Home Town Audience Overcrowds Hall To Hear Premier Pattullo

Discusses Intergovernmental Relations and Alaska Highway—In Favor of Highway Work on Large Scale—Reviews Government Work

Premier T. D. Pattullo addressed a home town audience here Monday night that was of such substantial proportions that quite a number were unable to obtain admission to the hall. As it was some five hundred or more without a single disturbance. Mr. Pattullo dealt principally with Dominion-provincial relations and the Alaska highway. He also touched on public works generally and referred to the policies, efforts and accomplishments of the various departments of his government.

Speaking of public works, which he said he was still endeavouring to have the federal government approach on a large, general scale, Mr. Pattullo said that he could not say what work might be carried on this year in any particular riding. Until proper arrangements could be made with the Dominion government, however, he gave assurance that the program will go as far as I can make it go.

We are asking the Dominion government to join us in construction of main highways on a scale whereby the annual frittering away of little appropriations will be done with and, instead of waiting for years, we will be able to map out a program of two or three years and get done with the job.

The Premier said in passing, however, that he was not unmindful of the difficulties with which the Dominion was faced and it was his desire to be fair.

He advocated that, in dealings between provincial and federal governments for better terms, there be a maximum of mutual goodwill and a minimum of acrimony. This would be important in conferences between the Dominion and provinces which would follow the recommendations of the Rowell commission. There should be a spirit of give and take.

Mr. Pattullo reiterated previous statements of belief that the province of British Columbia was not receiving its just due in relation to the Dominion and stated that he would continue to press for a fair and more generous measure of treatment from Ottawa.

The Premier referred to the necessity of public credit being maintained and governments functioning within their jurisdictions.

"Our government," said Mr. Pattullo "has been moving in every line of endeavour along a liberal, not a political, liberal course. We have aimed and are aiming to pursue a middle course and work to the advantage of the majority of the people.

Due to the complexities of social and ever changing conditions, governments are bound to interfere in business. I believe in individual development and initiative in keeping with the requirements of the state as a whole."

Public Service
Speaking of public service, Mr. Pattullo referred to the oft-derided term of politician. Personally, he said he would rather have in government a man who had served on a school board or some public body rather than an experienced business man. The one had the outlook of the public needs and the governmental idea. The other had only his personal viewpoint through working for himself. "And," he said, "the politician is just as honest as the business man—possibly more

Italy Criticized And Defended In British Parliament

LONDON, Feb. 28:— Answering criticisms that the Italians were not "playing the game" by increasing their garrisons in Libya, a government spokesman yesterday stated that Italy was quite within her treaty rights. She had stated, that the garrison increase was for defence purposes only.

Successful in having them almost doubled. He had been criticized for "gallivanting off to Ottawa." No one was more sick than himself of travelling to Ottawa to be called a mendicant by the Easterners but "since 1934 we have received $3,750,000 in additional revenue so I think you must admit, if for no other accomplishment, the trips have been worthwhile."

Mr. Pattullo repeated previous statements of belief that the income (Continued on Page Four)

Differences Over Palestine Are Still Continuing

LONDON, Feb. 28:— Malcolm MacDonald, secretary of state for the colonies, speaking in the House of Commons yesterday in connection with the discussions taking place looking to a settlement of the differences between Arabs and Jews in Egypt, said that a series of suggestions were still being discussed. He asked the people of the country to withhold judgment in regard to British policies until the conference was over. There had been misrepresentations which had done a great deal of harm. A number of clashes took place in Palestine yesterday resulting in a number of deaths on either side. Until some settlement was arrived at the British policy in that country could not be changed.

A similar inquiry concerns Japanese control, through dummy corporations, of mines at Sydney Inlet, Louise Island and Ikeda Bay.

CHANCE TO WIN TRIP

Exceptional Opportunity For Local High School Chances to Pay Visit to Vancouver

An exceptional opportunity has presented itself for local High School pupils to go to Vancouver this year not only at the time of the visit of the King and Queen but for a stay of nine days altogether in the southern city when they would have the opportunity to attend schools of Vancouver and participate in other special activities to be held at that time. The invitation has been extended by the board of school trustees of the City of Vancouver and is contained in a communication received from H. N. McCorkindale, superintendent of schools of Vancouver.

