Budapest Hands Over Claims to Four Powers After Ultimatum Is Not Met

PRAGUE, Oct. 13: (CP)—A state of siege has been declared in Ruthenia to counter activities of Hungarian terrorists who are filtering across the border with German guns.

Meanwhile the Czechoslovak-Hungarian minority dispute took on a more ugly complexion last night as the Czechs refused the Hungarian territorial demands. The Hungarians, insisting on military occupation, having threatened to walk out of territorial conference with Czechoslovakia unless their demands are met, tonight declared negotiations on their demands for Czech territory had broken off. Foreign Minister von Kaya read a declaration to the conference stating that Budapest would hand over its claims to the four-power conference. This declaration was read one hour after expiration of a Hungarian ultimatum calling for acceptance by the Czechs of demands said to cover eight thousand square miles.

British Note is Answered by Tokyo With Promise That Foreign Interests Will Not Be Molested Barring "Unforeseen Accident"

TOKYO, October 13: (CP)—Japanese authorities declare that British and French aid to China through Canton necessitated the new South China offensive which has been commenced by the Japanese. "Both British and French should recognize that their short-sighted view is responsible for the expansion of fighting," a Nichi Nichi newspaper editorial stated.

In answer to a British warning yesterday, the Tokyo Foreign Office gave assurance that foreign interests in South China would not be molested but suggested that care be exercised in the movement of warships and other craft so that there might be no "unforeseen accidents."

Meanwhile 35,000 Japanese soldiers of the new Japanese expeditionary force had been landed at Bias Bay near Hong Kong up to last night. They had been virtually unopposed up today but, with Chinese reinforcements being rushed to that area, there were indications that the opposing forces might come to grips soon and that the next twenty-four hours might bring a test of strength.

The Japanese force was landed under a naval bombardment with tireraft bombing also being indulged in by the invaders.

Welcome To King And Queen Is Alluded To As "Circus" By C.C.F. Vancouver Alderman

VANCOUVER, October 13: (CP)—Ald. Helena Gutteridge drew the ire of fellow aldermen yesterday when she referred to the proposed Vancouver 1939 celebration, including the possible welcome of the King and Queen, as a "circus" for which the city should not be responsible financially.

Ald. Harold DeGraves said that Ald. Gutteridge had another "think" coming if she believed that entertaining Their Majesties constitutes a circus.

Ald. H. D. Wilson explained that the cost could be collected out of railways and merchants in a manner similar to that in which the Golden Jubilee had been handled.

Mayor George C. Miller was empowered to proceed with plans.

DISTRIBUTION OF PULP MONEY

In view of the possibility of Prince Rupert having a pulp mill next year, it is interesting to note that, in the manufacture of pulp, the greatest cost is for timber which costs the mill about 30 cents out of every dollar, power costs five per cent, wages 15 per cent, transportation 10 per cent, administration six per cent, chemicals four per cent, coal and oil six per cent, power 10 per cent, supplies three per cent, insurance half of one per cent, taxes 2 1/2 per cent, sales promotion two per cent and wires, two per cent. The costs of various articles or services vary with the localities. From the timber, labor gets another slice and so does the government.

GERMANY AND CANADA

Wilson Woodside, who lectured in Prince Rupert some years ago on Soviet Russia, has an article this month in The Canadian Magazine in which he quotes extensively from a book on Canada written by a German, Dr. Colin Ross, who travelled over a good deal of the country and who says he came to Canada "as a hungry raven to spy out new feeding places and living room for those crowded into the narrow nest at home." He goes on to say: "Canada is one of the few remaining empty spaces on earth. Who will take possession of it? You may think this is a foolish question and answer that it has already been taken possession of. But we must accustom ourselves to the idea that nothing on earth is certain any more." Then comes this significant sentence: "It is very questionable if nations suffering under unbearable population pressure will forever tolerate that a few millions should hold a whole continent to themselves just because they happened to get there first."

"Canada goes by the name of a Dominion of the British Empire. This means that its future is just as uncertain as that of the British Empire itself," continues the book. "It is impossible to foresee to what extent we Germans, whether as individuals or as a nation, will take part in its development. For the present we can at least do this: keep our eyes open and remember that today nothing is certain and everything is possible."

