Ketchikan Very Much Charm When Enthusiasm Runs High And Tourist Attractions Great

By H. F. PULLEN

Ketchikan is a city of great charm. On our visit at the beginning of the week we found it full of surprises. Hundreds of splendid people, plenty of spacious and kept homes, surprising gardens, an artistic park and many tourist attractions that cannot well be taken away from it.

It would not be fair to compare Ketchikan with Prince Rupert. They are so different although they alike in that both derive their sustenance from the fishing industry, both salmon and halibut. Ketchikan is on a large island which is covered with timber, some good and some of it not so good. Due to the activities of the Service something between thirty-five and thirty miles of has been built, about ten miles along the shore in one direction and fifteen in another with the beginning of a highway across the for several miles having been to two beautiful holiday resorts, small lakes and streams surrounded with fine timber.

At the first lake what attracted attention was a big moose grazing in the lush grass on a point in the lake only little more than a hundred yards away. At the far end of the lake was a fine bathing place with a log pavilion with table and chairs, all in rustic style. The name of the place is the "Pines" and the only Prince Rupert names up to that time. The under-structure around the pavilion had been cut and destroyed and all along the highways in the recreational reserve the had been cut and burned and the had been neat and tidy. What had been laid on and nothing had to have been neglected. It might add to the pleasure of enjoyment of the visitors. It was a damp day, we were the only ones at the time but I was told that the park was used a great deal by Ketchikan residents.

Most Striking Thing

I have mentioned this first because it was the most striking thing I saw on Revilla Gigedo Island. But there was also a little park in the heart of the city with a stream running through it. This park was a marvel of artistry in which use had been made of every natural feature. While the flowers were nothing to brag about, as flowers, they were well placed, fitted in with the landscape and helped to make up a perfect picture. In the stream salmon were making their way along in shoals, spawning in the riffles or pushing their way onward to the stream's source.

The salmon are one of the great tourist attractions in Ketchikan. They may be seen at times at the mouth of the stream between the new federal building and the breakwater and also just below the falls where they jump the falls or force their way up the fish ladder. Being right in the centre of things these fish attract all tourist visitors.

Commercially, Ketchikan is a busy place. The stores and hotels at this time of year all seem to be busy and they open at any time of day or night if business is offering. Evidently a considerable part of their revenue is derived from tour-

SUDETENS ASK MORE

Central European Situation Does Not Look So Good Again Today

LONDON, Sept. 7: (CP)—Although hopes of a peaceful settlement of the German Sudeten minority question in Czechoslovakia which has been menacing the peace of Europe, were raised yesterday as a result of sweeping concessions offered by the Czech government, the situation was still regarded as critical in London last night following reports from Prague that the Sudetens had declared the offers failed to meet their demands and even more concessions must be given.

It is believed the Czech government may now consider the division of the country into separate districts with autonomy on all questions except those of national unity and interest.

The British government opposes secession to Germany of Czechoslovak territory occupied by the Sudeten minority, it was stated officially today.

It is said on high authority that the purport of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's admonition to Konrad Henlein on the Czechoslovak government's latest offer of concessions was: "Don't accept. Ask for more and you will get it."

Negotiations Suspended

The Sudeten German party broke off negotiations with the Czechoslovak government today on the disputed autonomy question after receiving reports that Sudeten deputies had been assaulted by Czech police. The clash occurred at Marisch Ostrau near the Polish border and immediately President Benes was notified that negotiations were discontinued pending a thorough investigation of the incident.

"BLEEDER" ALL LIFE

Hemophilia Made Virtual Invalid Of Prince of Bourbons

Trained To Rule
 Fled From Madrid With Royal Family In 1931

MIAMI, Florida, Sept. 7: (AP)—Dead following an automobile crash here, Alfonso de Bourbon y Battenberg, one-time heir to the Spanish throne who, for love of a Cuban girl, renounced his royal rights and titles, suffered throughout his life from the Battenberg malady—hemophilia, a condition which causes its victims to bleed excessively from the slightest wounds.

The disease circumscribed the prince's every activity and kept him almost constantly on the brink of death. Occurring only in the men of the Battenberg line—that of his mother, ex-Queen Victoria—it was transmitted by the women of the family to their sons through generation after generation. The women themselves were free from it.

Other ailments, some of which persisted because his hereditary malady prevented proper treatment for them, made the tall, slender, blond ex-crown prince frail and a cripple. A malignant tumor in one leg, which could not be relieved by surgery because the cut of a knife would probably be fatal, was the cause of an especially serious illness at Havana in February, 1936. Twenty blood transfusions saved him at that time.

