ERECT MONUMENT FOR CENTURY OF REBEL ROUTING IN ONTARIO

Last Stand of Mackenzie Uprising of 1837 Recalled as Footings Laid For Leader's Statue—History Treats Him Kindly

Tuesday will be the 100th anniversary of the Fight at Montgomery's Farm, to the average Ontario schoolboy of 40 years ago the Waterloo of William Lyon Mackenzie, the crash of an uprising from which the rebel leader escaped with a price of $500 on his head to stay 12 years in fitful exile across the international border.

Time and the flux of political opinion have dealt kindly with the memory of the fiery little Upper Canada Scotsman of 1837 who was the grandfather of the present Prime Minister. He is to be placed, literally, on a pedestal. The foundation is already laid for the Mackenzie statue in the vast lawn of the province's brown stone pile in Queen's Park, Toronto. It will be given one of the most prominent and honored places among Ontario's bronze and marble great.

Impassioned agitator for responsible government a century ago, the revaluated Mackenzie from his high stone dias will gaze on the rushing traffic of a city of which he was in 1837 the first mayor. Not far away he was burned in effigy in 1849 on returning from the United States under the general amnesty voted by the United Province of Canada—a union of the upper and lower provinces which his "treason" of 1837 helped to bring about.

Around the corner of the legislative building stands in granite silence, George Brown, staunch reformer of a later day, whom the reprobated Mackenzie had the temerity to oppose and defeat in Haldimand in the Assembly elections of 1851.

LINDBERGH'S BACK HOME

One Facts and His Mate Not Expected To Remain Long in United States

New YORK, December 6 (Canadian Press)—Just two years since they left this country in December 1935, for their self-exile abroad, Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh returned to the United States yesterday aboard the liner President Harding from England. They endeavored to slip ashore by a third-class gang plank without being recognized but were spied by customs men and others. However, they curtly refused all requests for interviews at the dock as well as at the estate of Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, at Englewood, New Jersey to which they immediately proceeded.

That their stay in United States will probably not be for more than a few weeks was indicated by the fact that they brought a minimum of personal effects with them and that they left their two children behind in England.

Ship's officers said that the visit of the hero of United States aviation and his wife, Anne, who has shared many of his notable flights with him would be brief and that they planned to return abroad immediately after Christmas. Although the guarded estate close by the Hudson River holds the secret of why the couple came and how long they will stay, Col. Lindbergh is believed to be back in the United States to confer with Pan-American Airways for which he is technical adviser. That has been one of his capacities in England.

Sir Edward Beatty Says Time Not Yet Arrived For Building Of Peace Outlet; Route Is Undecided

The C.P.R. president suggested to the committee that it should continue to gather all the data possible respecting the resources of the territory tributary to the North Pacific Coast and make it available to the railway companies and to the governments as a guide to them in reaching the best possible conclusion as to the route which would contribute most to the prosperity of the Peace District and insure effectively the economical use of the wealth reposing in the country to be traversed between the grain fields and the sea.

SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

The Salvation Army is making its annual appeal for those who for various reasons are down on their luck this Christmas. This paper is again opening its columns to record all donations. Money for the purpose will be paid in to this paper and a check for the full amount contributed with absolutely no deductions of any kind will be handed to the officer in charge of the Salvation Army. Possibly some of the people who receive help from this fund may not deserve help of any kind. Most of them do. We want everyone to enjoy this festive season whether they deserve it or not. For that reason we ask readers of this paper to consider the possibility of making a donation to this fund. The Salvation Army officers act as the agents of the people who donate and do their best to see that the needy get the help required.

CONSERVATIVE LEADERSHIP

When it was decided to continue Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett in the leadership of the Conservative party after the defeat of the party two years ago we ventured the opinion that it was a mistake on their part for that in order to insure success it was desirable to train a younger man for the job. Our opinion has not changed and evidently many Conservatives are coming around to this way of thinking. Not only is General A. D. McRae, the man who was largely responsible for making Mr. Bennett Prime Minister, outspoken in criticism of the leader but Conservative newspapers from coast to coast are asking for a party convention at which the question of leadership will be to the fore. This convention would primarily have to draw up a party platform on which the future policy of the Conservatives would be based. It is pointed out by some journals that at present the party has no policy. That being so it is in a bad way. To be without effective leadership and without a policy a party is liable to die. In noting the discussions it is rather interesting to see how the question of the personnel of the leadership is avoided. There is in the party a group that favors Hon. W. D. Herridge with his rather radical policies while opposed to him are those who would continue pretty much as heretofore with the old policies of high protection and safety first, ignoring the popular desire for action on the part of politicians. There seems to be no second choice in the party that has shown any ability for leadership and to switch from Mr. Bennett to his brother-in-law would not be so much a let-down for the present leader as to adopt an outsider of no particular ability. Evidently General McRae is still a power in the Conservative party and it may be that he may be looking for the leadership. At any rate he is not supporting Mr. Bennett and he might support another choice.

