Issue Between Agreement Of War

MASSACHUSETTS AGAINST LOWER TARIFFS ON FISH

New England Fishermen Voice Opposition To Any Concession To Canada In Duties

WASHINGTON, D.C. April 8: (CP)—Declaring that any further reduction in tariff on fish from Canada would cripple their industry, representatives of the New England fisheries, yesterday, before the public hearing in connection with the proposed new trade agreement between Canada and the United States, used as one argument in favor of protection that the fishing fleet could be used as an important adjunct to coast defense in the event of war. The three hundred vessels of the fleet could be readily pressed into service, it was pointed out, as mine sweepers and for other purposes.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 8: (CP)—New England fishermen are in Washington to try to bone, skin and slice any attempt to cut the tariff on fish from Canada. Public hearings are now on in connection with the proposed new trade agreement with Canada, and for New Englanders the most important items to be considered for tariff reductions are various kinds of fish.

How much the tariff will be reduced on fish, if at all, will depend ultimately on administration officials in Washington. Canadian fishermen are asking for duty reductions on at least on halibut, salmon, mackerel, boneless cod and fillets.

A man prominent in the Boston industry claims that New England cannot stand any lower tariff rates. He predicted that any lower duty on boneless cod would put the city of Gloucester out of business.

The chief worry in the industry here is the fear of lower tariff on fillets. The present duty is 2½ cents per pound, and Canadians are said to want it reduced to 1½ cents. About 80 per cent of the fish marketed here is in fillet form.

The spokesman for the fish industry was asked whether business wasn't good enough locally to allow a tariff reduction.

"A tariff reduction on fillets would cripple the fishing industry in New England," he replied. "In 1937 we produced six per cent less than in 1936, and even at that we got 12 per cent less money."

He said that when the reciprocal trade treaty with Canada became effective two years ago, many New England fish concerns spent large sums of money in larger boats and better equipment confident that the tariff rate would remain at the same level. A reduction in the rate would force many of them to take their vessels out of commission, he said.

Invented Filleting
He traced the problem of competition with Canadian fishermen back to the days of salt fish.

"New England first produced salt fish," he said, "then Canada did likewise. To overcome the competition New Englanders then developed smoked fish for market and soon afterwards Canada was marketing smoked fish.

"In 1921 Yankees in New England invented the process known as filleting. In the first year 50,000 pounds of fillets were marketed, and in 1928 68,000,000 pounds were sold.

"Fish that are caught hundreds of miles off shore have no nationality. I don't gainsay the right of anyone to catch as many fish as he wants. But it must be remembered that Canada is 300 to 600 miles nearer the fishing grounds than New England is.

"The cost to Canadian fishermen to bring their catches into port, as compared with the cost to New Englanders, is about one to two cents a pound less for the raw material, which amounts to 2½ to 5 cents a pound for fillets since two and one-half pounds of fish are used to produce one pound of fillets.

IS GREAT POTENTIAL INDUSTRY

Prof. Recknagel Tolls of Importance of Pulp and Paper Possibilities to Prince Rupert District

Huge Resources Are Available

Peculiar Situation That They Should Not Have Been Already Put To Much Greater Use

In respect of tremendous potentialities for future pulp and paper production in British Columbia, there is no other section of the province that can compare with Vancouver and Prince Rupert forest districts.

declared Prof. A. B. Recknagel of Cornell University in a University of B. C. extension lecture here last night. "Those who are concerned with maintaining the productivity of the forests can and should welcome the pulp and paper industry, for it has a stability unknown to the lumber mill. Its mill towns are modern cities on a small scale and, best of all—it can and does use second growth timber—of which, in the case of West Coast hemlock, there is a superabundance. This, the best of pulpwoods grows rapidly, seeds abundantly and reproduces the forest on areas cut-over, requiring only that fire be kept out. It is the crowning gift of an opulent nature to the Pacific North West—yours and your children's children's heritage of posterity."

The available supplies of hemlock, most valuable wood for West Coast pulping, spruce and balsam, are chiefly located in the Vancouver and the Prince Rupert forest districts. Prof. Recknagel pointed out they are virtually untouched in the latter whereas those in the Vancouver district, though vast indeed, are somewhat depleted.

The present cut of hemlock in the Prince Rupert district is about one half of one percent of the available total whereas that in the Vancouver district is two and a half percent.

The three pulpwood species—hemlock, spruce and fir (balsam)—constitute 72 percent of all the accessible timber on the coast of the Prince Rupert district and especially is this true for hemlock and spruce on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Hemlock Most Valuable
The most valuable West Coast wood for pulping is the Western Hemlock—due to its suitability for highest grade bleached sulphite—the so-called "dissolving pulp" of which rayon is made. Prof. Recknagel informed his listeners. Next to hemlock is the balsam (or true fir) and then spruce. This order is not generally recognized, since spruce is still king of the pulpwoods in Eastern Canada and is so far superior to Eastern hemlock that few people realize the reversal of position of these two species in Western Canada.