It was in a Swiss sanitarium in 1932 that he met and wooed the beautiful Edelmira Sampedro-Ocejo y Robato, daughter of a wealthy Havana merchant. Both were there for treatment and this fact coupled with her status as a commoner, accented the opposition of ex-King Alfonso, the young man's father, to the match. Despite this refusal of consent, the bans were posted in June, 1932 at Lausanne, Switzerland, and the marriage followed on the 23 of the month. There was sentiment in this date, for the young people met on the 23 of one month and became betrothed on the same date, another.

Comforted By Mother

After the wedding, the father made a gesture of forgiveness. He granted to his son the title of Count of Cavadonga in exchange for that of Prince of the Asturias, which belongs to heirs to the Spanish throne. The ex-king also allowed his son to retain the right to be addressed as "royal highness" and settled on him a monthly income of 17,200 francs, then equivalent to about $1,150.

But the family breach was not healed for the ex-monarch refused to receive his daughter-in-law. In 1934, when a quarrel over family affairs separated the couple, the prince refused flatly a suggestion that he go to live with his father in Italy.

Ex-Queen Victoria, estranged from her husband, sympathized with her son throughout these troubles. She met the new countess soon after the wedding and they saw each other frequently in Paris.

The 1914 quarrel was reported to have been caused by the countess' refusal to wear mourning when her husband's youngest brother, who like him, was a hemophiliac, died from minor injuries received in an automobile accident. She left Paris for her home in Cuba but after six months, a series of letters and cablegrams effected a reconciliation.

The prince sailed for New York arriving May 30, 1935, and being

French Reserves Have Been Ordered To Line Facing German Border

ASK GOV'T TO PAY UP

City Commissioner Seeking $80,043.26 Due in Local Improvement Taxation

City Commissioner W. J. Alder has just written to the provincial government, accompanying his communication with a fifty-one page itemized tax account, suggesting to the government the desirability of remitting to the city an amount of $80,043.26 due and over due in local improvement taxation.

The commissioner's communication points out that the principle of local improvement taxation payment has already been recognized in Victoria and North Vancouver. Further the Dominion government pays such taxes.

"If the private owners are compelled to pay not only for street improvements in front of their own property and lots reverted to the city but also must shoulder the burden of government-owned lots, the result must be disastrous," the letter continues.

Mr. Alder suggests that the city spread its payments of local improvement taxes over a period of three years. This would materially assist the city in making up its sinking fund payments which amount to $59,000 annually. These sinking funds are now intact.

As a result of representations made by the city, the provincial government last year paid all back local improvement taxes on the liquor vendor's store property as well as the house in Westview occupied by the resident mining engineer.

UNITY UNDER DEMOCRACY

Anthony Eden says that in the autocratic states, and we presume that he includes Russia in the list, there is a vitality and an enthusiasm on behalf of the faith that has been fostered among them which it would be a grave mistake to belittle. He sees mass enthusiasm and fervor the result of ruthless propaganda and suppression of criticism. Children are trained to dedicate their lives to the ideal of the country as represented by the government and doubts and questions are not allowed. The training they receive has no duplicate in history. By this intensive training and the elimination of criticism, a national unity is created which stands in marked contrast to the unity of the democracy where students are taught to question everything and to think for themselves.

Judging by what one reads the British Empire today would be at sixes and sevens. Canada and South Africa sometimes seem almost as if their people might split over the matter of taking part in a possible war. No crisis presents itself so no unity is needed.

But Anthony Eden sees a great change taking place immediately should the Empire be in danger. Immediately national unity would be attained and it would be a unity that would be more effective than any in the totalitarian states. He points out that in the great war those nations which had been trained in democratic traditions best withstood the strain.

This may not be a very happy subject to discuss but it is very appropriate at a time like this when personal freedom is at a low ebb and the dictators on both sides threaten the idealism of all free peoples. In Canada we maintain our freedom to the limit and often overstep it by allowing representatives of other ideologies to preach their doctrines by making unfair and misleading statements in the course of their propaganda. We allow them to injure our industrial life and poison the minds of the young, all in the sacred name of "liberty." It is only in time of stress that pressure is exerted to curb these activities. Subversive movements are part of the war machine of the enemy but we notice them only when the necessity becomes so great that we cannot allow them to continue. If the British Empire was attacked tomorrow these movements would have to be carefully hidden. They would, doubtless, continue but only under cover.

KETCHIKAN CITY OF VERY MUCH CHARM

ists, this being the first and last port of call in Alaska.

What struck me forcibly was the alertness of the people and the keenness of the businessmen of Ketchikan. They have plenty of pep. Their enthusiasm is catching and visitors tend to get some of it as a result of a visit. They all believe in their city and are never backward in expressing themselves in regard to it. There seems to be an excellent community spirit. The welfare of Ketchikan comes ahead of all other considerations.