Dr. Ross turns his attention to Newfoundland and suggests it could be turned into the strongest possible fortress. With a few batteries, which could be hidden in the woods so that even fliers could not find them, one could hold off the strongest navy, while, from the protected inlets, all traffic over the Atlantic could be continually harassed by airplanes and light warships (submarines). Already the greatest cable station in the world, Newfoundland may soon gain the same status as an air base, controlling the whole of North Atlantic aviation for as long into the future as we can see."

Dr. Ross argues that Canada will not join the American republic. She cannot become a truly British nation and neither can she become an independent nation owing to her internal divisions. Then he turns his eyes northward and sees a huge uninhabited continent well suited to a nordic people. He sees there the only large empty space in the world without the drawback of either excessive heat, drought or moisture still as good as completely empty, nothing in fact to bar mass European settlement. He says that the people of this continent think they are very clever in preventing further European settlement. In this they have the appearance of right owing to their unemployment problem.

ISLAND IS STRATEGIC

Defence of Canada's Portals Includes Survey of Anticosti

MONTREAL, Oct. 13. (CP)—Suggested as Canada's Heligoland, the island of Anticosti, which lies athwart Canada's trade route through the Gulf of St. Lawrence, has been surveyed by naval and air forces as a defence base since a German syndicate made a strong bid for the timber rights on the island some months ago.

Reports of the survey are in the hands of high officials of the defence ministry. Possibilities of the island as a fortified base for the operation of aircraft for defence purposes are being closely studied. Unofficially it is stated Anticosti can be made to effectively control all traffic in and out of the St. Lawrence River.

Realization that Canada was open to attack from the Atlantic primarily from the air, was emphasized by the visit of an Italian air fleet in 1933 and the appearance of the German dirigible Hindenburg over the St. Lawrence in 1936.

When the German syndicate's offer was announced the defence angle was at once debated in the press. The syndicate's representatives announced that they were interested in the economic issue only. The offer was discussed in the Canadian Parliament and it was claimed that one of the prospective buyers was an emissary of Adolf Hitler, the German chancellor.

Part of the province of Quebec, Anticosti is privately owned by the Consolidated Paper Corporation which acquired it for its timber resources. It is 135 miles long and 35 miles wide, located 360 miles northeast and seaward of historic Quebec City at a point where the river-mouth is 54 miles wide.

The island, during the French regime in Canada, was the gift of Louis XIV to Henri Jolliet in 1691. In 1763 it was made a part of Newfoundland but, in 1774, re-annexed to Canada. Several attempts at colonization met with failure and, in 1895, the island was sold to Henri Menier, the French chocolate king. He built a great chateau and set up a little kingdom on Anticosti. At Menier's death in 1913 the estate passed to his brother, Gaston, and, during the Great War, a plan of defence from submarine attack was drawn up though never implemented. The island passed to the Consolidated Paper Company in 1926.

Germans Still Interested Premier Duplessis of Quebec announced that neither sale of Anticosti to interests abroad nor export of lumber for foreign use would be permitted. However, the German syndicate has not given up hope of acquiring the timber rights on the island. An option is held by A. Meidde of Amsterdam who conducted the negotiations with the Consolidated Paper Company which has pointed out that the "idea of military use" of the island by a foreign power never entered into the proposed deal. The company has also intimated that since 1929, when it stopped taking wood pulp from Anticosti, it has supported its 500 population but cannot continue this support.

In addition to the purchase offer, believed to be more than $6,000,000 paid to the Menier estate for the island, nearly $1,500,000 will have to be spent in installing new machinery, the company stated.

A development has been the purchase of wood pulp in New Brunswick, the adjoining province to Quebec, for exportation to German newspaper interests.

Jake says he does not see why they should stop at thirty dollars. He would make it a "Fifty Dollars a Week" party if he had anything to do with it.

"What? Thirty dollars every week? But what would they use for money? I bet the dollars they use would be something like the roubles in Russia—worth about five cents each."

