Cooper Quits Chamberlain

Peace With Honor! Peace For Our Time! So Says British Premier As Populace Cheers

LONDON, October 1: (CP)—“Peace with honor! Peace for our time!” Such was the way in which Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, speaking yesterday following his return from the Munich four-power conference, described the outcome of that momentous gathering. He further expressed the belief that it was only a matter of time before a larger and earlier settlement of all outstanding European issues.

The crowds continued cheering in the streets as Mr. Chamberlain visited with King George VI at Buckingham Palace and great demonstrations as the King, Queen and Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain later appeared on the balcony of the palace.

There may be some criticism in the quarters that Chamberlain has yielded to the dictators but he may have gone too far in his efforts for peace, merely averting war, but, as far as has been seen, yesterday was certainly the Premier's in the hearts of the majority of the people. He undoubtedly, the hero of the hour with popular admiration of his Munich mission which averted a world war by ceding Sudetenland to Germany continuing high. Telegrams from all parts of the world came in, congratulating Chamberlain on the success of his peace mission. When Parliament convenes Monday there will, undoubtedly, be criticism in “Labor” and Conservative quarters. Indeed, it is evident that these will be a barrage of political opponents. L. C. M. Amery and Winston Churchill, prominent Conservatives, have criticized the policy of Chamberlain.

The Archbishop of Canterbury issued instructions for national fasting and prayer in all Anglican churches on Sunday.

Informed sources said they understood Chamberlain had persuaded Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini to negotiate a new agreement with Great Britain and France immediately on completion of the solution of the Czech problem.

Another result of the Munich conference is expected to be the immediate resumption of a more effective Spanish non-intervention pact between Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

The reception which Chamberlain received in London was matched with those accorded Premier Edouard Daladier in Paris and Premier Benito Mussolini in Italy as they returned from Munich. In Rome Mussolini, in one of the wildest demonstrations he has ever been accorded by his Fascist followers, was acclaimed as the savior of world peace.

Hope that France and Germany would now live side by side in durable peace was expressed to a News Agency correspondent by Field Marshal Herman Goerring of Germany in an interview. Similar sentiments were expressed by Premier Daladier of France in an interview with an official German news Agency.

Prague appeared to be about the only capital of Europe in which there was not rejoicing.

Soviet Russia, which had appealed to both Germany and Czechoslovakia for a peaceful settlement, appears to be not overly enthusiastic about the Munich arrangement.

GERMANS MOVE IN SUDETEN

Meantime International Commission Starts Plans for Dismemberment of Czechoslovakia

Social Democrats Flee Before Nazis

Thirty Thousand Soldiers Cross Frontier up to Early This Afternoon

PASSAU, Germany, Oct. 1: (CP)—Grey clad German soldiers started entering Sudetenland to make formal occupation early today as an international commission began organization work for the supervising of details for the ceding of that part of Czechoslovakia to Germany. The first troops to arrive were only reconnoitering units of a main German army which will enter four districts. Up to 2 p.m. (5 a.m. Pacific Standard Time), a force estimated at 30,000 men, commanded by Colonel General Ritter von Lees had crossed the Czechoslovak frontier. It was planned to occupy about one-quarter of the first zone of ceded territory during the day. As the Germans advanced, they were separated from the Czechoslovak forces by a neutral zone about two miles wide, running roughly parallel to the new frontier.

Thousands of more German troops are poised along the 120-mile frontier and across three other Reich zones ready to annex them before October 8.

International Commission
 Great Britain, France, Germany Italy and Czechoslovakia will be represented on the international commission to supervise the cession.

An international army or police force will also move into the country shortly in connection with the ceding of territory and holding of plebiscites. Six British battalions will form a part of the international army.

At Asch on the German-Sudeten frontier all fighting has stopped as free corps men prepared to move back to their homes from Germany behind the German army. Entry was, however, temporarily denied Sudeten refugees in Germany because they had threatened to take revenge for German blood spilled during early disorders.

Meanwhile more than fifty thousand Sudeten Social Democrats, a dissident element among the German minority, have already fled from Sudetenland into the interior of Czechoslovakia. Officials say they expect the number will be trebled shortly.