Prince Rupert is well ahead in the matter of flower gardens but in rock gardens Ketchikan excels us. Houses are being built gradually farther up the mountainside until walking-home to lunch must be a problem. However, they all have cars and most of them make enough money to take their cars outside occasionally and make a tour through the States.

The stores are right up to the minute but, while it has a ten and fifteen cent store where cheap things are sold, the average prices seem to be higher than in Prince Rupert. Citizens there pay nine dollars a year or a dollar a month for their daily paper. Restaurant prices are higher.

In good locations store rents are high but the merchants generally seem to make money, keep up good establishments and spend freely. Everybody seems happy and not quite as prone to grumble as in Prince Rupert.

Cheap Bus Service

Among the cheap things in the city was an admirable bus service running out Tongas Avenue along the waterfront for two miles and the cost of a ride is only five cents each way or six rides for 25c. These buses are very comfortable. They are owned by different parties but operate alternately, giving a regular half hour service all day and well into the night. They are well patronized by both visitors and residents. I was told the buses cost three thousand dollars each. They run under charter from the city and must give proper service or lose their charter. Evidently they are paying very well.

Another cheap thing in Ketchikan is fire protection. They have a volunteer fire brigade with only the chief drawing a salary. I was told.

Finally may I remind Prince Rupert people that we get a lot of business from Ketchikan. Our railway gets a great deal of freight that way and there is a possibility of getting more. There should be a great deal of community interest between the two cities. We both might benefit from knowing each other better.

The Letter Box

ROAD TO FLOATS

Editor, Daily News: These few lines are written in behalf of the property owners of Sections 7 and 8 without animosity to any other section of the city.

Whereas I, in common with many other property owners in these two sections, feel that a policy of discrimination is being imposed on us through the failure of the City Commissioner to open the avenue of access and egress to the fishermen's floats and Dry Dock through the roadway leading down from Sixth Avenue on the east side of Hays Creek.

It has been stated that the reason we are denied the use of this short cut road to the above mentioned places is because the Dry Dock company objects due to the fact they are obliged to maintain that portion of the waterfront roadway leading from Swift's premises to the dry dock known as the Dry Dock Road. That, in my opinion, is a reasonable objection from the dry dock management point of view but should not be accepted by the Commissioner as an excuse for denying the public the use of the short cut route.

Two four-foot posts and a pole at the dry dock gate would prohibit the alleged abuse to the dry dock road and would allow sections 7 and 8 their proper entrance to these waterfront points without using the dry dock roadway and the people of other sections would not be inconvenienced in the slightest as they would have the same open roadway to the dry dock they now possess. If going to fishermen's float they could travel by way of Sixth or Seventh Avenues across Hays Creek and down the new road to the floats.

This would simply be a matter of equality to all sections of the city and would be a far greater incentive to the people of sections 7 and 8 to pay up taxes than the annual visit of Mr. Buckley.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
GEO. B. CASEY

MENTIONED AS PONTIFF

Cardinal Laurenti Might Have Been Pope Had He Lived

ROME, Sept. 7: (AP)—The name of Cardinal Camillo Laurenti, dead here, was often mentioned as one of those who might be chosen Pope.

He was stationed in Rome at the time of Benedict's death and was at his bedside during his fatal illness, being the last man to kiss the Pope before he expired.