BREN GUNS IN CANADA

Inquiry Into Criticized Contract is Now Under Way

OTTAWA, Oct. 13. (CP)—Canada's initial venture into the manufacture of Bren machine guns has encountered a snag. On March 31 the government contracted with the John Inglis Co. of Toronto for the making of 7,000 of these weapons. A justice of the Supreme Court of Canada has now opened a judicial inquiry into the particulars of the contract.

An article written by Lt.-Col. George A. Drew in a national magazine, questioning the propriety of the contract and denouncing the policy of permitting profits to be earned out of armaments, was the spur which quickened the government into the action indicated. Col. Drew is a Canadian publicist who in the past 10 years has contributed numerous articles to Canadian periodicals on military subjects and who has, at times, roundly condemned the operators of what he has termed the international armament ring.

The Colonel's outburst against the Bren gun contract was based on the assumption that the Toronto engineering firm would be the only source of the essential arms for Canada's land forces. "For good or evil," he wrote, "the stage is now set for the private manufacture in Canada of the primary implements of war."

Order From London

Col. Drew analyzed the contract, which paralleled one entered upon at the same time with the same company by the British government for 5,000 Bren guns, and protested against the John Inglis Co. being allowed to make an over-all profit of $457,000. Other features were also objected to, particularly the agreement to pay the salaries of all executive officers of John Inglis Co., although their activities are not confined to the manufacture of machine guns.

He charged Defence Minister Ian A. Mackenzie with inaccuracy when the minister explained the contract to the House of Commons and also alleged that, in consequence of the contract, there had been an immense increase given to the value of the shares of the John Inglis Co. Col. Drew's article was in the nature of an intemperate attack. He set forth specific points he believed should be questioned. He demanded the public should be informed concerning them. This evoked a reply from Mr. Mackenzie who charged that many of Drew's statements were not facts, asserting also that, by "misapplication of facts," these "may cause readers to draw false inferences."

The total cost of the 12,000 guns would be $6,500,000 and the manufacturing company's profit on the Canadian portion would be $267,000, the minister said. He declared the Bren gun matter went back to 1933 when Major James E. Hahn, president of the John Inglis Co., interested the British government in the possibility of manufacturing the guns in Canada. It was not feasible to call for tenders since the British government alone held the specifications. Further, the minister said, Canada saved $1,300,000 in hooking up with the United Kingdom in a contract whose overall value was $6,500,000. Col. Drew had put this figure at $8,000,000.

The Drew article prompted much editorial comment in the Canadian newspapers. In general, they stand with that, at a time when the Dominion was seriously engaged in the task of rearming, it would be deplorable if suspicion were entertained by the public that all was not well in the way of armament contracts. Meanwhile, in a rejoinder to the minister's statement, Col. Drew demanded a judicial enquiry.

This the government granted. Mr. Justice H. H. Davis, of the Supreme Court of Canada, was appointed to conduct the investigation, assisted by Col. James L. Ralston, a Montreal lawyer and former minister of national defence as commission counsel. I. C. Hellmuth, an eminent Toronto barrister, was retained for Col. Drew.

Northbound from Vancouver to Skagway, C.P.R. steamer Princess Louise, Capt. S. K. Gray, was in port from 8:15 to 10 o'clock this morning. The Princess Louise had on board fifty-nine passengers including a number who transferred from the steamer North Coast which stranded at the end of last week near Victoria while northbound from Seattle to Alaska. There were no passengers for Prince Rupert aboard the Louise which took three from this port.

Pilot J. A. Amundsen, with a seaplane of the Alaska Airways, arrived at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Juneau, bringing in four passengers who will proceed to Seattle from here aboard the steamer Prince George tonight. The passengers were Don Lillie of Seattle, John Borden of Chicago, Keith Johnson of San Francisco and C. M. Wells of Seattle. Pilot Amundsen hopped off this morning on his return north.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Booming Up the Stairs. People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin sets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today at your drugist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep.

Observers Compare New York Yankees and New York Rangers Farm Club Setups

WINNIPEG, Oct. 13: (CP)—Some close hockey observers believe New York Rangers ultimately will be to major professional hockey what the New York Yankees are to baseball as a result of the farm system employed by both organizations.

