NAZI TROOPS OVERSEE AUSTRIAN REJOICING

After Chancellor Schuschnigg's cabinet was overthrown to meet conditions outlined in ultimatums from Germany, Austrian Nazis swarmed through streets of Vienna in an impromptu celebration. Police were unable to cope with massed crowds and traffic was halted as cheering, singing Nazis and sympathisers acclaimed "unlon" with Germany. This picture, made at the height of the demonstration, was flashed to London and transmitted to Canada by radiophoto.

Consolidating Germany's position in Austria these troops were flown from Germany to Aspern, five miles from Vienna. They are shown marching from the airport enroute to Vienna where they join other Nazi elements in enforcing Hitler's rule. Reports stated that 100 German troops were transported by aeroplane to Vienna, while thousands of others goose-stepped their way to the Austrian capital. The above picture was radioed from Vienna to London and transmitted to Canada.

BATTLESHIP WINS RACE

American Horse First in Grand National—Royal Danieli Second, Workman Third

AINTREE, Eng., March 25: (CP) — Mrs. Marion Scott's Battleship won the one hundredth running of the Grand National Steeplechase today. H. C. McAlley's Royal Danieli was second and Sir Alexander MacGuire's Workman third in a field of thirty-six.

Battleship, the fourth American-owned horse to win the Grand National, scored by a head in the closest finish in years. The first three horses came to the last fence almost on even terms but Workman dropped far back in the final test as Battleship and Royal Danieli staged a thrilling duel.

Arthur Sainsbury's Blue Shirt, the favorite, finished seventh. Rock Lad, owned by H. R. Bain of Toronto and the first Canadian horse ever to enter the Grand National, was so seriously injured that he had to be destroyed.

DISHWASHER DISAPPOINTED DETROIT, March 25:—A dishwasher in a Detroit restaurant held an Irish Hospitals sweepstake ticket on Blue Shirt, favorite in the Grand National today, and had visions of winning a $150,000 fortune. However, he had to be satisfied with mere starter's money when Blue Shirt failed to place.

Premier Chamberlain Still Hopeful Of International Police In World Some Day

His Speech on British Foreign Policy Does Not Further Complicate International Affairs—Some Comments From Abroad

LONDON, March 25: (CP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, in the course of his statement on British foreign policy to Parliament yesterday, expressed hope that the day would come when the nations of the world would merge their armies in an international police force the object of which would be to preserve peace. Meantime, he declared, Great Britain would have to maintain its armed strength for self-protection. He predicted that, by the end of the first five years of rearming, the cost would be more like $10,000,000,000 than the $7,500,000,000 which was originally contemplated.

The general view from the capitals of Europe is that the Prime Minister's speech did nothing to further complicate the troubled international situation.

Spanish government spokesmen at Barcelona said Mr. Chamberlain must be blind if he could not see that further Italian help was being extended to the insurgents.

One comment in Vienna was that it was "the most gracious possible acceptance of an unpleasant situation."

Rome was pleased with the "friendly tone."

Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour of France sided with Mr. Chamberlain in the most of his points but reiterated France's determination to go to the aid of Czechoslovakia in the event of German aggression.

Leaders of British Labor today assailed Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration on foreign policy and called for an immediate meeting of League of Nations nationals to consider "appeasement of Europe."

The government's continuance in office is a grave menace to the peace of Europe," said the Labor manifesto. The manifesto decried what it called Chamberlain's failure to disclose "constructive policy" to prevent war and demanded abandonment of the "farfetched" policy of non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

CLOSING HOSPITAL PROPOSED

QUEEN CHARLOTTE CITY, Mar. 25.—Recently the idea was disseminated that there was a move on foot to abolish the hospital at Queen Charlotte City. So the people wanted to know about it and held a meeting in the school house to discuss the question if there was one. There were representatives from as far up the coast as Tlell and south from Sandspit, over forty being in attendance. The meeting elected to the chair Rev. W. J. Seider while Miss Velma Fairbairn was nominated as secretary.