ERECT MONUMENT FOR CENTENARY OF REBEL ROUTING IN ONTARIO

militant Louis Papineau in Lower Canada (now Quebec) the same year, was the armed expression of the struggle for responsible government in the two British colonies. In Lower Canada the racial element added fuel to the flames, prolonging the armed revolt and resulting in far greater loss of life and property than in the English-speaking province.

It is a matter of history that in the governor of Upper Canada, then Sir Francis Bond Head, were centered all the real powers of provincial government of the time. His self-appointment executive councillors were responsible to him alone. The elected Legislative Assembly had little voice in the affairs of the province. It was the day of the historic "Family Compact" a group of leaders in church and state able to control the public offices, a bureaucracy in a pioneer country, O local oligarchy, one writer called it.

Threw Passes Into Bay

In 1828, five years after he reached Canada from Scotland, Mackenzie, then about 30 years of age began his attacks on the Family Compact in his newspaper, the Colonial Advocate. So incensed were the friends of the ruling class that his printing plant was thrown into Toronto Bay a gesture bringing him such handsome damages that he was able to return to his campaign with greater vigor. He became popular with the people. Elected to the Assembly he was five times expelled from the House and just as often re-elected.

Not all the Reformers of the time were willing to go as far as Mackenzie in seeking the same right and procedure of self-government as they or their fathers had enjoyed in the old land. He was soon at the head of a left wing which found constitutional reform measures too slow in coming and the situation demanding an appeal to force.

By the fall of 1837 Papineau and Mackenzie had agreed the time was opportune to strike. Without doubt the government of Upper Canada was aware of the meetings and plottings of Mackenzie. Sir Francis Bond Head, in his viceroyal speech at the next legislative session after the fighting, said: "I considered that, if an attack by the rebels was inevitable, the more I encouraged them to consider me defenceless, the better."

Lower Canada had asked for troops and Sir Francis, in his own words, had purposely dismissed the whole force from the upper province. Mackenzie, on November 15, a week before the climax, published in his paper a draft of a resolution for adoption when "constitutional government" was established.

Planned Blow

Assured of a "force of between 4,000" insurgents, the leaders laid plans for a "march on Toronto Dec. 7-8-9." The rugged pioneers of lately-cleared districts near the city were roused to enthusiasm for the venture. They were to assemble "as secretly as possible" at Montgomery's Tavern four miles north of the city limits at that time and march on the provincial capital. "The four thousand stand-arms in the city hall were to be seized", says Charles Lindsey, Mackenzie's biographer. "The governor and his chief advisers were to be captured and placed in safe custody; the garrison was to be taken possession of." A convention, "the members of which had been to be elected in the previous August," was to be called, and the constitution submitted for adoption. "Such was the helpless condition of the government, and so few were its willing supporters supposed to be, that all this was expected to be effected without the effusion of blood", the writer remarks.

While Mackenzie scoured the countryside organizing the insurgents, his lieutenants in the city became alarmed at the government's preparations for repelling an invasion of the city and circulated orders for a rebel attack December 4 instead of waiting till December 7. Mackenzie always regarded this as a fatal error, since Colonel Anthony Van Egmond, selected as commander-in-chief of the rebel forces, would not arrive from his home in the western part of the province till the latter date. Van Egmond was a former colonel in Napoleon's army and had seen much war service. Also, more time was needed for orderly mobilization.

But the insurgents were already on the road to Montgomery's Tavern and it was too late to return to the original plan. Mackenzie tried to attack at once but the meagre force, hungry and sore after long marches over muddy roads, voted to wait. They had expected to find arms, ammunition and food at Montgomery's. There was little or nothing for them. Besides news had come of serious reverses to the insurgent forces in Lower Canada. The rank and file was dispirited.

Two or three days, valuable to the rebel cause, were lost, while the loyalist Colonel Moodie a veteran of the war of 1812, was shot and killed as he attempted to ride through the rebel lines on a scouting enterprise. Captain Anthony Anderson, in temporary command of the insurgents, was shot dead by a loyalist sniper.