Yankees, with their powerful "farm clubs" Newark Bears and Kansas City Blues, champions of the International and American Association leagues respectively, have the cream of the minor league crop from which to choose recruits. Rangers are rapidly acquiring a "chain system" equally as potent.

In addition to Philadelphia Ramlers of the International American league and New York Rovers of the Eastern United States Amateur league, Rangers have added Edmonton Athletic Club juniors to their amateur hook-up and have Vancouver Lions of the Pacific Coast league available as a seasoning ground for young professionals.

How System Operates

Here is how the Ranger system operates: Ranger scouts across Canada recommend amateur players to Manager Lester Patrick who in turn invites the players to his annual fall training school here.

Best of the amateurs are taken by Patrick to New York where they perform with the Rovers in the United States amateur circuit. As these players develop, they are given opportunities with Philadelphia in professional hockey.

If a player fails to make good at Philadelphia and yet appears to have promise of development, he can be sent to Vancouver for seasoning.

If the player makes good at Philadelphia, Patrick brings him up to the Rangers at various times during the winter to gain major league experience.

At the same time, Rangers have the first call on junior players at Edmonton and no other National Hockey League club can sign them unless Patrick decides they can be of no use to him.

This farm system has paid large dividends to Professor Patrick. Of the tentative 1938-39 Ranger 21-line-up only two players are not graduates of the system. Goalie Dave Kerr was obtained from Montreal Maroons and Defenceman Art Coulter from Chicago Black Hawks.

Last year three players were promoted to the National Hockey League from Philadelphia, Centre Clint Smith and Forwards Bryan Hextall and Bobby Kirk. This trio spent the 1935-36 season with Vancouver Lions and then moved as a unit to Philadelphia for the 1936-37 season. Murray Patrick and Larry Molyneux, regular Rambler defencemen, played several games with the Rangers near the close of last year when injuries forced two Ranger defencemen to the sidelines.

Dutch Hiller of Kitchener, Ontario, moved directly from the amateur Rovers to the Rangers late last season and fitted right into the Rangers' style of play, largely because the Rovers employ the same checker-board pass attack used by their "older brothers" in the National Hockey League.

HAMMOND BEST IN BATTING

Test Cricket Captain Holds Title Won For Five Years of Past Six

LONDON, Oct. 13: (CP)—W. R. (Wally) Hammond, 35-year-old cricket star who captained England against Australia in the test series this summer, is winner of the British cricket batting title. It marked the fifth time in the past six years he headed English county championship batsmen.

He made his debut to first-class play in 1920 as a schoolboy amateur and one year later turned professional. He forsook pro ranks at the end of the 1937 county campaign.

In 42 innings, during the season concluded early in September, Hammond had an average of 75.27 and was the only English player to exceed 3,000 runs. Final compilation showed him with 3,011 runs, the third time in his record-tudded career he had achieved his distinction.

Joseph Hardstaff, Nottinghamshire, repeated his performance of 1937 by finishing second in the standing. His average of 60.90 in 77 innings barely edged out Leonard Hutton of Yorkshire who wound up the campaign with 60.45 representing a similar number of innings.

The 22-year-old Yorkshire player, however, leaped into prominence in the fifth and final test match when he astounded the cricket world with a record-smashing score of 364. It was the year's outstanding individual achievement.

The Pudsey-born youth who toured the northern county four years ago, pounded Aussie bowlers for more than 13 hours to become the world's highest scorer in international competition. He eclipsed Don Bradman's eight-year old record made at Leeds, England, by 30 runs.

Bradman, Australian test captain and the greatest batsman in the game today, recorded the formidable average of 115.66 with a total of 2,429 runs in 26 innings during the Aussie tour. His nearest rival was W. A. Brown, Queensland player, who, in 37 innings, showed an average of 57.93.

Bowling honors again went to Austin Matthews of Glamorgan who headed the list in 1937. His mark was 13.16 but he captured only 30 wickets throughout the four month's schedule. William Bowes, tall Yorkshire fast bowler, placed second with an average of 15.23. He took 121 wickets.