Owing to the heavy cutting of Douglas fir, which incidentally is not well suited to making high-grade pulp, the Western hemlock leads in volume available in the province. It is estimated at 46,135 million board feet on the coast of which 22,695 million board feet are rated as accessible. When this vast reservoir is compared with the 1936 cut of hemlock pulpwood—namely, 266,225 cords which, at 700 board feet is equivalent to 186 million board feet, the cut of pulpwood is seen to be less than one percent of the available hemlock.

The spruce and balsam combined

WELL KNOWN WOMAN DIES

Mrs. E. Hellman of Ambrose Avenue Passes Away in Prince Rupert General Hospital

A well known and esteemed pioneer woman of Prince Rupert passed away yesterday afternoon at the Prince Rupert General Hospital in the person of Mrs. E. Hellman of Ambrose Avenue. She had been in poor health for some time but about a month ago took a definite turn for the worse and underwent an operation which proved ineffectual in saving her life.

Mrs. Hellman was a native of Sweden and fifty-nine years of age. She had resided here for almost thirty years. She was a member of the Valhalla Society and for many years was a prominent exhibitor of cookery products at the Prince Rupert Exhibition. She was also interested in gardening. The widower will have the sympathy of many friends in his bereavement. Funeral arrangements are in the hands of Hayner Bros., undertakers. Interment will take place tomorrow.

Foreign Secretary Has Made Peace Appeal To British Laborites

"Provocative Language" Only Makes It More Difficult To Come To Method Of Solving Differences With Other Countries

BRISTOL, England, April 8: (CP)—"Agreement or War." In these unmistakable words Viscount Halifax, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, enunciated the international affairs issue today as he urged the people of the United Kingdom to face the facts. He appealed to the Labor party to restrain "provocative language" against those responsible for the government of other countries. "They make agreement between our country and others more difficult," Halifax pleaded "and to that extent increase the risk of the only other method of solving differences—which is war."

HOME BUILDING

There seems to be a feeling in some quarters that the campaign for home building is a scheme of the city commissioner to get rid of vacant city lots and make them revenue bearing and that it is not something which should receive the support of the citizens.

While we have not discussed that aspect of the campaign with Mr. Alder and his opinion in regard to it does not matter in the least as he is there only to administer the affairs of the city to the best of his ability, it is up to the citizens whether they take advantage of the proposed home building offer or not.

What we would like to suggest to local people is that there never has been in the history of the city a proposal by which money could be secured at as low a rate as under this scheme. For people who would like to own a home and who have a moderate security of tenure of their positions, there is nothing like it. Years ago there was a local organization that loaned money at eight per cent and there was considerable demand for it. This proposal is for five per cent money.

The person who owns his own home becomes a real citizen with a new outlook on life. He can improve his place and feel that he is not only improving the city but increasing the value of the property. All he needs is the price of the lot and the prospect of being able to make the payments over a period of years. We suggest it is an opportunity not lightly to be set aside.

OUR FOREST HERITAGE

Just how long British Columbia timber will last it is impossible to calculate with any degree of certainty because there are so many factors to be considered, according to Professor Recknagel of Cornell University who has been visiting the city. He did not enumerate what those conditions were except to say that production of new timber was one of them. Possibly the professor might have suggested that fifty years from now people might all be building their houses with brick or cement or glass or iron or some material not yet discovered or developed. He also might have suggested that some process would be discovered to make wood last almost for ever. There might be a pestilence or a war that would wipe out the larger part of the population of the world with the result that timber for new homes will not be needed. There are so many possibilities. Some fertilizer may be discovered that will so hasten the growth of the forest that a full crop could be grown in twenty years instead of several hundred. All we can do is carry on, conserve what we have, improve our crop by reasonable means and leave the rest to the higher powers that control these things.

LEAFS EVEN PUCK COUNT

Wild Scoring Spurge in Third Period Feature of Five To One Victory

TORONTO, April 8:—A fully recovered and fierce fighting crew of Toronto Maple Leafs broke down the weakened defence of the Chicago Black Hawks to win the second game of the Stanley Cup world championship hockey playoffs last night by a score of 5 to one, thus evening up the count of the best three out of five game series at one win each. Fourteen thousand fans witnessed one of the most thrilling puck battles that has ever been staged in the Maple Leaf Gardens, the feature being a third period scoring spurge during which the Maple Leafs rapped in three goals within a minute and a half as they took advantage of openings left by the Black Hawks who abandoned their defences in the effort to put on power plays and even up a two to one count against them. It was a wild and woolly stick-slashing affair in which no less than twelve penalties were issued. It was a lucky player that did not suffer some sort of an injury, the most serious being Doc Romnes of the Black Hawks who sustained a broken nose.

