SATIRE AND DERISION

Returning once more to the book "Insanity Fair" by Douglas Reed, news correspondent in Europe, reference to which was made yesterday, Mr. Reed, who speaks German well, listened in to the speech of Herr Hitler at the time of the rape of Austria in which he repeatedly poured derision and contempt on England. Mr. Reed, who was in FURNITURE for sale-Fine solid Vienna at the time, says:

"I smiled ruefully and wondered whether this speech would at last open England's eyes. True, it needed to be heard, the bitter satire, the volleys of laughter, cold prin could never convey the full effect. He derided the wellfed incompetency of England, English cant about the moralizing about the wickedness of war, when England had obtained her empire by war and grab. He lavished contempt on people who thought that Germany's good behaviour or Germany's renunciation of her aims could be bought by credits, on people who thought of enticing Germany back into the League and, particularly, on people who thought they could get him to the conference table What he said was absolutely candid and, from his angle, right. He was kicking the 'conciliate Germany' group in I noland in the pants as hard as he could, over and over again."

"Irvardly I prayed, let them hear this in England. and let it bring them to their senses! But inwardly I knew that England would neither hear nor understand. That evening the radio announced that Hitler had made a friendly gesture to England."

HAPPIER MOOD

Douglas Reed, in a happier mood, is interesting and we close with that because, while he speaks of England, he might just as well be speaking of Canada except for what he says about the press.

"But it was refreshing to be in England. Except in' Parliament and the daily press, which were being progressively muzzled, there was still much freedom of thought and speech and that is a thing beyond price. You have to live in a dictatorship country to know how your brain shrivels up in course of time from disuse, from keeping your tongue and your thoughts constantly in check. When you come to England and go to lunch with two or three cronies who freely but undogmatically air their views about this and that, without fear or favor, you actu-

Robert Louis Stevenson said, "No woman should marry a man who does not smoke. Whatever keeps a man in his front garden, whatever checks wandering fancy and all inordinate ambition, whatever makes for lounging and content, makes just as surely for domestic happiness."

And Sam Slick came out flat-footed, "It (a pipe) has made more good men, good husbands, kind masters, indulgent fathers and honest fellers, than any other blessed thing on this universal world". Lord Lytton adds, "He who doth not smoke hath either known no great griefs, or refuseth himself the softest consolation next to that which comes from heaven."

So we in the tobacco business are proud to make and sell a product which contributes so much to human happiness - and to play our part in an industry which has become a vital unit in the commercial and industrial economy of the Dominion.