Yanofsky placed fourth in a field of 20 and scored triumphs over three former champions. Morrison, Toronto, tied for second place with 13 1/2 points.

Critics hailed Yanofsky as a future champion after he defeated Belson, R. M. Martin, Toronto, and Boris Blumin, Montreal, in successive rounds. All were former champions. Blumin in 1936 and 1937. Blumin, who recently won third place in American Chess Federation championship, tied with Yanofsky for fourth place in the Canadian event. Yanofsky has been playing chess only four years. The further development of Morse Creek as a swimming pool in summer and skating rink in winter was discussed by the Prince Rupert Gyro Club at its regular monthly business luncheon yesterday and the matter referred to the playground committee with a view to obtaining further detailed information. Next week Founders' Day will be observed by the club with W. Brown as speaker for the occasion.

Duchess of Windsor, Inclining To Dark Clothes, Impresses Paris Experts As Queen of Style

By Alice Maxwell Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, Oct. 13. (CP)—The Duchess of Windsor tops the list of the ten best-dressed women of 1938 selected by dressmakers here. The American-born Duchess, whose every fashion fact has been chronicled, still is outstandingly well dressed, experts here have decided.

Four continents, seven countries are covered in this poll of elegance. Contrasts are striking. There is Princess Karam of Kapurthala, wife of the son of one of the rich potentates of India. There is Mademoiselle Eve Curie, daughter of the woman who struggled through poverty to the goal of one of the world's greatest discoveries—radium. The notion that youth and clothes sophistication are things apart, is rudely shattered in this poll, too.

Here are the selections of the Paris experts:

The Duchess of Windsor, American-born.

The Duchess of Leeds, Serbian wife of British peer.

Mme. Antenor Patino, Spanish wife of Bolivian Minister to London.

Princess Karam of Kapurthala, wife of an Indian noble.

Mme. Pedro Eyzaguirre, French wife of a member of the Chilean legation to Paris.

Mme. Lopez-Wellshaw, Chilean, living in Paris.

Mrs. Charles Sweeney, wife of the English golfer.

Mrs. Armstrong Taylor, American, the former Audrey (Chico) Kilvert.

Miss Eye Curie, daughter of the discoverer of radium.

Lady Daphne Straight, daughter of Earl and Countess of Winchelsea.

Variety of Tastes

The Duchess of Windsor wears suave dark clothes and a variety of jewels of unusual design. Recently she has been wearing two very large, jewelled arabesque clips which virtually cover the lapels of her coat or jacket.

The Duchess of Leeds wears rich furs and jewels to accent her clothes. Madame Antenor Patino represents Spanish beauty on the list. She is very fond of color and shows a preference for clothes of the Spanish style.

The Princess Karam not only is the youngest but also is one of the most beautiful on the list. In Europe she wears European dress, but on her return to India, assumes native costume. She wears fabulous family jewels reset by a Parisian jeweler and has been known to change the color of her nail polish four times a day so it will harmonize with the heel of a slipper or the rose in her hair.

Madame Pedro Eyzaguirre is a chic young French woman. She likes slim evening frocks topped by little jackets and small amusing hats. Madame Lopez-Wellshaw, a Chilean, prefers the wide-skirted Empress Eugenie type of evening clothes, enhanced by dazzling jewels.

The British representation is led by Mrs. Charles Sweeney, wife of the golfer, whose beauty caused a stir when she made her debut in London several years ago. Conservative distinguished clothes and furs lead in her wardrobe. Miss Curie dresses in "almost severe" clothes.

Lady Daphne Straight, English beauty and daughter of the Earl and Countess of Winchelsea, completes the list. She likes simple, slim clothes.

Canada At War TWENTY YEARS AGO

(Written for The Canadian Press By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M. C.)

The long story of Canada's part in the Great War contains nothing to equal in savagery the fighting which for four days succeeded the storming of the Canal du Nord in September, 1918. On other fields the Canadian Corps had achieved great renown by the bravery, the dash and the resourcefulness of its attacks and by the grim stubbornness of its defence.