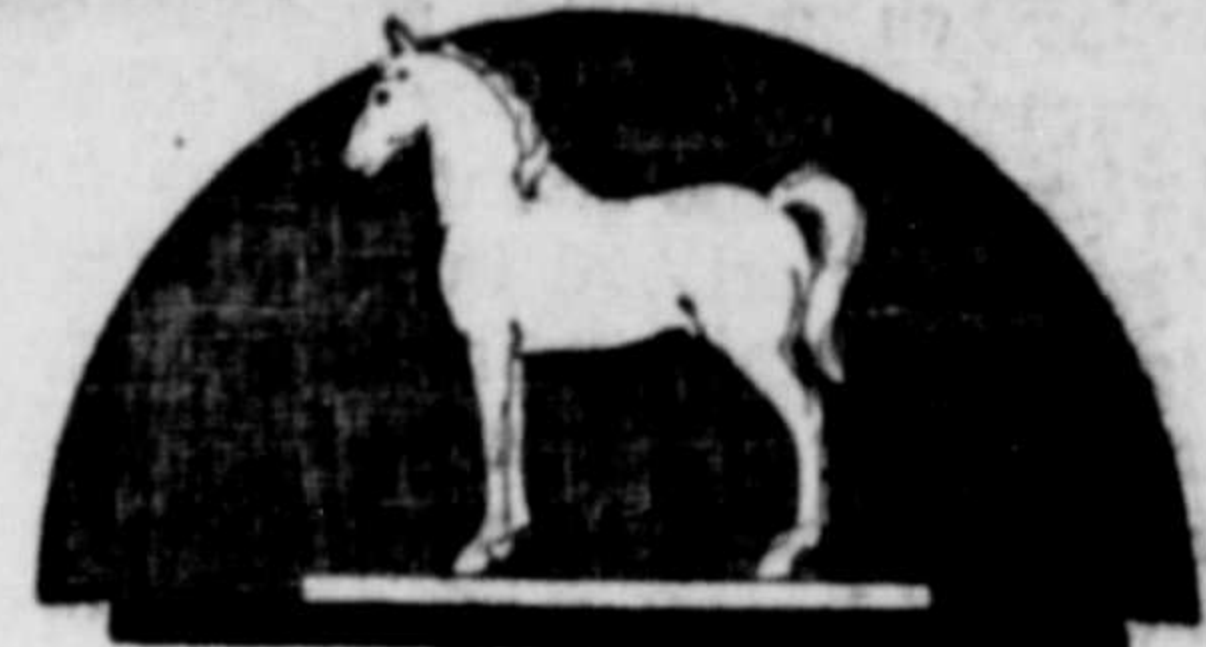

Laurenti is said to have been born in Rome. Early in his career he became connected with the University of Propaganda where he was for some time a teacher of philosophy and became secretary of the Congregation of the Propaganda in 1911.

He retained that position until 1921 when he was made a Cardinal in company with Cardinals Ratti and Porcelli. Cardinal Laurenti was mentioned as one of those who might be appointed as Apostolic delegate to Washington to succeed Falconio in 1911 but Monsignor Bonzano, rector of the Propaganda College, was chosen.

Cardinal Laurenti spoke English fluently and had considerable experience in affairs affecting the Catholic Church in America. By his connection with the Congregation of the Propaganda he taught many American students.

Later he was Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Rites.

"TOY WIFE" FEATURED

"The Toy Wife" starring the great actress, Louise Rainer, with Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young sharing honors as leading men, is a special attraction at the Capitol Theatre here for the middle of this week.

A story of life in New Orleans and on the Louisiana plantations of the 1850's. "The Toy Wife" presents Miss Rainer in the title role of a petite southern belle who gives up a fascinating gambler and swordsman, Robert Young, to marry a respectable young attorney in the person of Melvyn Douglas. When she subsequently comes to believe that her elder sister has usurped her place in the affections of her husband and child, she runs away with the other man. Before its conclusion the drama is brought to a stirring denouement.

Authenticity of the background in the days of the French aristocracy is stressed and southern music of the period is woven throughout the story.

Heading the supporting cast is Barbara O'Neill as the elder sister; H. B. Warner as the father and Alma Kruger as the mother.

met at the dock by his wife. It was his first visit to America and he said he'd like to get a job writing book reviews for a newspaper. But no position eventuated and the couple went to Havana. After his desperate illness there they again separated. The wife remained in Cuba and her husband, announcing his intention of returning to Paris, sailed for New York where for weeks he dallied among the bright lights, tottering into night clubs with the aid of two canes.

Elders of Six Children
Born Prince of the Asturias May 10, 1907, Alfonso was trained to rule Spain. He was the eldest of four sons of Alfonso XIII and Victoria but only the third, Don Juan who later was designated official heir, was normal. The second son Don Jaime, was a deaf mute and the fourth, Don Gonzalo, inherited the cure of hemophilia. There also were two daughters, Infanta Beatriz and Infanta Maria Cristina.

The family fled from Madrid when the Spanish monarchy was overthrown on April 14, 1931. Prince Alfonso told later how he escaped from the revolutionists by riding from the palace in an ambulance, a pistol at his side, to an obscure railway station, thence by rail across the French frontier. "It was the only time I ever rode third class," he said. "They put me in a third class compartment because no Spaniard would have thought to look there for a crown prince."

W. O. Fulton returned to the city on the Prince George this morning after having attended the recent Liberal convention in Kelowna.

BETTER LIGHT Makes Better Marks

Are you doing all you can to make sure your children get good marks in school? Do they get enough rest and sleep and good food? Of course, you say! But that's not enough! School days usually mean study nights. And many parents who would never starve their children's stomachs are literally starving their eyes—with insufficient, or glaring light.

Your children live outdoors during the long summer months. Their eyes are accustomed to the intense light of outdoors—up to what lighting experts measure as 10,000 foot candles of light. Indoors, in many homes, their eyes get only 5 to 10 foot candles of light under the average study lamp—when less than 20 foot candles is definitely harmful to youthful eyes.

The only way to be sure your children are getting enough light is to have one of our lighting experts measure the actual light your lamps are now providing. This service is free, and without obligation. Have it done at once!