More Fire Calls In City In 1938

Department Has Been Busier Far This Year Than it Was Last

The city fire department responded to four alarms during the month of September, making the total for the year to date fifty in all. Last year in September the alarms numbered one and the total for 1937 up to the end of that month was thirty-two. Fire damage in the city this September is placed at $250 occasioned on September 26 when an old building on Fulton Street owned by the estate of the late Mrs. G. Reda was partially destroyed. There was also slight damage on September 11 in a fire on the boat of Billy Alexee at Cow Bay.

EVIDENCE OF CASE

Testimony In Diminished Manslaughter Charge at Assizes

An interpreter, Amos Vickers, had been secured in the Laura Windsor manslaughter case at Supreme Court Assizes yesterday but it was found that the accused understood English just as well as the interpreter if not better so the case proceeded with the interpreter sitting near Mr. Justice H. B. Robertson presided and the jury was composed of S. E. Parker, foreman, E. B. Baker, J. J. Little, John Arkie, Robert Greenfield, W. M. Watt, Robert Henry, B. Mould, Harry Lincoln, Robert Clark, William Farr and J. S. Brown.

In outlining the case for the Crown, L. W. Patmore said the accused lived on the Campbell Island Indian Reserve with her son, Hector. Up to 6:30 an Indian woman, Mrs. Abraham, was with her about 7:30 Laura went to the hospital and said her son was ill. The doctor and nurse went to the house and the child was dead. A post-mortem examination was held.

Dr. Lloyd George Bray told of being called to the house and found the child dead. He, with Dr. Darby, performed a post-mortem examination. They found the child's liver badly lacerated and evidently this was the cause of death. There were some small bruises on the outside of the body just below the chest.

Woman Subnormal
 Dr. G. E. Derby of the Bella Bella Hospital said he knew the woman and child. The woman was subnormal but physically all right. So far as could be seen she had been a good mother. In school she had not been able to learn like the other children and had not been able to keep a job in the cannery. She was not insane.

Cross-examined by Reid McLennan, defence counsel, Dr. Derby said that Indian mothers were usually good to their children. The injury to the boy could have been the result of a fall or of someone stepping on it.

Miss Ida Conniff, acting matron at the Bella Bella Hospital, was with the doctor when the child was found dead. She said she had seen the child well and happy in the afternoon.

Edith Isaac Abraham, an Indian woman, said she belonged to the English Church at Alert Bay. She was at the home of the accused up to 6:30 on the evening in question. The child was then playing on the floor with some apples.

Two Ocean Falls policemen, F. G. Saunders and Victor J. Bond told of visiting the reserve and searching the house.

Mr. Patmore then said he did not think the crown had established a case. On behalf of the Attorney General, he asked the Judge to take the case away from the jury, which was done and the accused was dismissed. Mr. Patmore said that death might have been due to a dozen causes and there was nothing in the evidence to show that the mother had anything to do with it.

The judge thereupon took the case away from the jury and discharged the prisoner.

September Fines Are Not So High

Total For Year To Date, However, Is Considerably More Than 1937

City police court fines collected in September amounted to only $210 as compared with $520 in the same month last year. Fines in 1938 to date have totalled $2702 as against an aggregate of $1714 in the first nine months of 1937.

THE NEXT STEP

Now that the Sudeten question seems to be about settled, the next step toward European appeasement should be the settlement of the Spanish civil war. The reasonable step would seem to be a conference of possibly the same four powers with General Franco, leader of the Fascist faction with the leader of the government faction and with a view to coming to some definite arrangement for the appointment of a small foreign committee to get the groups together and re-establish a reasonable administration, neither Communist nor Fascist. Some form of democracy under the supervision of an outside group seems necessary until the country gets back into a more normal condition after the years of devastation.

PRINCE RUPERT DEFENCES

We do not know whether, during the recent excitement, any steps were taken to defend Prince Rupert but, if they were not, they certainly should have been. Had there been war last week instead of peace it would not have been at all unlikely that Prince Rupert would be raided and probably seized. We should have found ourselves in a very difficult situation, possibly being forced to evacuate leaving everything behind or destroying it as we retreated.

We have been led to understand that more money will be available for defence purposes after the next session of Parliament has voted it. After what we have gone through it is reasonable to think that Parliament will be more inclined to grant aid to the defences of this coast, although it has not done badly in the past. We object to the spending of all the money in the south and leaving Prince Rupert wholly undefended. We presume, now that they have poured money into Vancouver and Victoria so lavishly, there will be an opportunity for Prince Rupert to get a little help for a similar purpose.