The students would be chosen from Grades 9, 10, 11 and 12 and two from each of the Junior High and Senior High Schools are invited. The time of the visit would be from May 21 to 29.

Fares of the selected students would be paid from this end and Vancouver would look after all expenses while the pupils are there. They would be guests of boys and girls attending High Schools of Vancouver.

"If at all possible," says Mr. McCorkindale's communication, "we would like this to be a reward for the best students attending your schools. We know the students you send will be those who will benefit most from this experience and, at the same time, would be able to give a good account of their observations while with us."

The program in Vancouver would include an Empire Rally on May 21, annual sports day on May 23, observance of Victoria Day holiday on May 24, the visit of the King and Queen on May 29. Attendance at schools would be in the same grades as at home.

It is selected that boys and girls be equally divided in the selections.

REFUGEES AND INDUSTRIES

Sir Samuel Hoare recently told the House of Commons in London that 11,000 German refugees who settled in Great Britain were already employing 15,000 British workmen in new trades. This is somewhat along the line of the migration of Flemish refugees to England when they took with them the arts of weaving which kept the country to the fore industrially for many years. At a later date England learned to make silk, lace, linen, glass and other materials from French Huguenots who came to the country because they were persecuted in France. When the Jews were banished from Austria in 1871 many of them went to Germany where they were welcomed at that time. Now they are being turned out.

This is not to advocate the opening of Canada to a large number of refugees. Yet it is possible that a limited number may be admitted, particularly men who are able to introduce new industries to the country or who are willing to take up wild land and convert it into farms. It would not be proper to bring in numbers of men who would flood the labor market and possibly replace men now employed. That would only add to our troubles and be unfair to the present unemployed.

COMPLETE CRAWL DOWN

The Japanese have crawled down completely on the little bombing expedition they made a week ago at Kowloon in the mainland section of the crown colony of Hong Kong. Not only did the authorities at Tokio apologize but also the Japanese at Canton and they have promised to pay the damages which are assessed against them by the British. This satisfies the British but the incident tends to make the British less likely to take further incidents of that kind as calmly as they did this one.

RECOGNITION OF FRANCO

The formal recognition of General Franco by Britain as the ruler of Spain changes those fighting in opposition to him into rebels. No longer can we speak of the republicans as the government.

The recognition will be received by the people of the Empire with mixed feelings. It was inevitable. The former government forces put up a good fight and many of them will be martyrs to a lost cause.

The result of the Spanish civil war may be looked upon as a warning against trying to bring about reforms too rapidly. When the opposition becomes exasperated they are apt to try drastic measures.

Public sympathy seems to have been very generally against Franco. Here in Prince Rupert the Francoites had a very considerable sympathetic support but the majority were against him. It is to be hoped that fighting will end now.

WAS SUPER-SALESMAN

Frank P. Jones Had Personality of Statesman, It Was Often Said

MONTREAL, Feb. 28: (CP)—It was often said of Frank P. Jones, former president of the Beauharnois Power Co., who is dead here, that, if he had not been a salesman, he would have made a statesman. He had what E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, once said would make even a man of mediocre talents a success in business—personality. Mr. Jones was, however, not an ordinary salesman. Back of his talks with buyers was a deep and profound knowledge of what he was handling, whether it was iron or steel goods, cement, or a power company's franchise. In short he was a super-salesman.