Meanwhile the insurgent forces had grown to about 700 but were speedily reduced by desertions to 500 or less. "The patriot forces were a half-armed mob, without discipline, headed by civilians, and having no confidence in themselves or their military leaders," writes an historian. A few were armed with rifles but the majority had long pikes and there were a number worse than useless having no other weapons than sticks and cudgels.

During the three days loyalists flocked to the city in force and on December 7 Colonel James Fitzgibbon marched out to Montgomery's with 1,000 militiamen, well armed and equipped and accompanied by artillery.

"The skirmish that ensued was very brief," says one historian. "The rebels made an attempt to reply with their muskets but the noise of the cannon-balls crashing through the woods seems to have upset the nerves of the simple farmers. . . A few shots were exchanged and then the rebel force broke and ran." One rebel was killed but, according to the writer, on the government side there were no casualties.

Mackenzie himself has another version: "Never did men fight more courageously," he reported. "In the face of grape and canister. . . they stood their ground, and killed and wounded a large number of the enemy but were at length compelled to retreat. Mackenzie remained on the scene till the last moment, attempting to rally his men, an authority says."

The government took many prisoners, including Samuel Lount and Peter Matthews, who the following April were hanged "on high treason, Colonel Van Egmond, who took command of the rebel forces at the eleventh hour, died in the prison. . . base of a flagpost on the At Street site of Montgomery's Tavern, now occupied by an impressive building for the distribution of His Majesty's mails, the story of cause and effect is written in brass as follows:

"Original headquarters of William Lyon Mackenzie, leader of the Upper Canada Rebellion"

"Scene of brief skirmish 7th December, 1837, resulting in defeat of insurgents by loyal militia commanded by Lt.-Col. James Fitzgibbon."

"This rising, an outcome of serious grievances against the dominant 'Family Compact' was an important factor in bringing about the legislative union of Upper and Lower Canada in 1841 and the permanent establishment of representative government, a principle then first extended to a British colony."

Don't experiment with Children's Colds

Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

When your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub. It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medicine of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details on every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, often as needed, even on the youngest child.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin...

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

CONVENTION OF NATIVES IS SUCCESS

Brotherhood At Bella Bella—Business Meeting and Social

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia held its annual convention at Bella Bella last week with delegates in attendance from numerous villages along the coast including Kitimaat, Bella Bella, Hartley Bay, Kientu, Kitkatia, Port Simpson, Bella Coola, Massett and Rivers Inlet as well as some from Hazelton and elsewhere in the interior. The delegates are leaving Bella Bella today for their various homes. Officials of the Brotherhood reported on their activities during the past year. These had been attended with a goodly measure of success. Resolutions from the various villages were received and considered. One of them petitions the Dominion Government for a conference on matters pertaining to the natives.

In his opening address, the president, Alfred Adams of Massett, spoke of the need of God's aid in all the movements of the Brotherhood. Rev. W. R. Welch, pastor of the Bella Bella United Church, gave prayer and a sermon. The Brotherhood was on the right road to success, he said, when they chose God for its leader.

The first vice-president, Thomas Gosnell of Port Simpson, arrived at Bella Bella just in time for the convention. He was in the city on the Catala last night returning to Port Simpson.

Also in attendance was Rev. James Gillett, former Indian Agent for the Queen Charlotte Islands and now stationed at Bella Bella. Mr. Gillett, who was given a hearty welcome, said that he had travelled over five thousand miles this summer in the work of his agency.

Social functions were, of course, one of the features of the convention and the people of Bella Bella excelled themselves as hosts. There were several excellent banquets and entertainments.

During the convention a pretty wedding was solemnized when Miss Gertrude Martin became the bride of Johnny White. All the delegates were invited to the nuptial proceedings.

Election of Officers

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Alfred Adams, Massett.

First Vice-President, Thomas Gosnell, Port Simpson.

Second Vice-President, Eddie Clifton, Hartley Bay.

Third Vice-President, Guy Williams, Kitmaat.

General Secretary, Henry Baillie, Port Simpson.

Recording Secretary, Richard Carpenter, Bella Bella.

Advisory Secretary, William Beynon, Prince Rupert.

Treasurer, Caleb William, Bella Bella.

Next year's convention will be held at Kitimaat on date to be set by the executive.

