfare non-combatants suffer as much as do combatants, if dispatches are to be believed. It is the most brutal kind of warfare and the least civilized. What are we to think of our boasted civilization and Christianity when so-called Christian nations continue to kill women and children while the rest of the Christian world sits by and allows it to be done.

We remember the time when W. E. Gladstone roused the world against the Turks because of the massacre of Armenians. Now we find a condition just as bad, where Christians are killing Christians and including women and children in the slaughter.

Snow Everywhere

Evidently the railways of the southern part of the province are suffering just as badly as the north. The weather man is no respecter of districts. All are suffering. All we hope is that the run-off will not result in floods such as those of last year. The outlook is not very reassuring.

ECONOMIC DISCOURSE

Dean Clement Discusses Interdependence of Men and Communities

"Economic Man" was the subject of an address given by Dean F. M. Clement of the University of British Columbia yesterday afternoon to the Rotary Club at its regular weekly luncheon. He showed the interdependence of various communities and groups and the effect of high and low wages on the country and the disability of a democracy in dealing with large national problems. C. V. Evitt presided and guests were Theo Collart, G. P. Lyons, Dr. R. H. Bedford and C. M. Clarke of Vancouver.

The speaker started out with the statement that all wealth arose from land, labor and capital combined in such a way as to make a profit. He spoke of the people present, all of whom were executives in their relative businesses, as entrepreneurs, go-getters, men who did things for themselves and for the benefit of themselves, their wives and families. The opposite to this was illustrated by the "thumper" who, standing at roadside, wanted to be picked up and carried along.

The "rugged individualist" was one who wanted to be left alone to conduct his business in any manner he thought fit. This was all right as long as he did not do it at the expense of the community. He explained this by reference to Britain where over a century ago the industrialists thought they would be ruined if they were prevented from working children twelve hours a day. In this case they wanted to make profits at the expense of human lives.

The system of regulation and control had grown gradually since that time. Now it was generally recognized that no man could legally injure his neighbor.

Illustrating how dependent one part of the country was on the other, Dean Clement suggested that if there were a heap of halibut in Prince Rupert, a heap of wheat on the prairies and a pile of blankets at Montreal, each with no market, the owner would be poor. By exchanging those goods each benefitted. When an attempt was made to undercut fellow businessmen in trade or to put out price leaders the whole community had a right to step in and declare the system wrong.

Reconciling Values

The question of physical productivity as opposed to producing for value was discussed. The railways made money from a large crop when the farmers might at the same time lose money on it. There was no change in freight rates when the price of wheat was low. Others also benefitted similarly. A farmer might make money from a small crop in which the railways would make little. Values had to be reconciled with physical quantities.

The rule in industry was to employ labor at the lowest possible price. Yet, if wages were low, the people had no purchasing power and times were bad. Agriculture was the main industry in Canada but, unless the farmers had buying power, times were bad. It was estimated that today, if farmers had buying power as great as in their best years, there would be enough money in the country to give every unemployed person $500. It was then very desirable that the primary producers, the farmers, the fishermen, the lumbermen and others, should be well paid.

Individually, men were intelligent but, in the mass, they were like milling cattle wanting to lie down but unable to do so because, if one lay down, the others stepped on him. It required the cattleman to use his whip and bring them into line. In a democracy like this it was impossible to bring this about. The only thing to do was to try to straighten out the tangle in a democratic way.

MAYOR 18 TIMES
ALBURY, Aust., Feb. 19: (CP)—Mayor A. Wauch has been chief magistrate of this New South Wales town since 1925 and has filled the post 13 times since he was elected to the council in 1904.

in 1908 and 1909, but in 1910 when he aspired to mayoral honors, against G. R. Geary, he was defeated, only, however, in 1911 and 1912 to be returned again to the Board of Control with overwhelming majorities.

When Mayor Geary resigned in the fall of 1912 to become corporation counsel of the City of Toronto, the Board of Control elected Hocken mayor, and in 1913 and 1914 the electors themselves returned him to the office of chief magistrate of the city. Years and years before he was elected mayor he had announced his intention of holding that office "some day," and now in the mayoral chair, in the council or in the Board of Control alike, he proved himself a competent administrator of civic affairs. He was a hustler but with all established a reputation for himself that he was "an easy man to talk to." He was a good listener who wanted to know things for the sake of knowing them and irrespective of whether the knowledge was of any use to him.

Practical Visionary

In 1910 he submitted the subway scheme to relieve Toronto's street railway problem, and for years this question furnished him with a hard-fought platform. He was a practical visionary, one who saw into the future, appreciated the steps necessary for expansion and was willing to advocate measures for reform and progress, provided there was a sound economical basis for them. He had none of the characteristics of the ward politician, and his work for the city was the outcome of public spirit. He was an enthusiast by nature, and all his actions were brisk, never sauntering.

All through his career he showed a remarkable "nose for news," and thus he succeeded in bringing about the reorganization of the city's park department. He pursued his course, as he found it, in this matter, and he did later in others, with a relentless bringing him a considerable number of enemies.