The score was not a fair indication of the trend of play, the Hawks having their full share especially up to the middle of the third period before the Maple Leafs broke up the game.

Gordon Drillon opened the scoring in one minute forty-two seconds of the first period on a pass from Syl Apps. Earl Siebert evened up the count at eight minutes and thirty-one seconds. The first period ending in a one-all deadlock. Busher Jackson, on Bill Thoms' pass, put the Maple Leafs one up at the six minute eleven second mark in the second period. The deciding factor of the game was Apps' breakthrough in the third period as a result of which Drillon was able to score on the rebound at 9 minutes 4 seconds into a wide open net. Hamilton also got credit for an assist on this play. At 10 minutes 29 second, in another breakthrough, George Parsons scored on Pep Kelley's pass with Jimmy Fowler getting credit for making the play. Red Horne started the play which enabled Parsons to make the fifth counter

"The average difference, therefore, in the cost of producing fillets in the United States is about 4.6 cents a pound more than in Canada."

Few May Be Affected
These are the views that doubtless will be advanced in Washington.

In the following list of fish, which represent all those imported from Canada as well as their byproducts, the present rates of duty are indicated. All these types of fish may not come up for discussion, and only a few, if any, may be affected by a new tariff scale.

Where the rate is one which has been reduced as a result of a previous trade agreement by 50 per cent (the maximum permitted in the Trade Agreement Act) it is indicated by the symbol B; likewise, items which have been found free of duty are indicated by the symbol B.

The Present Rates
Herring Oil—5c per gallon plus 3c lb. import excise tax under the Revenue Act of 1932, as amended.

Syl Apps and George Parsons of Toronto and Alex Levinsky of Chicago were the stars of the game. Rookie Paul Goodman was in goal for the Black Hawks. It was his first major league game and was a real "baptism of fire." He received much commendation for a fine showing and the general opinion was that he never had a chance to prevent at least three of the five goals that were scored.

The series will be resumed at Chicago Sunday night.

R. E. Benson has been appointed city representative on the board of directors of the Prince Rupert General Hospital, it was announced this morning by City Commissioner W. J. Alder. The board will be in regular monthly session tonight.

Tenders for the new hospital building are to close tomorrow and it is expected there will be a special meeting of the board to open and consider them. At least one local contracting concern and a number of Vancouver companies are tendering, it is understood. The sale of bonds to finance the construction of the new hospital is reported to be meeting with quite favorable response.

Sees Possibilities Of Local Industry Being Established

Professor Recknagel Urges Efforts to Bring Matter to a Head Soon As Financial Conditions Change

The possible future industrial development of Prince Rupert was discussed at the regularly weekly luncheon of the Prince Rupert Rotary Club yesterday by Professor A. B. Recknagel of Cornell University. There were so many visitors that President McAfee omitted the formality of individual introductions except in the case of President J. C. Gilker of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and R.C. St. Clair, district forester. Paul Armour who had been away as a result of illness, was welcomed back.

In the course of his address Professor Recknagel urged that there be a co-operative effort to capitalize the forest possibilities and at the close he read from a Vancouver newspaper an editorial article which indicated that the new minister of industries, Hon. W. J. Assestine, would be taking steps to see that these were developed.

are estimated at 27,529 million board feet on the coast of which 14,601 million board feet are rated as accessible. With a cut of 173,171 cords of spruce and balsam pulpwood in 1936, equivalent to 121 million board feet, the drain of these species is again less than one percent of the available supply.

In Vancouver district there was an available total of 23,091 million feet of pulpwood of which 5,601 million feet was Western hemlock. In Prince Rupert district there was 16,548 million feet of pulp timber available of which 7,708 million feet was Western hemlock. On the Queen Charlotte Islands there was an accessible stand of 9,254 million feet of merchantable timber of which hemlock and spruce constituted 7,173 million feet—3,888 hemlock and 3,285 spruce.

Why Not B.C.?

"The development of the pulp and paper industry in the Pacific North-West is of comparatively recent date but it has been swift and almost overwhelming in its scope and complexity," said Prof. Recknagel. "The Puget Sound section of the states of Oregon and Washington is the centre of the industry. A glance at the statistics of the pulp and paper mills in these States shows an almost mushroom-like growth. But this growth, this expansion, has not extended north of the International Boundary. H. R. MacMillan pointed out in a recent statement: 'Over the last five years Washington and Oregon have produced annually 150 thousand tons of pulp at a cost of 10 millions while British Columbia, with ample timber resources the cheapest in the world produced only 13,000 tons at a cost of about one million.'

