Annexation Of Sudeten Area To Germany Is Demanded By Hitler According To Nazi Spokesman

Irreconcilable Stands Taken By Two Countries In Europe FRANCE IS

Today Makes Invasion of Czechoslovakia Seem Inevitable

LONDON, September 10.—Germany and Czechoslovakia took apparently irreconcilable stands today while their neighbors searched for a way to save the peace of Europe and fearfully prepared against war.

Czechoslovakia officials declared the Prague government had done its utmost to appease the Nazisupported German minority demands for autonomy and could not go further.

Nazi spokesmen in Nuremberg said that Chancellor Hitler now demands nothing less than German annexation of the Sudeten area.

"Germany will stand united, come what may," the Fuhrer told the cheering Hitler boys and girls at the party conference at Nuremberg.

There are still two hopes for preserving peace. One is the possibility that Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, might tell Hitler that England will aid Czechoslovakia against invasion. Official statements here, however, denied reported decisions reached by the British government to send a strong note to Hitler. The second hope lay in a suggestion in Paris that invasion could be prevented by reorganization of the republic as a federated state.