In his city administration he had proved himself hard-headed but kindly-hearted, practical and dependable and he filled a difficult job with credit to himself and to his native city. In the election of 1917 his noble desire for public service and his noble sense of public duty compelled him to run for parliament in Toronto Centre West for the Union Party, and he was returned as a supporter of the Borden Wartime Government. Ever since he had been this riding's representative at Ottawa.

One of his platform planks on which he continuously hammered was with respect to the influx of cheap American periodicals and magazines. He wanted to stem the tide, and he wanted Canadians to show an appreciation of the output of their native writers and publishers. His stand caused the editorial comment that "Hocken is one of the greatest statesmen who ever lived through inadequate appreciation of his merits." He supported the scheme of the St. Lawrence deep waterways.

Horatio Clarence Hocken was born in Toronto on October 12, 1857, the son of Richard Hocken. He was educated in Toronto and in 1880 married Isabella Page. Of the union there were four children: Claribel, married to Alderman Plewman; Horatio G.; Lt. Richard (killed in action in the Great War); and Elsie, married to F. D. Chapman, of Toronto.

High Orange Officer

In the Orange order he held all the exalted offices available, having been Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West and later Orange Grand Master for British North America. He was a Mason and a member of the Sons of England, and a member of the Methodist Church. In his church association he for many years acted superintendent of the Parliament Street Methodist Sunday School, and before service in the morning, he conducted a Sunday morning class. He repeated the same feature later in the Bathurst Street Methodist Church.

LADY BALTIMORE CAKE

Lady Baltimore Cake is something really special and seems to convey all the dignity and charm of long ago when the ladies in full skirts and ringlets actually lived.

Three cups sifted cake flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ cup butter or other shortening, 1½ cups sugar, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon lemon extract, 4 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add lemon extract. Fold in egg whites quickly and thoroughly. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Spread filling between layers and frosting on top and sides of cake.

Lady Baltimore Filling and Frosting

One and one half cups sugar, ½ teaspoon light corn syrup, 2-3 cup boiling water, 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Bring quickly to a boil, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly, without stirring, until a small amount of syrup forms a soft ball in cold water, or spins a long thread when dropped from tip of spoon (200 degrees F.). Pour syrup in fine stream over egg whites, beating constantly. Add flavouring. Continue beating with rotary egg beater 10 to 15 minutes, or until frosting is cool and of consistency to spread. Use wooden spoon when too stiff for beater. (Frosting may be tinted delicately pink with vegetable coloring if desired). For the filling, take 6 chopped figs, ½ cup chopped raisins and ½ cup chopped pecan or walnut meats, add enough of the frosting to make a filling that will spread easily. Spread between layers of cake. Spread frosting on top and sides of cake and decorate with pecan or walnut halves.

When Valentines Were Love Alone

Show of Lacy Cards of 60 Years
 Ago, Recalls Cupid's Gala Days

NEW YORK, Feb. 19: (CP)—A warning that today's sentiment may afford tomorrow's laugh seems sadly implicit in the exhibition of old Valentines at the Museum of the City of New York.

The deceptively-dignified Georgian exterior of the museum conceals for the moment a sort of cupid's bower in which are displayed antique missives of paper lace and affection that have long outlasted their senders. One disappointed lover of the 70's or 80's of the past century forwarded to his faithless one this sentiment, framed in gold lace:

I dare not linger near thee as a brother,
 I feel my burning heart would still be thine,
 How could I hope my passionate thoughts to smother
 When yielding all the sweetness to another
 Which should be mine.

The museum officials were puzzled about another little drama of the past. It was impossible to deduce whether its sender was artful or merely thrifty. The first line of this autograph sentiment read originally "Go little card to Mary." Lines had been drawn through the word Mary, not so firmly, however, as to make it illegible, and "Emma" was substituted. Was this just a device to let Emma know she had a rival? The museum has no answer. The revised sentiment thus read:

Go, little card to Emma, ever dear
 Breathe the warm sigh and shed a tear.
 Dove with flower, go tell her how much I love her and impart
 The tender feeling of a broken heart.

More than 3,000,000 people from all parts of the Empire and nearly every foreign country are expected to be in London for the Coronation festivities.

"Such a jolly baby she is!"

"Always ready for a romp. We think St. Charles Milk has a lot to do with her perfect disposition."

HEALTHY BABIES are happy babies. And doctors recommend St. Charles Milk because it is so easy to digest.

St. Charles is pure fresh country milk evaporated just a few hours after milking time... its quality protected by Borden's under the strictest safeguards in the dairy industry.

Youngsters and grownups, too, can build health with St. Charles because it is irradiated by the finest method known to science for an extra supply of the important Sunshine Vitamin D.

St. Charles is better for babies and better for cooking and table use.

that the west was turning out some forty thousand boys and girls annually for whom the problem was to find jobs. Between 1900 and 1915 the boys and girls from the east could move west to assist in building up the country. Today the situation was changed. There were no new fields to move to. Boys and girls had to make their livelihood in the provinces where they were born and brought up. They must work out their livelihoods now in their own communities. The only suggestion the dean could offer was to study social and economic sciences, learn how to live in understanding one with the other and endeavor to embrace opportunities as they arose.