NOT LAUGHABLE MATTER

When it was announced yesterday that Hon. Neville Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler had agreed that in future there would be no war between Germany and Great Britain, a good many people smiled incredulously at the idea of being able to curb the German dictator in his mad career. Possibly his idea of appeasement is to continually get more but, at any rate, he has agreed to the general principle of full and free discussions as a means of securing what he wants, if he wants anything. It is a distinct forward step.

Canada At War TWENTY YEARS AGO

(Written for The Canadian Press
By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M. C.)

Two years ago hundreds of Canadian war veterans picnicked on the peaceful banks of the Canal du Nord, which is roughly about two-thirds of the way between Arras and Cambrai. They visited the village of Inchy-en-Artois, talked with the peasants in their red-bricked cottages and gazed with interest across the gently sloping fields beyond the Canal which culminated in a thick copse that dominated the surrounding terrain—the Bourlon Wood. The tranquility of the place contrasted strangely with the inferno of their first crossing of the Canal du Nord. Twenty years ago Tuesday the Canadian Corps wrote into the history of the Great War a chapter which, for hardihood and daring, has few parallels.

How the Canadians stormed the Canal du Nord, their thoroughly unorthodox tactics which have no place in any military text-book, the determination and confidence with which they went about it are part of a story whose wonder grows with the years. When General Sir Arthur Currie, the Canadian Corps Commander, propounded his plan to attack across the Canal, the wisest strategists counselled him against it.

The Canal du Nord linked the Somme Canal with the Canal de la Senese, 20 miles apart. From Pailluel, the junction point with the Canal de la Senese in the north, to Marquion on the Arras-Cambrai Road—a distance of about six miles—the Canal du Nord was flooded, the waters overflowing for a considerable distance beyond both banks. South of Marquion, the watercourse was dry. The Canal had been under construction at the outbreak of the war. On the Canadian front the extent of the waterless portion was in the neighborhood of 3,500 yards. And through this mile and a half bottle-neck, Sir Arthur Currie planned to pass the whole attacking forces of the Canadian Corps.

Artillery Big Factor

Provided he was successful, the assaulting troops would fan out to the northward on crossing the Canal. Some would have to reverse their direction again by attacking westward, back toward the flooded section. This involved the working out of a most complicated, artillery barrage. At the beginning of the attack the gunners would lift their guns to cover the advance across the Canal. When this was accomplished, the guns would swing at a left angle to protect the troops who, at this stage, were required to turn northward. Later, the guns were to shorten their range instead of lengthening it, covering the assaulting waves who were fighting their way backward to the edge of the flooded portions.

The whole operation was fraught with dreadful risks. The Germans had done everything conceivable to make their position impregnable. On the sloping ground east of the Canal they had constructed deep trenches, heavily wired with thick entanglements. Within them was the dominating bastion of Bourlon Wood, which day and night belched the fire of the heaviest artillery.

For the initial stage of the attack the 1st and 4th Canadian Divisions were employed with the 3rd Canadian and 11th Imperial Divisions entering on the second phase. All four would then advance to a final objective which was set about four miles from the starting place.

At 5:20 o'clock on the morning of September 27 the guns opened, and the attack began. The intensity of the barrage on this greatly restricted frontage was overwhelming. Shells of every calibre burst on the German lines beyond the Canal banks, and behind this fiery curtain the Canadian infantry advanced. To clamber up the steep walls of the canal many units carried scaling ladders—implements heretofore unused on the Western Front but of immense advantage to the attacking troops.

The task was to get the great mass of troops through the bottle-neck before the enemy gunners could appreciate what was taking place and utterly blanket the area with shells. As it was his artillery response was swift and heavy but it was scattered. Within an hour more than 20,000 troops had surged through the bottle-neck, and were sweeping up to their first objective.

Attack Was Success

The effect of the Canadian shell-fire was devastating. Beyond the efforts of stout-hearted machine-gunners, the enemy's resistance was not resolute; but it stiffened as the Canadians moved up the slope towards Bourlon Wood and as they fanned out to their wider front. The Wood, however, had been deluged with gas shells and the Canadians encircled it, laying siege to the wood until such time as the dissipation of the gas enabled them to enter.