One might have thought that from so representative a gathering some debate would be sure to arise but, for some reason or other, all minds had but a single thought. It was pointed out that anyone who knew the conditions here on the Islands would never make the mistake of disturbing the present institution.

To vote to move the hospital from its present location is a vote for lunacy," declared B. F. Roberts. There was a letter from the village of Skidegate forwarded by the Council and a fully signed petition from the people at Sandspit indicating the solidarity of their support for the local hospital.

On motion of Messrs Hartie and Roberts the meeting went on record as being opposed to the discontinuance of any federal or provincial assistance that might make it impossible for the Skidegate Inlet Hospital to function.

A letter published not long ago in the Prince Rupert Daily News was read but the writer was not present at the meeting and, failing to find a supporter for the views expressed, nothing was done about it.

"Where there is smoke there is fire" declared one speaker, but nobody would tell where the fire was.

DAILY NEWS COMMENDED

Stand in Regard to Publication of Letters on Hospital Matters Approved by Eminent Authority

Writing in the annual reference number of "Canadian Hospital," official journal of the Canadian Hospital Council, Dr. Harvey Agnew, secretary of the Department of Hospital Service, Canadian Medical Association, and one of the outstanding authorities in Canada on hospital matters, commends a recent editorial in the Prince Rupert Daily News which was published in connection with the refusal to give publicity to a letter on local hospital matters the writer of which did not wish to sign for publication.

Dr. Agnew writes as follows: "The Daily News of Prince Rupert does not like anonymous letters on hospital matters. It has announced its intention to refuse to publish any letters on hospital matters which the writers are unwilling to sign personally or for which they seek to evade responsibility; nor does the Daily News intend to subscribe to any controversy which may prevent the obtaining of a new hospital for that community. The editor points out that the proper place for any person or organization interested in hospital affairs to present themselves and air their views in public is at the annual meeting of the Prince Rupert General Hospital Association.

Were more newspapers to adopt this policy, a great deal of the unwarranted criticism of hospitals in the press by disgruntled individuals would be eliminated."

Prince Rupert General Hospital Association

ISSUE OF $20,000.00
5% BONDS, DUE 1958

The Prince Rupert General Hospital Association has invited tenders for the erection of a complete and fully modern 50 bed hospital of concrete construction, to be erected on the site adjoining the present hospital. These tenders are to be in the hands of the Hospital authorities not later than April 9th next and it is expected the relative contract will be awarded soon thereafter.

The estimated cost of the building, as supplied by the Provincial Architect, will be $100,000.00 of which amount the Provincial Government has voluntarily contributed $50,000.00 on the understanding that the Hospital Association would provide the balance. For this purpose the Association has in hand $30,000.00 and in order to provide the balance of $20,000.00 a bond issue will be offered to the public.

The bonds will be of $100.00 denomination, payable in twenty years and bearing interest at the rate of 5 percent per annum, payable semi-annually, and will be subject to call for payment, in whole or in part, after a period of five years. As direct security the Association proposes placing twenty year endowment life insurance for the full amount of the issue.

In issuing these bonds in small denominations, the Association has in mind the fact that many residents of moderate means, both in the city and district, will be desirous of investing therein, and it is to these friends that the desired appeal is made in order that they might have a direct interest in their hospital.

Although the bonds may be purchased as an undoubtedly favourable investment, it is the sincere hope of the Association that all friends who feel financially able will make a direct contribution to the project.

Applications for the bonds may be made at the following places in Prince Rupert:

- The Secretary, Prince Rupert General Hospital.
- G. P. Finker & Co., Ltd.
- Mr. F. A. MacCallum, Bank of Montreal.
- Q & S Grocery.

It will be of interest to all and particularly to the investors to know that the new building, although of immediate 50 bed capacity, will be so constructed that upon an estimated further outlay, in due course, of $25,000.00 for fully completing the ground floor, an additional 25 beds would be made available, thereby providing a 75 bed building.

W. Whiffin sailed last night on the Prince Rupert for the south, accompanying Robert Whiffin, who is to enter Tranquille Sanitarium.

