LIFE IN DRY BONES

The dry bones of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce are gradually coming to life. The regular monthly dinner meeting last week indicated that some of the old fighting spirit of the chamber was returning. If this continues to develop it will become a really worth while institution once more.

If there are any local business or professional people who are not now members we suggest this would be a good time to see Secretary Brooksbank and put in an application. That would help continue the awakening period in the chamber and, before the beginning of next year. it would likely become a real live institution.

The Chamber of Commerce now has before it a city Frank Stevens: manager plan which, with some slight modifications, Encyclopaedia Britannica (13th might be a very good constitution under which the city Edition) (32 volumes); Encyclomight be administered.