BRITISH TOMMIES SEARCH NATIVES FOLLOWING TERRORISM

Following outbreak of terrorism among Arabs of Palestine, Great Britain took precautionary methods of protecting Jewish and British citizens by searching natives before they were allowed to enter the city of Jerusalem as shown above. The British Tommies doing the searching are members of the Black Watch Regiment. In reprisal for the acts of terrorism British soldiers burned several homes of alleged Arab terrorists. During the height of the outbreak Hai Amin el Hussein, Mufti of Jerusalem, fled the city and is thought to have made his way to Syria.

Columario Mine Appears to be Through—Joe Felber Returns to Terrace District to Resume Mining Operations

The Columario mine up Gold Creek from Usk, for which great things had been expected a few years ago, is being dismantled of machinery and equipment. The material has been taken to Terrace by trucks whence it is placed on freight cars for shipment south. The closing down of Columario, which now appears to be permanent, will be a bad blow to Usk.

Joe Felber, well known Terrace prospector and mining man, has returned to Terrace after spending three years in the south. He has moved out to his mining claims on the west side of Copper River and is getting ready to push development.

Aage Nelson, who has been working a placer lease adjacent to Manson Creek in the Omineca mining country, has arrived in Smithers where he will spend a while before proceeding south for the winter.

Stylists Look For Windsors

American Fashion May Take Tips From Duchess' Clothes

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (C.P.)—Although no definite time has been set for her arrival, the Duchess of Windsor—regarded here as the world's foremost fashion plate of 1937-38—has chosen, for her first trip "back home", which is expected shortly, evening clothes which glitter with silver instead of gold.

Recently she dined in Paris in one of Mainbocher's most striking new dinner frocks, made of silver and black-checked lame woven like a man's suiting and cut on a two-piece design with the slender-fitted waistline which she loves. She is expected to include in her American wardrobes which will be closely scanned for fashion tips when she arrives in New York with the Duke.

Most of the new dinner frocks which she will wear at American parties are of lame and georgette while her more formal gowns are fashioned of tulle, sombre velvet and flashing metal fabrics. Beading and spangles accent some of them.

A number are cut with a slender-fitted centre section which molds the waist and hipline in smooth contours and sets no waistline demarcation.

Besides her evening clothes the Duchess has ordered for her trip some beautiful furs and warm wool travelling clothes.

DRAMA IN ABUNDANCE

Bette Davis Heads Cast of "That Certain Woman" At Capitol Theatre

Adventure, romantic love, martyrdom and mother love are all portrayed in the melodrama "That Certain Woman", featuring Bette Davis, which comes to the Capitol Theatre here at the first of this week.

The story is that of the widow of a slain gangster who, despite the scorn of the world and the persecution of enemies, wins her way to business success and the affections of a worth-while man.

Henry Fonda has the male romantic lead with others in the cast including Ian Hunter, Anita Louise, Donald Crisp, Hugh O'Connell, Mary Phillips and Herbert Rawlinson.

Locales of the action include Monte Carlo, London, Paris and various other Old World capitals, as well as New York City.

Showing with "That Certain Woman" is a revival of "Ghost Goes West", as well as a news reel and short miscellaneous subjects. There will be one complete show only.

Convention May Be Postponed To Following Year

Rotary Club Agrees to Postponement of District Gathering From 1938 to 1939.

The Prince Rupert Rotary Club has decided to recommend the postponement of the holding of the annual district convention from 1938 to 1939, the meeting then to be held at Juneau, Ketchikan and Prince Rupert, one day at each place.

If the change is made it will mean that the district convention next summer will be held at the same time as the annual convention of Rotary International at San Francisco for which great preparations are being made and to which delegates are expected from almost every nation in the world.

If the plan goes through the Californian Rotarians plan to bring a shipload of members from that state to Prince Rupert in 1939.

CHEERIO.

Bernice Palmer says . . .

Here is a tip for those who still make bread—if you will use your rotary egg beater and beat the yeast, potato water and flour, adding flour gradually and beating until it is too stiff to beat any longer, it will not be necessary to knead the bread at all. The addition of a can of condensed milk to your bread water will make a bread that is not only more nutritious but one that keeps moist longer.

"Red" Newman Of Dumbells In Vancouver Again

"Red" will take the master of ceremonies post at a monster Christmas carnival in Vancouver on December 10 and 11 in aid of the underprivileged children of the Great War veterans and is as enthusiastic over his task as a kid with a new toy.

Early in the new year, Mr. Newman announces the veterans are holding a big re-union in Fort William and says it will be one of the most successful ever held by the returned soldiers.

Arthur Brooksbank, who has been on a vacation trip as far south as San Francisco, returned to the city on the Princess Norah yesterday morning.