Prof. Recknagel added without comment a statement of Mr. MacMillan that "our debt and continuing deficit has set up a red light against the pulp and paper industry" of British Columbia. The speaker referred to the recent opening of a new pulp and paper mill at Bellingham, bringing great prosperity to that city through expenditure of millions of dollars and establishment of a large payroll. What a difference such a thing would make to Prince Rupert!

Mills manufacturing pulp and paper in British Columbia, continued the speaker, were few in number and, with two notable exceptions, none too modern. He proceeded to enumerate the present mills in the province—Pacific

Mills at Ocean Falls, making groundwood, unbleached sulphite and unbleached sulphate from which newsprint, wrapping papers and toilet, towel and napkin papers were manufactured; Powell River Co. at Powell River, making groundwood and unbleached sulphite for newsprint paper; Sidney Roofing & Paper Co. at Victoria, making groundwood and manufacturing paper boards, felt building roofing paper and miscellaneous products; the B. C. Pulp & Paper Co.'s modern and high-grade pulp plants (only) at Port Alice and Woodfibre making bleached and unbleached sulphite or "dissolving pulp" for rayon, and the Westminster Paper Co., a converter paper mill only at Westminister. This was not much of a showing compared with the neighbors to the south, especially in view of the extraordinary wealth of timber and other natural advantages for the manufacture of pulp and paper. In addition to the actually operating plants Prof. Recknagel mentioned the Port Mellon plant, not now in operation, and the rumored new mills at Nootka on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, the rumored new mill of Crown-Williamette on the east coast of Vancouver Island and near the north end, and the "pulp and paper mill to be located at Prince Rupert itself, presumably financed by British capital "but which is far from being an accomplished fact."

The average cost of pulpwood in British Columbia, said Prof. Recknagel, was $6.42 per cord as against $6.85 in all Canada.

In 1936 B. C. mills produced 318,153 tons of paper—85 percent of which was newsprint—and 388,268 tons of pulp—a total of 706,421 tons of pulp and paper of about 10 percent of the total Dominion output. Despite this, pulp and paper was second in gross value of output among the manufacturing industries in British Columbia—exporting chiefly to the Orient, a market which had now disappeared owing to the Sino-Japanese war; Austria and the United States, 56 percent of the total production, or 397,388 tons.

Serious Competitor

A question period followed Prof. Recknagel's address, a number of queries being made of the speaker. One of these concerned the fast-growing slash pine of the south-eastern states which, due to a new process of treatment, the professor predicted would become a serious competitor to British Columbia pulpwood.

SMITHERS SUPPLYING NEW STUFF

Young Radishes and Onions Arrived Last Night From Interior Points

The first shipment of new radishes and young onions arrived this morning from Smithers district where they were raised under glass by Arthur Evitt, brother of C. V. Evitt of this city. They are extra large and fresh and price is moderate.

Mr. Evitt has been raising flowers and vegetables under glass at Smithers for some years but this is the first season he has had enough for export. It is understood that shipments will be made regularly as long as they last and that these will be followed by cucumbers, lettuce, tomatoes and other products.

The quality of this first shipment seems to be excellent and doubtless there will be a good demand if the supply can be maintained.

view of the interest of the subject, drew an attendance which was considered disappointing. J. C. Gilker, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, under auspices of which the lectures were held proposed a vote of thanks to Prof. Recknagel, Dr. Joseph T. Mandy proposed a vote of thanks to the Junior Chamber of Commerce for having sponsored the lectures.

Ministerial Work On Prairies Was Subject Of Talk

Rev. Roy Durnford of St. Peter's Church, Seal Cove, was the guest speaker before a well attended Anglican Young People's Association meeting in St. Andrew's Cathedral Hall Wednesday evening. President Robert Yerburgh opened the meeting and introduced the speaker who related many interesting experiences of his work in Northern Saskatchewan and the Peace River country, painting a vivid picture of the life in these areas.

A business session followed in which plans were discussed for the annual service in the Cathedral, May 8 being the date decided upon. A motion was passed to the effect that the present year be brought to a close with a banquet and dance as had been done previously. Miss Joan Cross and Miss Noreen Gibson were appointed convenors for the affair.

Refreshments were served by the committee for the month with Miss Det. Sherman in charge while folk dancing was enjoyed by some of the members.

Next Wednesday there will be no regular meeting. Instead the group will attend the Lenten Service in the Cathedral.