From first to last the attack was a success, justifying to the confidence which Sir Arthur Currie had reposed in the Canadian troops. Much severe fighting with bomb and bayonet featured every phase of the advance but the Canadians would not be halted. Flushed with triumph, they stood on all objectives at the end of the day. Beyond them rose the spires of Cambrai, four miles away. This was the goal that beckoned them since that morning on August 26 when they crashed through the enemy's line east of Arras. After Cambrai—Valenciennes. After Valenciennes—Mons.

Report Denies English Bank Controls Eire

Banking Commission Deplores Idea
London May Have Bad Influence
On Financing in Ireland

(By Joseph Dennigan, Canadian Press Correspondent)

DUBLIN, Eire, Sept. 30: (CP)—Favorite argument of Social Credit advocates here that the Bank of England "pulls the financial strings" in Ireland is scorned by the Commission on Banking, Currency and Credit.

One witness who came before the commission declared: "I am profoundly disappointed with the result of Irish national self-government and attribute it very largely to the fact that we did not control our national credit on making the separation. I maintain that a community claiming self-government which shirks the responsibility of taking control of its own money is simply not fit for self-government."

Another witness expressed himself even more strongly and declared that the Bank of England acted through its agents in Eire—all the financial forces in the country. "That," he asserted, "is the reason why the country is pauperized. Our people cannot get married."

The commission deplored these attitudes in the course of its report and said such views represent a complete misunderstanding not only of the currency problem but also of the legal position. From a legal point of view Eire as a sovereign body is free to determine its own national currency and insofar as its own interests are concerned it chooses to adopt exchange stability, acting only in the same way as other countries which pursue the same objective.

"This relationship," said the commission, "involves no direct interference with the internal conditions of other countries by, for instance, the Bank of England."

"The policy pursued by this bank or, for that matter, the Exchange Equalization Account is directed towards the attainment of general objectives such as exchange stability or the maintenance of sound credit conditions."

"On a true understanding of the position it is not possible to give any credence to the idea that there is any interference in the working of Irish economy and finance by the Bank of England."

Connie Mack, aged Philadelphia Athletics pilot, surprised the baseball world when he announced sale of Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes to Chicago White Sox six years ago Wednesday. The deal broke up the great Athletic machine that had won three successive American League championships from 1929 to 1931.

All four teams of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union were hard hit two years ago Thursday when the Big Four executive after a secret session announced 10 United States "imports" ineligible to play. Residence rule violations lopped off three players each, from Montreal and Hamilton and two each from Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Roughriders.

The all-time major league home run record of 59, set by Babe Ruth in 1921, was smashed by the Balt. himself at New York 11 years ago yesterday, when he connected for his 40th round tripper. From 1914 until his retirement early in 1935 Ruth hit 714 home runs.

Dr. J. Lee Richmond, who pitched the first perfect major league baseball game on record, died at Providence, R. I., nine years ago today. On June 12, 1880, Richmond twirling for Worcester, then holding a National League franchise, set Cleveland down with no runs, no hits and not a man reaching first base. The feat has been accomplished four times since.

Halibut Landings Quite Heavy During Past Week—New Aids to Navigation at Pacofi—Much Fish Landed at Seattle

With quite a number of the larger vessels of the Canadian fleet landing catches prior to making their final trips of the season to the banks, halibut arrivals at Prince Rupert during the past week were fairly heavy at a total of 715,500 pounds. Of the week's total of landings 156,000 pounds was from Canadian vessels and 559,500 from American.

This brings the season's aggregate landings at Prince Rupert so far up to 12,108,550 pounds as compared with 12,568,350 pounds at a corresponding date last year. The Canadian landings so far this year amount to 5,602,650 pounds and American 6,505,900 pounds against 6,281,350 pounds and 6,287,000 pounds respectively last year. During the week came announcement that fishing on the banks of Area No. 3 would be permissible until October 29 which is ten days later than last year. Prices for fish held steady during the week with the top bid of the week for Canadian halibut 8.3c and 5c paid the Gulvik for 21,000 pounds and the low 7c and 5c received by the Joe Baker for 2,000 pounds. For American fish the highest price of the week was 9.9c and 6c paid the Bonanza for 24,500 pounds and the low 7c and 5c which the Argo received for 20,000 pounds. Several of the Prince Rupert halibut vessels have been continuing cod fishing in Area No. 2, bringing in small amounts of halibut incidental thereto.

On her way from Queen Charlotte Island loading camps to the Powell River mill with a tow of logs which she left at Captain's Cove the Powell River tug St. Faith was in port yesterday morning for fuel and supplies.