Each battle had a feature exclusive to itself but all had evoked the highest qualities of the Canadian soldiers and, in every case, these qualities had prevailed.

The feature of the actions subsequent to the triumph at the Canal du Nord was the desperate character of the enemy's resistance. His last system of defence broken, himself driven back to open country with no other line behind which he might rally, the German soldier, prompted by sheer desperation, turned the battles for Cambrai into a shambles.

For more than six weeks the German armies on the Western Front had had to endure attack after attack. Everywhere along the battle-line furious offensives had breached their positions. Suddenly, but fighting every step of the way, the enemy were being hunted out of the lines they had constructed years before and which they had believed impregnable. Their casualties were enormous and, in order to maintain battalions at even skeleton battle-strength, many divisions had been dispersed. Their reserves were now exhausted. The spectre of defeat in the field haunted the German High Command. The task now was not to achieve a military success which would warrant the imposition of exacting terms upon the Allies but to stave off a disaster in the hope that the terms which the Allies themselves would impose might not be too humiliating.

Heavy Losses

The lengths to which the military leaders of Germany were willing to go, the sacrifices they were prepared to make, found their exemplification in the ferocious battles which raged north-west of Cambrai between September 28 and October 1. In those four days 13 German divisions were hurled against the four Canadian divisions. On the ridges of Abancourt, in the ravines of Bantigny, at Biecourt, Sancourt and Cuvillers—within a triangle whose base was about six miles—the final and decisive battles of the war were fought.

The Canadian Corps suffered tremendous casualties. Attack and counter-attack followed in regular succession. Day and night the units of all four divisions wrote their story in letters of blood on the rolling terrain around Cambrai. Some Canadian battalions taking part in this engagement were themselves reduced to shadows of their normal strength. Yet the feeling that this was the final large-scale battle possessed all ranks. Others would undoubtedly follow but mastery in those now in progress would determine the issue of what might come after.

And so the titanic combats raged the Canadians resolute in their bid for victory, the Germans equally resolute and reckless in their determination to avert defeat.

The story of the fighting in these days is a sad one for its appendix was the long list of killed and wounded—a list bearing some of the most illustrious names in the Canadian Corps. It could not be otherwise when a defence of the magnitude indicated was offered. Yet, bit by bit the Canadians fought their way forward. Sometimes they would lose what had been gained, only to regain it later. Positions changed hands many times with the numbers of attackers and defenders thinning each time. The line would sag, then tauten, advance, break back here or there, recover itself and move forward again—all this in a murderous atmosphere of shelling and machine gunning.

Enemy in Retreat

October 1, 1918, was the critical day for the Canadian Corps. The First and the Third Canadian Divisions launched their attack northwest of Cambrai in what one historian has termed "the most appalling of all those battles between the Canals." It is enough to say that, after fighting steadily from 5 o'clock in the morning until well into the darkness, the Canadians, utterly fatigued and sorely stricken, waited uncertainly on their captured positions. If the enemy should again counter-attack in strength, the Corps would be in straits for the battalions were exhausted.

In the darkness the men waited. No attack came. From far behind the German lines rolling explosions rumbled through the night, and red glares lit the sky. The enemy was destroying his own ammunition dumps and his stores of war material. He had had enough. He was pulling out of the fight. The morning of October 2 broke on a battlefield from which the Germans had withdrawn.

Cambrai was for the Canadians. It lay before them only for the taking.

SOME FACTS ABOUT FISH

Dr. Carter Describes Some Phases of Interesting Subject

Speaking recently on the subject of "Some Facts About Fish," Dr. Neal Carter, director of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station, showed a graph which indicated the decline in the production of fish in Canada from the year 1926 with a gradual recovery during the past few years. He then went on to tell of the results of experimental work in regard to the value of fish as a food.

Dr. Carter dispelled a good many of the common ideas about fish as compared with other foods, showing that, while meat was richer in the larger food values, there were some minor values such as iodine and vitamins which fish contained and made it an invaluable food, especially as a preventative of gland enlargements. The vitamins could be obtained by eating fish or by taking the fish oils.