Jones was born on a farm near Brockville, Ont., in 1869. He was sent to the public schools in Brockville and afterwards to the Royal Military College at Kingston. At 18, he was to be found shovelling coal in a factory at Gananoque for five dollars a week. Then he tried selling insurance. His next step was one of real progress because he started to work for the Canadian General Electric Company. He learned that selling things, not making them, was going to bring him money. Through his job with the General Electric he came to know a traveler for the Nova Scotia Steel Company, who recommended him for a job. He was appointed Quebec and Ontario representative of the company. That was in the 'nineties and before the days of fixed and published rates on the railways. Mr. Jones generally found when he could not sell to a man freights had a lot to do with it and he made a number of reports to his principals exposing the discriminatory rates existing. The data Mr. Jones collected was used by Thomas Gantley, at that time general manager of Jones' company, to force better rates from the railways. Mr. Jones next turned his attention to tariffs and he was one of the first to demand the abolition of rebates. Mr. Jones next joined the Dominion Iron and Steel Company as a traveler and in 1903, when only 32, he became its general sales agent. He rapidly passed through the position of assistant to the president and on to that of general manager. He changed in five years an annual deficit of $500,000 to a profit of $2,500,000.

Two major developments in Mr. Jones' career came almost together. He was called on to personally handle the case of his company against the corporation which supplied it with coal. He had done this at the suggestion of Premier George Murray of Nova Scotia, though completely unacquainted with the ways of courts. He did know the steel industry, however, and his succinct statement of his company's claims won their case. While travelling back to Montreal in connection with the litigation one day, he fell in with another aggressive young man, Max Aitken, though neither knew one another. After a conversation Aitken, who ultimately was to leave Canada for England where he was to become Lord Beaverbrook, found out who his companion had been. Six years later Mr. Jones was offered the management of the Canada Cement Company, a merger Aitken had created. Mr. Jones accepted and took charge of the combine which consisted of a number of mills acquired for a total of $14,000,000. Seventeen years later Mr. Jones disposed of the merger for $51,000,000. He should have got more, but as he himself said: "I overlooked the intangible assets, the organization I had built up." However, Mr. Jones had made himself one of the richest men in Canada by the deal and at the time his fortune was estimated at between twenty and thirty million dollars.

Mr. Jones came again into the eyes of the financial public by his association with the Beauharnois Power Company, capitalized at $100,000,000. He was its first president and piloted necessary measures through the legislature at Quebec and parliament at Ottawa. Mr. Jones sold out his holdings to the Sweeney interests and received $780,000. He had put into Beauharnois only $190,000.

Mr. Jones married the daughter of S. A. Stephens of Brockville and resided in Montreal.

PURGE OF WORLD ON

"The anti-Christian movements taking place in the world today are no accidental outbreaks limited to temperamental peoples," declared Rev. E. E. Brandt before his congregation at First Baptist church, Mr. Brandt felt, had too churches, Mr. Brandt, felt, had too long compromised with the world, the flesh and the devil. A most complex civilization which had grown up in this day denied the Christian concept of God and the worth of man. While this was going on the churches had stood to one side and had not concerned themselves with the issues when human welfare was at stake. In some lands an atheistic social philosophy had gained the ascendancy and was daily increasing its hold throughout the world. In other places was to be found a neopaganism that proclaimed the absolute state and made men only an incidental of the state in flourishing. Undoubtedly, these were evidences of judgment upon the Christian world. Like the Hebrews of old who were once God's instrument but had been discarded because of disobedience the churches today were being judged by pagan forces.

QUESTION OF COURTESY
Editor, Daily News:
After attending last night's meeting, addressed by the Honorable T. D. Pattullo and noticing the half-hearted, lukewarm patriotism shown by our citizens, we were, to say the least, disgusted. A number got up noisily and left the hall before the singing of our National Anthem. Some of those who did stay did not think enough of their King and country to express themselves or stand at attention. I had heard and read, time and again, that our modern youths are not as nationally minded as they used to be and that we regard patriotism as old-fashioned. We would not say the youths of today are extremely nationalistic but we do bear a love for our country and an honor for our King which we are not ashamed to stand up and express.

We were two of the youths present and we were, not without reason, disgusted with the example set us by our elders.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable time and space,

How MANY ANGELS?

Scholars in the Middle Ages argued for centuries over how many angels could dance on the point of a needle. It was a useless question . . . but how many Canadians are supported on tobacco leaves? That is an intensely practical question.