R. A. Creech, after spending a week or so in the city and district on business, sailed last night on the Prince Rupert for Alert Bay.

LIBERALISM ON PRAIRIE

How Former Premier Walter Scott Rose to Prominence in Politics

REGINA, March 25: (CP)—In the early days in Western Canada the population appeared overwhelmingly Conservative as regards political leanings. Until the fall of the Conservative government in 1896 no Liberal was ever elected in this territory for the Ottawa house. These were the conditions when Walter Scott, a strong Liberal, first appeared in the political arena. His transition from a printer to an editor was a natural one in those days and Mr. Scott frequently found himself writing the leading editorial and then setting the type himself. His vigorous and lucid editorials designated him as one of the natural leaders for Liberalism in the west and he soon appeared on the scene in this capacity by virtue of his victory over Mr. Davin in the West Assiniboia contest during the federal elections of 1900. It was a notable event in the political annals of the west and was hailed all over the Dominion as a great triumph for Liberalism.

First at Ottawa

From 1900 to 1905 Mr. Scott served in the federal house. He bore the brunt of the fight over the famous autonomy bill as a result of which the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta came into being in 1905. He also made a notable fight against the continuation of the exemption of the Canadian Pacific Railway from taxation on its lands within the provinces which had been given to it to aid the building of the railway. In this he was unsuccessful and so indignant was he at what he considered a grave injustice to the two young provinces that he tendered his resignation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Although at the request of Sir Wilfrid this remained in abeyance it was never withdrawn. Perhaps the chief service which Mr. Scott rendered at Ottawa was the drafting of the Manitoba Grain Act, for the text of which he was largely responsible. The provisions of this act for many years governed the shipment and inspection of western wheat and they have done much to give the prairie grain its present high standing in the markets of the world.

In 1905 Mr. Scott was unanimously tendered the leadership of the Liberal party in the province of Saskatchewan. In that year the first provincial election took place and the political warfare which developed was of a distinctly bitter character. He had a formidable opponent in Mr. Haultain who for a number of years had been premier of the Northwest Territories with a record of successful administration along non-partizan lines. Haultain was passionately opposed to the creation of separate schools in the new provinces by the autonomy acts and no doubt this was the reason that Sir Wilfrid passed him over and selected Mr. Scott for the premiership. Mr. Haultain, who afterwards received a knighthood and became Chief Justice of Saskatchewan, fought the campaign under the banner of Provincial Rights but the Liberal party, in receipt of substantial support from the Laurier government, triumphed at the polls and Mr. Scott was thus confirmed first premier of Saskatchewan.

With the assistance of a strong cabinet, Mr. Scott entered upon the prodigious task of guiding the destinies of Canada's fastest-growing province. He chose for his minister of agriculture W. R. Motherwell who later served in a similar capacity in the Dominion Parliament, while J. A. Calder was induced to leave his school inspectorate and become the first minister of education. In the following election no serious opposition was encountered. The election of 1913 was fought on the reciprocity issue and, despite the fact that the Laurier administration went down to defeat on this program, the Scott government was returned with an overwhelming majority.

The regime of the government under Mr. Scott's leadership was necessarily constructive. The whole legislative fabric had to be conceived and brought into being but the province was the pioneer in many developments and innovations necessary to meet conditions hitherto unknown. The solution of the problem of co-operative marketing of wheat may be cited as an example of Mr. Scott's foresight and caniness while the successful treatment of the university question is another example of his effectiveness.

While still less than fifty years of age Mr. Scott found it necessary to resign the premiership in 1916 owing to what appeared to be an irreparable breakdown of his health. After his retirement he took up residence in Victoria, but two years later he returned to Saskatchewan to take over the editorship of the Moose Jaw Times. Work in the editorial chair, however, proved too much for his strength and he found it advisable to recuperate at the coast.

The stork has been quite busy over on the Queen Charlotte Islands this winter. Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wes Singer of Massett on the arrival of a baby girl and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Olsen of Skidegate who also are the proud possessors of a fine young daughter born on March 17. Both children were born at the Skidegate Inlet Hospital.