Dr. Carter described the method of analyzing the food values of fish which contained 68 to 72 per cent water, the remainder being chiefly oils, about eight per cent, and the proteins which were the chief food constituent.

In illustrations to show how similar things might have a great effect in growth and health, it was found in one district of Australia that the sheep did not thrive. Analysis showed that this district was lacking in a very small percentage of cobalt and this lack caused the failure of the sheep to keep healthy.

Lack of iodine had a somewhat similar effect on people. Sea water contained quantities of iodine and fish also had it to some extent. Eating fish tended to prevent goitre.

GOLDBLOOM The Old Reliable

Who's Wilson? Personal Aide To Chamberlain

By JAMES A. RESTON

LONDON, Oct. 8. (CP)—In days of apoplectic European diplomacy a mild little man, immaculately dressed, sat beside Neville Chamberlain in the fateful councils of the British cabinet and at times flew to Germany as the Prime Minister's personal emissary to Adolf Hitler.

The role of Sir Horace Wilson has been somewhat mysterious since he was drafted two years ago "for personal service to the Prime Minister."

Political circles say that "personal service" now includes foreign affairs, and that the "mysterious H. J." is Chamberlain's most influential adviser and "personal brain trust." And it's common talk that the blue-eyed, round-shouldered little man of 56 has taken a hand in the Central European crises.

Sir Horace entered the civil service in 1903 at $400 a year. He was not a university man and apparently would probably stay in the "second division" all his life.

But he was noticed by a former industrial commissioner who got him a place in the new labor ministry in 1916. Wilson made a record as a strike mediator.

Shortly after the close of the war, an important strike drew comment from Prime Minister Lloyd-George: "What happened to our strike-breaker?" the prime minister inquired.

Told that Wilson wasn't working on strikes, Lloyd George chanced things. In 1921, Wilson became permanent secretary of the ministry. In 1924 he was knighted.

He became known as the mildest, most patient labor mediator in history. Both workers and employers liked him. When the depression came, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald made him chief industrial adviser.

Sir Horace then sweated through problems of floundering industries; got them more capital if he felt them to be deserving. He moved colonies of workers to more prosperous towns.

Then Neville Chamberlain brought Sir Horace to No. 10 Downing Street, the middle of the Empire. When Mr. Chamberlain became Prime Minister, Sir Horace was at his right hand.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

New Zealand's Scale Is To Be Gradual—Facing Election

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Oct. 13: (CP)—With one eye on developments in Europe, the British Dominion of New Zealand is facing a general election October 15 and digesting the Labor government's Social Security Bill...

Gradual introduction of universal superannuation without a means test, eventually replacing the "age benefit," or contributory old-age pension is considered here the most important proposal.

It is proposed as from April 1, 1940, to pay all citizens over the age of 65 years £10 ($39) a year, this sum to be increased each year until the superannuation reaches £78 ($304) annually and entirely supersedes age benefit of the same amount.

The only qualifications will be in regard to residence and payment of contributions. Applicants who are in New Zealand on March 15, 1939, must have been in the country for ten years immediately prior to the application...

The income qualifications provided for unmarried persons is that the basic rate of benefit shall be reducible by £1 ($3.90) for every £1 of other income exceeding £52 a year. That is, the full rate of benefit may be received while the applicant also has £1 a week from elsewhere, making a total of £2 10s a week...

What People Pay

A special account in the Public Account, to be called the Social Security Fund, will be established, and into it will be paid the proceeds of the social security contributions and all other moneys that may be appropriated by Parliament for the purpose...

The social security contributions will consist of: (a) registration fee; (b) a charge on salaries, wages, and other income. Every person of the age of 16 years or over will be required to pay. The registration fee will be five shillings a year, payable yearly, for all women and for all persons under the age of 20, and £1 ($3.90) a car in all other cases...

The direct charge to the wage earner under the Social Security Bill—including both superannuation and free medical service—will be at the rate of one shilling in the pound (about five cents in the dollar) on all salaries, wages and other income, to be supplemented on a pound for pound basis out of general government funds.