A white buoy with red light on Amur Rock, a red buoy with red light on the northeast extreme of Locke shoal, a white beacon on the point opposite this red buoy, a red buoy with red light on the southeast ledge of Locke shoal, a black buoy with white light on the southwest extreme of Locke shoal and a red spar buoy about 200 feet northwest of the outer end of the wharf have been placed in Selwyn Inlet, Queen Charlotte Islands, to mark the channel leading to the wharf at Pacofi, it is announced. These aids to navigation will be maintained by the British Columbia Packers.

George Davidson, chief engineer of the steamer Prince Charles, and assistant engineers, R. P. Williams, F. C. Salter and R. F. C. Baldry, sailed Thursday night on the Prince George for Vancouver as did also Purser Arnold Evans. The Prince Charles has been tied up in drydock here for the winter.

The Ketchikan freighter Tongass arrived in port at 10 o'clock Thursday night and, after discharging five carloads of fisheries products for transshipment east over Canadian National Railways, sailed at 5 o'clock yesterday morning for Seattle.

Seattle Halibut Landings Halibut landings at the port of Seattle for the month of September this year totalled 2,469,000 pounds at an estimated total value of slightly less than $250,000. The total represented 130 trips and the average price was 10 1/4c per pound. The landings at Seattle this September were some 331,000 pounds than 2,138,000 pounds in the same month a year ago when the total value was $332,000. The price average this September was 3/4c per pound less than a year ago. Yesterday at Seattle only four small catches of halibut, taken incidental to cod fishing, were landed, the total being 3450 pounds and the price ranging from 10 1/4c to 19c.

OLDEST ON NAAS RIVER

Frank Bolton, Head of Naas Nation, Dies at Age of Ninety

The death occurred on Thursday at Kincolith of Frank Bolton, (Thalakhat), head chief of the Eagle Tribe of the Nishga nation. Deceased was the oldest living native on the Naas River, being well over 90 years of age.

He was in good health until a week ago when he was stricken, while at Quinamass at his camp where he went every fall to smoke salmon. He also fished for Arrandale Cannery this season, holding his own with the best of them.

Bolton's death removes one of the real old timers, he being the only remaining man who years ago left the heathen villages and took up Christianity, moving from Kidix, on the upper Naas, where his totem still stands, to Kincolith, the first Christian village.

A party of fellow tribesmen were in town yesterday getting supplies for the funeral and feast which will be an elaborate affair. His grandson, R. S. Woods of this city, left today aboard the fisheries patrol boat Metra to be able to attend the funeral on Monday.

Man in the Moon

Next week is parent-teacher week and also fish week. Evidently the fishing industry will be urging parents and teachers to help secure the consumption of more fish.

Jake says he thinks there is something fishy about the combination.

Office Boy—Your wife came in to see you this morning, sir, but I knew you were busy so I managed to get her out of the office.

Boss—Hm! Where did you get that much money?

Salesman—This fire-fighting apparatus will be in use in 50 years' time.

Elderly lady—But in 50 years' time I shall not be here.

Saleman (misunderstanding)—But madam, it is so light and convenient you could carry it anywhere you go.

If all men were like William Hurwitz, of Ipswich, Massachusetts, manufacturers of sleeping trugs would go out of business, for Hurwitz's car ran off the road, mowed down 50 feet of fence, knocked over nine cement posts and crashed against a telegraph pole.

Hurtwitz slept through it all. A passing motorist woke him up. "Gosh! I'm a sound sleeper!" was all Hurtwitz said.

The game was very one-sided. Just after half-time the captain of the losing team approached the referee. "I say, can we have another ball?"

"What do you want another ball for?" the astonished referee asked.

"Well," grumbled the captain, "those chaps want that one all to themselves."

As she entered the fashionable milliner's shop the manageress stepped forward to serve her.

"I see by your advertisements," the girl said, "that you have received 2,000 hats from Paris."

"Yes, madam," the manageress informed her.

"Good," the girl exclaimed, as she removed her hat. "I wish to try them on."

Briggs: "You're looking blue, old boy. What's wrong?"

Thompson: "Oh my wife has gone into hospital, my son lost his job yesterday, my daughter has mumps, cook has left us and to crown it all Jenkins beat me 5 and 4 this afternoon."