The new wharf at Skidegate is fast approaching completion and will be finished in about two weeks. This will be a splendid addition to the landing facilities for all craft visiting Skidegate Inlet. The Victoria Pile Driving Co. has the contract with Murdock Matheison as foreman.

About 7:30 Tuesday morning distinct earthquake shocks were felt on the Queen Charlotte Islands. Houses trembled and furniture rattled. There was a loud rumble seemingly from a southerly direction several seconds before the tremor was felt. A severe storm followed the earthquake.

It is reported that the Haida Gold Mines Ltd. will shortly reopen its property on the Queen Charlotte Islands. At present the company is operating at Zeballos on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

The Haida native tribe of Skidegate sent a message of greeting and loyalty to King George VI on the occasion of his Coronation last May. Now the secretary of the Skidegate council has received from His Majesty a letter of acknowledgment which will be framed and hung in the Community Hall at Skidegate. The message to the King was conveyed by A. M. D. Fairbairn of Victoria who attended the Coronation. Mr. Fairbairn is an honorary chief of the Haida tribe. Speaking to the Prince Rupert Rotary Club yesterday, with President W. R. McAfee in the chair, H. F. Pullen gave a talk on "Why I Have a Garden," showing that, since earliest childhood, he had been more or less closely associated with gardens. He was born where there was a beautiful garden and where most of the neighbors had old-fashioned gardens. He traced this influence throughout the years to his recent efforts in Prince Rupert and then concluded his talk as follows:

"In Prince Rupert there is an opportunity to do things that cannot be done elsewhere. We have a climate different from most others and, if we take advantage of it and do not try to do just what they do in other places, we can make the city unique. We can get rid of the idea that this is a rainy city and make it the city of flowers which would be much more pleasant and more suitable. Let us remember that while our average rainfall here is less than 100 inches, at Zeballos, the new mining camp on Vancouver Island, the rainfall last year was 230 inches. But that will be nothing if they only have rich mines and for us 100 inches will be nothing if we make the city worth while. One way we can do that is by making it a city of gardens and flowers.

"Since I have told why I make a garden may I suggest a few reasons why others, brought up in different surroundings, might also interest themselves in gardening.

Job For Rotarians
"A member of a Rotary Club, I suggest, should be fired with the spirit of civic improvement and for that reason should cultivate a garden, possibly not doing the work himself but having it done by someone. If digging, planting and hoeing is drudgery, do not do it. Give pleasure to some one who needs the money and pay him to do it but order your own plants, study where they should go and see that you are boss of the garden all the time. Then you will become interested in it and possibly in time will feel the spring impulse to dig and sow and plant for yourself.

"For those who have neither civic loyalty or desire for beauty it is difficult to suggest a reason for growing flowers unless we dangle before them the financial urge. Flowers attract tourists and are of value to the city as a whole and, therefore, to the individual citizen. It seems rather sordid to have to show people that they will benefit financially if all cultivate gardens and yet it is an important aspect of the movement. Just think what publicity we should get if we had beautiful gardens in front of every home. Tourists would flock here from every state in the union to the south. They are already beginning to appreciate the little we have to show and they would come in larger and larger numbers and the steamship companies and the railway would realize what a tremendous asset it is for a city to be garden minded.

"Adam and Eve, it will be remembered, lived in a garden until they became sordid minded. Then they were turned out or, what is more likely, they left the cultivation of the garden for other pleasures and very soon there was no garden there. The cultivation of beauty has a spiritual significance. It may be the cultivation of beautiful sounds, which we call music; cultivation of the desire to make beautiful pictures on canvas as does the artist or cultivation of the soil and so planning the work that natural pictures are evolved. So far we have devoted more attention to music and painting than to making natural pictures in our gardens. Our efforts, even the best efforts, have been very crude. Very few of us cultivate artistic arrangement in our garden with a view to making beautiful pictures there. Most of us have not learned the art. I know I have not and I do not see it in the efforts of most of my neighbors. Most of us set out some plants which give rows of color and often we plant absolutely without plan or mental picture. Our souls have not yet become attuned to the beautiful so that like Mozart or the other musicians we can create. The real garden is the garden of myriads of pictures with, so far as possible, one picture of the whole, a beautiful picture made up of a number of minor pictures.