Speaking of immigration, Dean Clement suggested a balance between the city and farm population. If there was to be immigration, it should be to the farms which could always be counted upon to provide surplus population for the cities. It should also be remembered that the complexion of the immigration today would be the complexion of the general population later.

Prosperous Agriculture

The necessity of a prosperous agricultural industry for a prosperous Canada was stressed by Dean Clement. Wheat was one of the big factors in the economic life of Canada. That was why food policies of the countries abroad were of such importance to Canada. It had needed four consecutive wheat failures in Canada, a failure in the Argentine and the change of Russia from a wheat exporting to a wheat importing country to restore $1 a bushel wheat price. There was also a tendency to a drop in world wheat production. Three hundred million bushels too much would be produced if world crops were restored to what was formerly considered normal. This was not a very bright picture for the Canadian wheat farmer. It appeared necessary that crops should be converted.

There was much the same situation in regard to world sugar production. Java and Cuba had formerly been the chief producers of sugar. As they had done with wheat, many other countries—in intent on economic nationalism, self sufficiency and preparation for war—were now developing their own sugar production. All this went to break the world equilibrium. One country could not be expected to buy without selling. One country could not be impoverished without eventually affecting the others.

Purchasing Power

Dean Clement then discussed the trend toward decreased purchasing power. There had been a tendency for a comparatively few families to accumulate a large part of the wealth of the country at the expense of the others. In 1929 the average family income in Canada was $2500 but 16,000 families had an income of $100,000 or more. If this general income could be restored, people could once again spend more on food, clothing, personal effects, houses, etc. There would be benefit all around. The price level must be restored and this included the price level for the farmers' products. The income of the farms of Canada today was $600,000,000 less than it had been in 1926. Could this $600,000,000 be restored, it would mean an increased purchasing power to balance the 1,200,000 persons in the Dominion now on relief—a net average of $500.

Dean Clement justified the destruction, if necessary, of food in order to stabilize prices. Human values were to him more important than commodity values. It was better, he thought, to destroy food than to discharge labor or lower wages.

G. P. Lyons presided over the meeting. Tonight Dean Clement will give a discourse of particular interest to wives and mothers. His subject will be "Rural and Urban British Columbia, a Discussion of Educational, Social and Economic Problems." He will deal with little day to day problems incidental to food, shelter, work and play.

New assignments will probably be announced at the sessions of British Columbia Conference in May.

Mary Astor Is Wedded Again

Well Known Screen Actress Marries Young Mexican, Four Years Her Junior

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19:—Mary Astor, screen actress, yesterday admitted her elopement to Yuma, Arizona, and marriage to Manuel del Campo, scion of a prominent Mexico City family. The marriage was at first denied, Miss Astor explaining that it had been intended to keep it a secret on account of the death of del Campo's father.

After the marriage Miss Astor returned here while del Campo went to Mexico for the funeral. He will be here in about thirty days.

Miss Astor gave her age as thirty years, del Campo's as twenty six. The couple met in December at the home of Ruth Chatterton, del Campo having come here to study for the movies. It is Miss Astor's third marriage.

HILARIOUS FILM HERE

"Three Men on a Horse" With Cast Headed by Frank McHugh and Joan Blondell

"Three Men on a Horse," filmization of the stage hit which is now in its second year on Broadway, comes to the Capitol Theatre here as the week-end feature offering with Frank McHugh and Joan Blondell in the starring roles and a supporting cast which includes such favorites as Guy Kibbee, Carol Hughes and Allen Jenkins.

"Three Men on a Horse" is the side-splitting story of a meek little writer of greeting card verses who has the weird gift of picking winners in horse races. Three gamblers learn of his uncanny ability, imprison him and proceed to enrich themselves on his tips. A city wide search is instituted and uproarious complications then ensue. There is as merry a mix-up as ever set an audience chortling.

The picture version is said to be little changed from the stage play. Of course it has been possible to put in many scenes which the stage presentation could not have and this makes it all the more interesting and amusing.

listen to this - -

"With consistency, a great soul has simply nothing to do. Speak what you think today, and tomorrow what tomorrow thinks, though it contradict everything you said today."

You can agree with Emerson, or you can argue with him. Many folk do both.

But listen to this—twenty years ago Albert & McCaffery's coal was the best available. It is the best today. There's consistency for you! What twenty years ago thought, today does not contradict. Nor will tomorrow, for when better coal can be got, we shall have it.

Today, Albert & McCaffery's coal is not only the best available, but it is prepared in the best manner possible, all carefully screened and sorted in their yard.

It is the most economical, for besides giving you the most heat for the least money—it lasts!

Next time you need coal, just phone 116 or 117 to Albert & McCaffery and order Nanaimo-Wellington for furnace and heater. For the kitchen range, ask for Egg size Balkan Minehead—Alberta sootless. Its trade name is "Inferno"—it's hot! And it lasts, too.

You deserve the best!