Imagine, if you can, a convention of all the people in this country, and their dependents, who are supported by the tobacco industry . . . All the farmers and their help . . . All who work in processing plants where the tobacco is aged and mellowed . . . All the men and women who work in tobacco factories . . . All the wholesalers with their salesmen and office staffs . . . All the store keepers with their clerks . . .

Why, such a convention would need a hall big enough to seat over 300,000 people! As many people as live in Vancouver; twice as many as in Quebec City . . .

HOME TOWN AUDIENCE OVERCROWDS HALL

tax field had never belonged to the federal government. "Had we had the income tax field to ourselves we would never have had to borrow a cent for unemployment relief. We would have been able to pay our way all along," the Premier declared. Efforts to obtain authorization through British North America Act amendment for the province to collect sales tax would be continued. "There should be some tribunal," said the Premier "to which a province can turn when it feels itself in a position of inequality instead of having to struggle along for years and years with no relief and, at the same time, be called mendicant. Had it not been for our tremendous resources, British Columbia could not have been able to stand up," said Mr. Pattullo. "However, we must have a readjustment and we are going to stay with it."

Alaska Highway
Turning to the Alaska Highway, Mr. Pattullo said conditions had changed since ten years ago when he had considered the project premature. "When that work is undertaken, and I believe it will be within a reasonable date, I wish to make it clear that it will not interfere with any other road in the province but will be entirely additional."

"When a friendly neighbor wants to build such a road, I believe we ought to do all we can to help, particularly when it will present tremendous opportunities for the opening up of new areas and the development of enormous resources," said Mr. Pattullo who referred to the almost limitless mining possibilities, increase of tourist traffic etc. The fact that it might have military implications should make no difference. United States and Canada, in any major conflict, would always be side by side.

Speaking of the route, Mr. Pattullo said: "I favor a route as far west as possible, Hazelton if it is feasible, and north from there. I know that the American authorities would also like to have it as far west as possible with a view to connecting up with the communities of the Alaska Panhandle." There was talk, however, of possible difficulty in the way of heavy snowfall, high grades, and difficult passes. Further to the interior the Rocky Mountain trench was said to have less snowfall and lower mountains. There was considerable difference of opinion. "Engineers, in my opinion, should make the decision as to which is the most feasible route."

As for financing, Mr. Pattullo told how United States had offered to lend British Columbia the money with no interest. This would, however, imply no American control of the road.

Ottawa was not committed to the Alaska Highway as yet, Mr. Pattullo said, but it had appointed a commission which would confer at an early date in Victoria with a similar American commission. "I intend to pursue it to a conclusion," the Premier promised. The project, he added, would probably furnish five years' employment for 2000 men.

Mr. Pattullo also referred to the necessity of a highway into the Peace River. He told of the government program of exploration for oil there. "If we could get oil there we would not have to worry any more about the Pacific Great Eastern or highways."

What Government Is Doing
Concluding with a brief summary of what the various departments of his government were doing, Mr. Pattullo referred to the successful honor system of handling wayward boys, the efforts to help agricultural producers and give them a fair return, simplifying and improving of the educational curriculum and adjustment of education taxes, the fight against venereal disease and the promotion of health generally, regulation of hours of work and rates of pay, the pursuit of public works as far as resources would permit, the handling of unemployment in a manner which he believed compared favorably with any other province and the inauguration of recreation and physical education facilities. Withal, the government had not increased taxes but, to a small degree, had reduced them.

His government, Mr. Pattullo felt, had helped to make higher the standard of living, notwithstanding the fact that poverty was still to be seen in the face of plenty, a condition which he believed should not exist. "Things have been made for us all to enjoy and I believe those things should be available to all."

The meeting was presided over by W. O. Fulton who referred to it more as a "reception" than a mere "political meeting." He alluded to the position of difficulty occupied by a cabinet minister, and particularly a Premier, in having to deal with larger provincial matters in addition to local affairs. The fact that Mr. Pattullo had been continuously in the Legislature since 1916 for this seat was tribute to his worth. Mr. Pattullo later observed that the people of Prince Rupert alone had made it possible to sit as member for that long time and he was as appreciative as ever of the confidence.