There is, I admit, another kind of gardening which is beautiful and beneficial. It is the gardening of the person who cares little for general effects but loves to develop individual flowers or plants without consideration of the setting. Possibly he likes to grow roses and all he cares about is growing the best roses he knows how, and possibly winning a prize with it at a flower show.

"There is also the person who, in this country of rather monotonous and heavy green foliage produces masses of color for the sake of contrast. That type too has its virtues and produces more or less beauty often by accident.

"The plea I am making today is for more gardens and better gardens and that you plan your gardens to produce symphonies of color and form, thereby lifting gardening from the work of the cloverhopper to become the product of the artist.

"The difficulty with many of us is that we do not take to gardening until too late in life. The result is that we have not given it sufficient study for the best results. We blunder along each year, getting a little enthusiastic in the spring and then allowing other subjects to engross our energies. Gardening is the oldest of hobbies and the one in which the least study is given. It is much more than a collection of plants and flowers and shrubs. I often wish I was about twenty years younger so that I might devote those years to perfecting a garden of my own under better conditions than those we have had the past few years.

Becoming Garden Conscious
"It has been a great pleasure to me to see the people of the city begin to get garden conscious. The old English idea seems to have been that the garden should be private and that it should not be contaminated by the gaze or the remarks of the hol polloi. Today the tendency is to share our gardens and thus add to our own pleasure. I do not mind people seeing me in my old clothes digging or weeding. I am always glad to answer questions about the flowers to the best of my ability. The flowers are my friends and I like to introduce them to my human friends.

"Why do flowers always grow for you?" an old lady was asked.

"Because I talk to them," was the answer.

"The garden is the place to go when you are sad for you will always find something there to cheer you. It is the place to go when you are happy so that your happiness may be even more complete. Once you make friends with your flowers you always find a hearty welcome in the garden and there is no one to argue or make unpleasant remarks.

"I like to visit my neighbors' gardens and see how they are progressing. Perchance I can offer a word of encouragement or a suggestion although I am usually very wary about suggestions. Most of my neighbors think they know more about gardening than I do and I feel sure what they think is correct. It is usually better for gardeners to discover mistakes for themselves. The great thing to induce improvement is encouragement and appreciation.

"I feel I know most of the people in town who take a great interest in gardens and we always have something in common. We are a great brotherhood. We are all different. Some of us are odd characters with odd dispositions but we can all enjoy each other's company and I always feel that, no matter how cranky a gardener may be, he probably would have been worse if he had no garden.

"The garden is the place to relax, to enjoy life, to talk with the gods, to whisper with the fairies, to get health and happiness, to meet our friends and to live."

Guests at the luncheon included Lorne Graham, member of the Vancouver Rotary Club, Dr. A. S. Lamb of Vancouver and Dr. J. T. Mandy.

REX BEACH TALE HERE

"The Barrier" is Feature Offering at Capitol Theatre This Week-End

"The Barrier," one of Rex Beach's most popular novels, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre here this week-end as a moving picture feature. The story, which has been widely read, is a romance between a West Point graduate on duty in Alaska and a young Alaskan girl who is believed to be half Indian. An absorbing photoplay lies in the way the two overcome the obstacle of mixed blood and work out their happiness together.

James Ellison and Jean Parker head the cast in what is essentially an outdoor picture. Other important members of the cast are Leo Carrillo, as a big French-Canadian trapper; Otto Kruger, as the villain of the piece; Robert Barratt, as a hunted man; Andy Clyde, as a prospector, and Sara Haden, as a squaw. The picture was photographed on the slopes of Mount Baker, Washington.

George V. Wilkinson returned to the city on last night's train from a brief trip to Terrace.