Actuaries have estimated the Social Security Bill will entail an expenditure of £17,850,000 ($69,615,000) annually, at the start, increasing to £25,000,000 ($97,500,000) annually in 30 years.

Farmers Opposed

Opposition to the Social Security scheme is expressed in an official statement issued by the New Zealand Farmers' Union, which says the proposals are in no sense superannuation, but are a very extended system of pensions...

The New Zealand branch of the British Medical Association also opposes the government's health insurance (free practitioner) scheme on the ground that the standard of practice would fall under such a scheme, the association considers the personal relationship between doctor and patient would be adversely affected...

WOMEN ARE READY FOR WAR POSTS

Recruiting for Auxiliary Service Proceeds in United Kingdom

By MOLLIE MCGEE

LONDON, Oct. 13: (CP)—Twenty-five thousand women in England were to have the opportunity of serving their country immediately if war came. Detailed plans for organization of a women's army, to be known as the Auxiliary Territorial Service, were formally announced by the government during the crisis.

Organization of the A.T.S. is continuing despite easing of the situation by the historic conference at Munich. The plans, which called for the amalgamation of existing organizations, have been worked out since the leaders of women's groups were called to the War Office some months ago.

As announced, this women's army is designed to free men in various non-combatant duties and most of the work follows the lines of that performed during the Great War by the auxiliary organizations known as "WAACS."

Recruiting is going forward for three branches in particular: motor driving, clerical work and general duties—which includes cooking, orderly duties and telephone switchboard work. Members of the A.T.S. will wear uniform on duty and a special badge when in civilian clothes.

All units—to be organized throughout the country—will be divided into two classes, one for general service, one for local work. Members of the first-class volunteer for work at home or abroad, the second class only to serve within reach of their own homes.

Age limit for the General Service volunteers is 18 to 45 years and for Local Service 18 to 50. Officers are required to enrol for an indefinite period and members for four years with option of re-enrolment.

To Drill Regularly

Companies of the A.T.S. will be employed for service with army units and Royal Air Force establishments. Certain special companies composed only of motor drivers or of clerical members will be formed. With these exceptions companies will consist of the requisite proportions of clerical and general duties personnel. During war time women territorials will receive pay. During peace time they will be paid for the time they spend attending ten obligatory drill periods a year.

Lord Strathcona, parliamentary under-secretary of state, will be a member of the Army Council responsible for control of the A.T.S. He will be assisted by the deputy director-general of the Territorial Army, representatives from the War Office, the air ministry and existing women's organizations.

Women (married or single) will be enrolled and not enlisted. All will be required to complete the enrolment form and the names and addresses of two references as to character, one of whom must be a woman, will be furnished by all applicants for enrolment. At present enrolment will be limited as far as possible to women who already are trained in the type of duty they are required to perform. Aliens are not eligible and any applicants whose applications show that either of the parents of the applicant was not at birth a British subject will be referred to the War Office. A certificate of health from a medical officer must be furnished. Ex-service women must produce their demobilization or discharge papers.

UNUSUAL PICTURE

"To the Victor," With Will Fyffe, is Story of a Scottish Shepherd And His Dog

An unusual and warmly appealing picture is "To the Victor," an outstanding British production, which opened last night before an appreciative audience in the Capitol Theatre and will be repeated this evening. Adapted from the story "Bob, Son of Battle," the film as its locale in Scotland and the leading characters are a Scottish shepherd and his dog.

Will Fyffe, who has a fine supporting cast, is excellent in the part of the inebricated, unpopular owner of the equally unpopular dog. While the Scottish dialect appeals to some, the acting is eloquent enough to relegate spoken words to the unimportance of a mere accompaniment, invoking the mood rather than interpreting it.

Although it is not a mere animal movie, "To the Victor" is a picture of particular interest to dog lovers. The dog taking part are magnificently intelligent. The herding contest is thrilling indeed.

"Love is a Headache" is the other end of the double bill program with "To the Victor." It is a chuckle-producing comedy concerning the dilemma of an actress who finds herself saddled with two orphaned children. Principals in the cast are Gladys George, Franchot Tone, Ted Healy, Ralph Morgan and Mickey Rooney.
